Ford awards $857,000 grant to JHU

The Ford Foundation recently announced the awarding of a $857,000 grant to the Johns Hopkins University department of geography and environmental engineering.

According to Dr. John Geyer, professor of environmental engineering science and geography and department chairman, "The grant will be used principally to support staff and students in the study of the social processes and attributes of man's relationship with his environment."

In its approach to environmental problems, the department will emphasize four interrelated areas of teaching and research:

The natural sciences as they relate to landscape processes, vegetation, and soils;

Biological aspects of fresh water and estuarine environment;

SYSTEMATIC ENGINEERING approaches to management and control of wastes and the environment;

And the social and economic evaluation of public and private interests, including policy decisions concerned with the environment.

In addition to graduate research and teaching in these areas, the department will offer a number of undergraduate courses designed to introduce students both to environmental problems and to the scientific, engineering, human and social thinking involved in approaching their solution, Dr. Geyer said.

—Poor people rift?

volunteer marshers began to arrive in the District by noon Saturday.

THE POOR People's Headquarters at 14th and U was again congested with new faces — persons who vowed they were in Washington to support the campaign but not to go to jail.

The new poor marchers are militants rather than non-violent.

"I am not prepared to go to jail because it appears that non-violence is not doing anything. I think we may have to try something else," remarked a man who stated he led some 200 whites from Virginia to support the campaign.

There is some serious talk that there may be an immediate change in the overall leadership within SCLC in the very near future.

"The clergyman won't go to jail because they know it won't do no good. We do not need them either. What we need is some good leadership — and boy we've got to make the Congress act before our time is up," remarked an angry looking man at SCLC headquarters.

A group of some 30 white teenagers who drove in from Virginia late Saturday afternoon said they came in because they knew the time is running out for the non-violent preachers.

The leader of the group who refused to identify himself remarked:

"We have to do our bit before summer is in full swing. You know what I mean — America will have it this summer from the Militant Ones."

day to what is generally conceded as one of the hot spot jobs in the nation.

He chose one of the city's hottest days (99 degrees) so far this summer to begin his new and what is considered his most difficult task.

Key question at the moment is whether he will choose as the racial imbalance in city schools dictates, a colored administrator as his top aide?

Interesting citizens are hopeful that he does, according to such expressions to the AFRO since the Sheldon appointment.

ALMOST TO a person, the name of William Pinderhughes, currently director of staff relations at the Department of Education's 25th St. offices, has been mentioned.

This would indicate that Mr. Pinderhughes is the popular choice of those who are more than mildly interested.

DR. SHELDON, just taking up residence in this city, could not be reached for specific comment on this point Monday.

He comes to the city from Hempstead, L.I., and has signed a four-year contract with the Board of School Commissioners.

He comes at a time when the system is beset with all sorts of problems; some of which include pupil overcrowding, busing of students and de facto segregation in any number of schools.

That he faces a monumental task is generally agreed.

YM country day camp to benefit 160 kids

One hundred and sixty inner city boys and girls will spend two weeks at a YMCA country day camp this summer as the result of a $9,600 Federal grant announced this week by the Baltimore Community Action Agency.

The first group of 40 youngsters already are enrolled in the first session at the Black Rock Country Day Camp at Butler in Baltimore County.

They are joined by a like number of boys and girls from suburban areas who have enrolled in the day camp.

Three more two-week sessions are scheduled through August 16.

ELMER WINGATE, chairman of the camp committee, said that 80 per cent of the funds to cover the camping experience for their inner city youngsters is coming from Community Action Agency and 20 percent from the community and YMCA.

Buses take the youngsters to and from the Black ROCK Family Outdoor YMCA, located 8 miles north of the Baltimore Beltway and Jones Falls Expressway.

The five-day-a-week program includes hiking, nature classes, arts and crafts, softball, football, lacrosse, track and field, physical fitness, singing and storytelling, horseback riding and swimming.

Director of the day camp is Bob Scott, varsity lacrosse coach at The Johns Hopkins University.

The 'Roses' Summer Sour: it's a 10-oz. air conditioner

Works easy. Just sip and cool. Sip and cool. Makes easy, too.

Pour into a shaker or blender 1 jigger of Four Roses (1½ oz.) and 1 jigger of water—add 1 packet of instant whiskey sour mix—and ice. Shake or blend, then pour entire contents into a highball glass. Top with club soda.

Stir. Garnish with cherry and orange slice.

Keep this in mind: Four Roses is created to taste light. And to keep its flavor down to the last cooling swallow.
