We refuse to cave in.

We refuse to believe the nominating conventions are sewed up for anybody.

We refuse to believe that the people don't matter any more.

We refuse to believe that Republicans, Democrats and Independents won't join hands when America's future (and maybe its survival) is at stake.

We refuse to sit around and mope just because Nelson Rockefeller is fighting an up-hill battle—and the odds are against him.

We refuse to believe that the convention delegates of this state won't respond when the people act.

We refuse to believe that the delegates won't unify behind the only man who can unify the country.

If you believe as we do, we invite you to Join Hands for Rocky by signing and sending back the message below. We'll make sure your delegates get it immediately.

We...you...all of us can't cave in. Not now. There's too much to lose. But time is perilously short. Sign your name. Join Hands for Rocky.

We've joined hands for Rocky. Will you join us?

Mrs. Martin feted on 80th birthday

RALEIGH, N.C. —Mrs. Elizabeth H. Martin of this city was honored on her 80th birthday, with a series of activities that covered a period from Thursday to Monday, recently.

The affairs brought her children and grandchildren from across the country to honor her on this occasion.

* * *

FESTIVITIES began with a July 4th picnic which was followed by recreation activities on Friday and brunch on Saturday.

The Holiday Inn was the setting for a dinner party the following day.

William R. Maetin, from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was toastmaster. Mrs. Dorothy Martin Barnes of Washington pinned the white orchid on her mother.

* * *

JOHN W. MARTIN of Philadelphia initiated a "human chain" ceremony. Mr. Martin noted that the family chain has been broken only once, that with father, the late Alfred A. Martin, Sr.

Each of the children paid tribute to the mother stating what their mother has meant and still means to them.

* * *

THE CEREMONY ended with the presentation of a gold necklace centered with a "mother" charm and including six additional charms engraved with the name of her sons and daughters.

Mrs. Delores M. Mangrum of Philadelphia, representing Mrs. Martin's grandchildren, presented a matching bracelet which contained eight charms each bearing the initials of a grandchild.

James A. Martin of Bridgeport, Conn. presented the numerous birthday gifts to Mrs. Martin from the children, grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

MRS. ANN R. MARTIN, of Fort Lauderdale, daughter-in-law, directed the ceremonial of lighting the candles on a magnificent birthday cake by the grand and great grandchildren. Miss Claudette Martin of Fort Lauderdale led the singing of "Happy Birthday."

Because of illness in family, Alfred A. Martin, Jr. was unable to attend. Overall planning was directed by Miss Beatrice R. Martin.

Sunday's activities included a family breakfast at the family home and worship at First Baptist Church. A buffet dinner followed, and this, in turn, was followed by sightseeing.

More sightseeing, stopping and dinner in North Hills highlighted Monday's activities and climaxed the weekend celebration.

MRS. RUTH MEDNICK has been appointed director of information and referral service for the Health and Welfare Council of the Baltimore area. Mrs. Mednick, who holds two degrees from the University of Chicago, was formerly associated with the Springfield State Hospital.

MISS BARBARA MARSHALL, a fifth grade teacher at Henderson Public School No. 101, Baltimore, will be on leave, next term to do graduate work under Social Science Fellowship at Antioch College.

38 urban teenagers in Delta's 'Lift'

WASHINGTIN, D.C —A group of 38 teenage participants in a summer youth program began a five city travel adventure in Washington, Sunday, as members of the Delta Sigma Theta's "Teen-Lift."

Mrs. Frankie M. Freeman, of St. Louis, national president of the organization sponsoring the "Teen-Lift," has announced that 26 girls and 12 boys from inner-city communities in Washington, D.C., Northern Virginia and Southern Maryland, were taken on a 12-day bus tour of Washington, Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, and Wilmington.

They visited historic sites, participate in cultural activities, a career conference, and met with successful Negro executives in a number of large industries during the tour.

This is the sixth year Delta Sigma Theta has sponsored the "Teen-Lift," a career-motivation program, but the first year that it has chosen high school students living in urban communities rather than rural areas.

MRS. FREEMAN, also the only woman commissioner on the U.S. Commission for Civil Rights, pointed out that most of these young people have never had the experience of visiting museums, seeing what opportunities are available to them in industry, attending plays or being encouraged to think in terms of higher educational and vocational goals.

While in Washington, the group toured Howard University and spend time on Captiol Hill, where they visited Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's office, meet Congressman Frank Horton (R., N.Y.), had lunch at the Senate Office Building and sat in on a Senate committee hearing. They also visited the Supreme Court, the Ivory Coast Embassy and attended a performance of the Yugoslav Folk Ensemble at the Carter Barron Amphitheater.

* * *

FROM WASHINGTON the group went to Boston where they visited the Charles Hayden Planetarium, the Museum of Fine Arts, participated in a career conference, visit Boston's historic sites and attend a baseball game.

Upon their arrival in New York they will tour the city, the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts and meet with ambassadors on a tour of the United Nations. They will also visit the outstanding Schomburg Collection of literature on Negro history and art, attend an African Music Festival and spend one evening at the "Cheetah" discotheque.

In Philadelphia they will take a walking tour of the city, visit the Philadelphia Tribune Office and spend an evening with local teenagers. They will also visit Valley Forge for a picnic and tour.

* * *

IN WILMINGTON, Del., they will see how various large industries operate when they visit the Hercules Research Center, the DuPont Chemical Company, and the Getty Oil Company. While in Wilmington, they will stay on the campus of the University of Delaware and meet, and socialize with youngsters in the "Upward Bound" program being sponsored by the university.

The "Teen-lift" program, initiated in 1963, is aimed at raising the aspiration level of youngsters from both a professional and cultural point of view. A recent survey of previous participants shows that 71 of the approximately 200, are either in college, planning to go to college or considering it for the first time.

MRS. ELIZABETH R. MARTIN was joined by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren for a weekend celebration of her 80th birthday in Raleigh, N. C., recently. The family group, shown above, includes, left to right, William Mangrum, Miss Claudette E. Martin, Mrs. Martin, William R. Martin, Jr., Mrs. Delores M. Mangrum, Miss Denise Mangrum, Mrs. Dorthy M. Barnes, John W. Martin; Back row: James A. Martin, Miss Beatrice R. Martin, Mrs. Anne R. Martin.
