Inspired by their 1968 theme "Link's' Innovation in an Era of Dynamic Dimensions" delegates from the National Links, Inc. held a week-long conference in Berkeley, Calif., June 25 through July 1.

Among speakers who addressed the group were Dr. Whitney Young, executive director of the National Urban League; the Hon. Yvonne W. Brathwaite, assemblywoman of the California Legislature; and Dr. John W. Davis, executive director of the Education and Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP.

A Freedom Luncheon commemorated the effective culmination of one of the Links' major projects — a gift of $75,000 to the Educational and Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP — and recognition was made of a financial gift to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library.

NATIONAL LINKS, INC., was founded by Margaret Hawkins and Sarah P. Scott in 1946 in Philadelphia, Pa. More than 100 chapters in 39 states are now dedicated to the group's three fold program of service to youth, delineation of urban and rural trends and a vital interest in international trends.

The organization has four national presidents: Sarah P. Scott, Philadelphia, Pa.; Margaret Hawkins, Pauline W. Weeden, Lynchburg, Va.; and Vivian J. Beamon.

President Beamon was in charge of the Berkeley assembly.

Assisting her in addition to the other national presidents were Dr. Anna Julian of Chicago, vice president; Mrs. Ruth McCants, Wilberforce, Ohio, financial secretary; Mrs. Minnie Gaston, Birmingham, Ala., treasurer and Mrs. Josephine Smith, Los Angeles, Calif., recording secretary.

In addition, Mrs. Maude Reid, Miami, Fla., Southern Area director; Mrs. Christine Meade, Seattle, Wash., Western Area director; and Mrs. Evelyn Harper, Topeka, Kan., Central Area director.

Also assisting were: Mrs. Bessie Hill, Newark N. J., director of National and International Trends and Services; Mrs. Margaret Hough, Cincinnati, Ohio, director of Freedom through the Arts; Mrs. Susie Verdell, Petersburg, Va., executive secretary and Judge Marjorie Lawson, Washington, D.C., general counsel.

Scouts cooked on open fire at week-end Camporee here

By RALPH HORTON

The fourth annual Inner-City Camporee, sponsored by Boy Scout Troop No. 259, of Lexington-Poe Homes broke camp Sunday afternoon after two days deep in the heart of the city.

In addition to the standard program Scouts usually carry out in woodlands and among hills, streams and trees, they prepared meals over open fires, this time on cement instead of the floor of the forest.

According to Ernest Lindsay of Troop 298, each Scout purchased his own food, mostly canned, and prepared his own meals.

And, of course, there was the old favorite, baked beans, which always tastes good under the open sky, in town or on the outskirts.

* * *

CAMP OPENED Saturday at 8 a.m. in the housing project courtyard. The first duty the precise ritual of raising the tents, was performed by Scouts and scoutmasters in preparation for the day's activities.

The host troop, No.259 of Lexington-Poe, scheduled the events which included various races, three-legged, potato sack, wheelbarrow and relay as well as a tent pitching contest.

Andrew (Boots) Johnson, director of the Inner-City Campaign program, states that the over-night annual Camporee in town is only one of the many interesting Scout activities slated for this summer.

James Brockington of Troop No. 259 was director of the campsite. Oscar Jenkins, also of Troop 259, was the Camporee chief.

Other participating troops from the inner city area are Provident Baptist Church No. 298; Emon Baptist Church 279; Spirit and Truth Church in Christ No. 116.
