the organization's newly-selected national director, has picked him as national troubleshooter.

The move, as explained by the militant, but rational CORE official, will serve a dual purpose. In additional to giving the national office a troubleshooter, it will also turn the direction of Target City over to the local chapter of CORE, Mr. Gant told the AFRO.

HIS REPLACEMENT, the out-going director reported, will be named by James Griffin, chairman, Baltimore CORE chairman.

Mr. Griffin, compliance officer for the State Department of Personnel and member of the board of School Commissioners, is expected to name a successor within a few days, it was reported.

TARGET CITY, which opened an East Baltimore office three years ago this summer, has enjoyed marked success in "creating an awareness of the need to escalate the drive for human dignity," according to Mr. Gant.

In citing evidence to support this view, the "angry young man" pointed to three highly successful Target City-sponsored projects.

These include Target City Youth Training Program, CORE's Secretary Training Project, and the Maryland Freedom Union.

The first two projects are financed by government grants, Mr. Gant points out with obvious pride.

He views Maryland Freedom Union as the catalyst for marshalling desire and determination by ghetto dwellers to improve and promote their economic wellbeing.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS of Target City which the outgoing director counts as reasons for pride and satisfaction were stated thusly:

"I have seen Baltimore converted from a gregariously apathetical community to one of black consciousness dedicated to the promotion of human dignity.

"I have seen prostitutes, dope addicts, homosexuals, and other lost people come into this office deeply concerned about problems of their community.

"I have also seen educators, steelworkers, policemen, and professional people come in here who have all accepted the ideaology of black togetherness.

"Yes, I have seen quite a change in Baltimore in two short years," said Mr. Gant who has been a CORE staff member for eight years.

AMONG HIS disappointments the highly vocal civil rights leader listed employment, education, and housing "in that order."

He is unhappy with the local employment picture because the unemployment rate in the ghetto is more "than five times" the national average.

"You still can't encourage black high school graduates to go on to college because they are not really being considered for jobs as engineers, architects, and other highly technical and high-paying jobs," the director said bitterly.

His major disappointment with local education, Mr. Gant said, is due to the fact that "the education system is part of the master plan to make sure black people are not competitive because they are not taught competition."

Mr. Gant said sub-standard housing has a purpose in the scheme of the establishment. "It is psychological," he thundered, phrasing the desired effect thusly:

"He who does not live in a comfortable home, cannot and will not be comfortable.

"Poor people, he said, must "at the will of various politicians and the 130 people who control Baltimore and Maryland must live in ghetto surroundings."

IN SPITE of this rigid pre-conceived plan, according to Mr. Gant, the struggle for human dignity will continued unabated.

When the local CORE chapter takes command of Target City, the department director predicted, the project will spread from his 832 N. Gay St. headquarters and "go throughout the city."

"Plans are now in the making which will expand Target City to West and South Baltimore," he said.

Future direction of Target City will be in the hands of Mr Griffin, according to Mr. Gant. A new director, the number two man, like the number three man, Milton Holmes, is expected to be a local resident, Mr. Gant said.

"Yep," the bearded director said raring back in his black upholstered chair in CORE's refurbished office with black walls. "I'm leaving, but you will be hearing from Target City."

To assure that fact he is leaving behind a highly-trained "action staff," which will serve as a nucleus and local direction.

The staff includes William Medley, Yusuf Kerriem, and Joe Rhea organizers; Miss Lois Wesson, secretary-receptionist; and Leo Roberts, first vice chairman, of Target City.

from information received a search is out for a 25-year-old man formerly of the 1700 block Eutaw Pl., who is a "prime suspect."

The suspect is armed and considered dangerous, the officer said. He is also well known to police, it was reported.

According to police reports he, along with Pedro Crooms, 45, is also wanted for the May, 1967 assault with intent to murder and robbery of $12,000 of Mr. and Mrs. Burman at their home.

During the Sunday morning robbery Mr. and Mrs. Burman said their assailants also took jewelry, a $500 watch and threatening to kill them, struck them and tied them up.

He and Crooms were due for trial in Criminal Court in July on the first charges involving the Burmans.

Crooms has been reported missing over six months.

The suspect appeared for trial but left during the noon recess and has not been apprehended.

He is under a total of $24,000 bail on the old indictments and as a suspect in various Baltimore County robberies and the holdup of the South Street Branch of the Union Trust Bank of $7,500 in June.

A Federal warrant was taken out for the suspect by the FBI on June 27 for the bank robbery. He has since been indicted by the Federal Grand jury.

ACCORDING TO police reports, the two gunmen were stationed at different points in shrubbery on the Burmans' lawns last Saturday.

Sgt. Fisher told the AFRO, "Mr. Burman was getting out of his car he had just parked.

"The men who were after him were waiting in the bushes. One man crossed over from bushes on the far side of the front door and as Mr. Burman got out opened fire. This hit Burman in the left leg. The other man was behind bushes at the end of the driveway.

"Then a man ran in front of the victim and more gunfire caught him in the right chest.

"Burman pulled his pistol and was able to fire six shots.

"There was cartridges recovered for the Crime Laboratory.

"Witnesses said they looked out their windows and saw a tall, young man running across the lawn firing.

"We searched the nearby wooded area Saturday afternoon, thinking maybe one of the shots from the Burman gun hit a suspect and maybe we'd find a body."

ALSO ACCORDING to a main unidentified, there was exchange of gunfire before Mr. Burman collapsed beside his car in the driveway.

The eyewitness told the AFRO one man was fairly tall and appeared to be wearing a light tee-shirt, sweater or shirt.

Another eye witness said he heard Mr. Burman call to his wife, "Della, Della, I've been hit."

Another witness and neighbor said a woman came from the Burman front door and ran out screaming as the gunners both fled.

"The Burmans are fine people. They are quite and keep their place so beautiful. They have a swimming pool in the back for their 10-year-old daughter.

"Everybody around here notices the nice things they do for their daughter."

Rockefeller, who is trying to overtake Nixon.

All three of Maryland's colored delegates, Archie Jones, Elmer Harris, and Harry Oglesby, told the AFRO they still intend to vote for Rockefeller Wednesday night.

Harris is a city Liquor Board member appointed by Agnew and Oglesby is a liquor license inspector.

PARKER AND Mrs. Kitty Massenberg, Maryland's GOP National Committeewoman, were among Rockefeller boosters expected to stick with him.

Also Gov. Agnew said indications were that Nixon could be nominated on the first ballot.

Marshall Jones and other delegates said their figures showed otherwise.

Early today, Tuesday, Mr. Nixon announced governor Agnew would second his nomination.

GOV. AGNEW, who has said he wants to build a strong GOP Party in Maryland, told the AFRO there would have been dissatisfaction no matter what position he took.

"I did what I think was best for the country," Gov. Agnew told the AFRO. He said he was not pressuring any delegate to follow his lead.

One of the reasons Agnew was pushed as a favorite son was to keep unity in the delegation. Rockefellerbackers in particular had hoped he would remain as favorite son for at least the first ballot.

Some of the Rockefeller delegates said the timing of Agnew's move meant nothing to the state and could seriously hurt the party.

They go so far as to say the move could wreck the party in Maryland if Nixon is nominated and loses to the Democratic-nominee in November.

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) Sen. Edward W. Brooke, the first colored senator in the 20th century, challenged the Republican party. Monday to end racial "separatism" among the American people.

Sen. Brooke spoke out against black and white divisiveness after being elected temporary chairman of the GOP National Convention — the first member of his race to hold the office.

He delivered an uncharacteristically partisan speech accusing the Democats "feeble in inspiration and overbearing in application."

But the chief thrust of his remarks at the convention was aimed at the Republicans.

"It is for us to make certain that the call of racial separatism now resounding in urban ghettos and segregated suburbs is not a forecast of future dissension but an echo of past shame," he said.

"We must reject separatism from whatever source," said the Massachusetts senator. "We must reject white separatism. We must reject black separatism. We must hold true to the course on which we have embarked — the course which leads to an integrated society of magnificent pluralism."

Sen. Brooke did not espouse the hard line on law and order urged by many Repiblicans. Order is the first responsibility of government but not the only one, he said.

"Order must prevail, but it will prevail only when there is a will to obey," he said. "And the will to obey will only exist when every citizen is assured the benefits of equal opportunity and equal justice."

He accused the Democrats of overselling and underdoing federal programs to the point of breeding "a lingering depression among the less fortunate members of our society."

Before delivering his historic speech, Sen. Brooke had lunch from a lunch wagon.

He chose the lunch wagon instead of a posh restaurant; where Illinois senior senator, Everett M. Dirksen was hosting lunch for ranking Republicans. The restaurant follows a segregated policy.

Sen. Brooke explained that he does not patronize any place which discriminates on the basis of religion or color.

—Delegates threaten revolt

hind the open and behind-the-scenes fight for delegates continued, pitting the Nixon, Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan forces, with the figures on the counts remaining heavily in Nixon's favor.

In the American Hotel where Rockefeller has headquarters, there is a Jackie Robinson hospitality room.

Big Wilt Chamberlain heads up a similar suite in the Hilton Plaza here Nixon has headquarters.

Teams from both sides have been speaking with delegates in an effort to win them over.

Robinson has been under the weather and key members of his team operating here include Mrs. Evelyn Cunningham, deputy campaign director for Rockefeller; the Rev. Sandy Ray, pastor of the Cornerstone Baptist Church and himself a delegate; the Rev. Wyatt Ted Walker, Rockefeller's special assistant on urban affairs and a former aide to Dr. Martin Luther King and James Farmer, a congressional candidate leading People for Rockefeller.

Also Col. John D. Silvera, from the urban affairs section; Mrs. Ada Fisher Jones, Rockefeller's assistant appointments secretary; Mrs. Robert Moore and Floyd Briton, president of Mark1 V, a business consultant firm.

NIXON Supporters with Chamberlain included Dr. Melvin Humphrey of Hampton Institute and a former director of the anti-poverty program in Baltimore City; James Gilreath, a public relations man from Baltimore, and Oliver Chamberlain, the cage star's brother.

A major difference in the mood of the two camps, and this goes for the overall operations, is that the Nixon forces are confident and already making detailed plans for the campaign while the others are hopeful on the reputation but confident they could take it all in November, only if. . .

CHAMBERLAIN TALKING about the fears of many voters that Nixon is part of the turning toward the right by the Republican Party, told the AFRO:

"Unfortunately, some people relate through association. He and some of the GOP have a lot of friends in the South.

"I think Mr. Nixon is abreast of the times and he will do what is necessary to bring the people of this country together.

"All I ask on behalf of Mr. Nixon is that you don't commit yourself before you get to know this man." Conceding he is a novice at politics, Chamberlain said things looked good to him for a Nixon victory on an early ballot.

In his appearances before delegates from Mississippi and Alabama and other states, Chamberlain says he makes it clear at all times where he stand on the matter of civil rights.

Some colored delegates her have been rather critical of Cambelain for his support to Nixon.

The announcement by Gov. Reagan that he indeed is a candidate places new attention on a team of colored supporters he has working here.

Robert J. Keyes, assistant for community relations, heads the Reagan backers who include James M. Woods, an alternate delegate.

Also Ted Patrick, one of the seven community consultants to Keyes; James Johnson, director of Veterans Affairs for California; Robert Collins, state director of the Multi-Service Center; Theron Bell, director of the State Office of Economic Opportunity, and James L. Simms Jr., intergroup relations coordinator.

Keyes said he is for Reagan because, "I agree wholeheartedly with the creative society, we've got to help people help themselves."

Esrantged wife told to 'cut' boyfriends, stick with her kids

Should a wife who separated from her husband, have a boy friend?

Should a mother whose husband has deserted her, devote her life to her children and side-step male companionship?

Does pre-marital relationship lead wives and husbands to distrust each other after marriage?

The answers to these questions were found in a case heard in Domestic Court before Master John O'Grady.

Mr. O'Grady, sitting in the absence of Judge Robert I. K. Hammerman, handed down a decision which should have far-reaching implications in questions of love, marriage and divorce that come before the courts.

ADVISING A lonely, deserted mother of two children, he stated: "Cut the boy friends.

"Their being around is doing great damage to your children. It's a shame to bring this tremendous strain on them.

"Whether you like it or not, your life is not with the men. You don't help yourself or the children by association with them.

"Your life is bound up with your children.

"So your husband is running around? So he has girl friends? He's away from the children. But you're not.

"What he does is not your concern.

"Your children's lives depend on you. Stick with the kids fulltime."

THE WIFE in her 20's, red-eyed and weeping with her head hung down, sobbed, "Yes, your honor" but added, "I get lonely."

Asked if they could become reconciled, both the wife and the husband also in his 20's replied, "No."

"It's gone too far now," the husband testified.

"I don't like him anymore," the wife stated, inserting, "It's ended. It has to be."

"Both of you should have your heads examined," Mr. O'Grady remarked.

Analyzing the predicament the jurist first stated, "What a mess you two have made for your two children, the children you both brought into this world.

"You're behaving like two juveniles. The two of you exhibit terrific hostility toward each other.

"Your're living apart. She has boy friends. He has girl friends.

"YOU CAN'T live together because you don't trust each other. When you first became married, there was suspicion. Before you separated there was suspicion.

"I suspect there were pre-marital relationship.

"You started the business of marriage before the vows, ahead of time.

"Now neither trusts the other one. Each is afraied the other will not mind breaking the vows."

Concluding the case, Mr. O'Grady required the husband pay $30 each week for the support of the wife and the two children plus $3 a week on an arrears of nearly $1,000.

To the husband who contended he resented paying when the wife has "other men" hanging around the house, the jurist said, "If you miss one payment I recommend you be brought into court and sent to jail. They are your children."

Set $150,000 bail for bank suspects

Arrested at 10:10 p.m. Thursday Aug 1 near his apartment in the 3000 block Walbrook Ave. was Charles Alexander Spencer, 28, an alleged bank robber. Spencer is lodged in Baltimore City Jail in lieu of $150,000 bail set by the State's Attorney's Office.

Baltimore police officers and the FBI have been searching for Spencer since July 18 when he was indicted by the Grand Jury along with six other persons in connection with various other bank holdups.

Spencer is charged with armed robbery and assault in connection with the March 29 holdup of the 700 block E. 20th St. branch of the First National Bank that netted gunman $8,000.

Also arrested in a predawn raid Thursday at his home was Wallace L. Ragland, 29, 2700 block W. Mosher St., who is a suspect in the Feb. 22 robbery of the 500 block Franklintown Rd. branch of the Maryland National Bank.

THE ARREST of Spencer last week and the arrests on July 18 culminated six months investigation by the FBI city police officers.

A statement issued by police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau said the five in custody now are believed responsible for at least six bank holdups during the past six months.

Also in custody and charged with the June 21 $12,500 robbery of the Equitable Trust Co. at 3121 St. Paul St. are:

William Oliver Gardner, 46, 1800 Chilton St.; Jordan Dennis Carter, 39, 2900 block E. Federal St.; Alfred Johnson, 24, 400 block E. North Ave., all lodged at the Baltimore City Jail in the lieu of $150,000 bail each, set by the State's Attorney's Office.

The three uncaptured men for whom a nationwide alert has been sounded are: Thomas Lucas, 24, 1700 block E. Chase St.; LeRoy Koonce, 24, 1900 block E. Madson St.; Thomas Lucas, 24, 1700 block E. Chase St.

2 Catonsville youths hospitalized in fight

Officials at St. Agnes Hospital late Monday listed the condition of Otis and Gary Davis of the 300 block Melvin Ave. as satisfactory."

The youths were rushed to the hospital Saturday shortly after they suffered a severe beating by three unidentified assailants during an Elks Home parade in Catonsville, Baltimore County police reported.

According to the police Gary, 13, and Otis, 14, were watching the parade on Winters Lane when a fight broke out. The boys were attacked by at least two persons the report stated.

"Both boys suffered concussions," a hospital spokesman said, "but both are now conscious and their vital signs are strong and responsive."

Mrs. Mamie Gaither, mother of the two boys is scheduled to swear out warrants for the accused assailants on Wednesday.

Tomatoes bred for machine harvesting will be on exhibit at the University of Maryland vegetable research farm near Salisbury, Aug. 16. The public is invited.

Children suffer in home without love

In Juvenile Court Friday it revealed it is better for a father to spend more time with his wife and children rather than all his time working to keep them supplied with food, a home and paid-up bills.

Thus, a father who kept up payments on his home, supplied food and had not one bill over-due, was found guilty by court authorities of failing to provide "emotional support" for his family.

The conclusion came after his wife testified he never played with the children, was always out of the home and seldom seen. This led to bickering, dissatisfaction, loniness for companionship, she said.

With no male guidance, care and love, the sons frequently ran away.

All the children came to feel the mother was mistreated by the father who left it to her resources to buy them clothes and supply them with recreation, study help and friendship.

The family never shared mealtime, Sundays nor recreational activities together.

The children did poorly in school.

THE 14-YEAR old son who was before the court for truancy and running away, said he preferred to stay at his grand parents' home.

A probation worker was appointed to ask school authorities to change his curriculum.

The mother was told to leave the father whom the children did not like and "try to get the youngsters a little happiness."

"What you have here," the jurist said, "is two households in one.

"The father runs his life, she and the children run theirs. They do not relate as a family.

"The parents need a marriage counselor. They both know their frigid home is not good for the children but they are unable to do anything about it.

"The children do not feel the father gives them anything although he keeps all the bills paid, brings in food and keeps the roof over their heads.

"What they want is love. The mother wants love. But this, the father does not supply.

"Mother and father argue over who is going to use the car. They never go for a Sunday drive. Father never gives the teenagers any money. Maybe he has none left. But he should be enough for them to realize that.

"Unless love can come into the home, the children will continue to suffer."

College gives fall deadline

Applications for admission of full-time students for the fall semester at Catonsville Community College will not be accepted after August 24, M. Graham Vinzant Jr., dean of student personnel for the college, announced.

Part-time students may apply at any time until the start of classes, but Mr. Vinzant emphasized that late applicants in this category may suffer from lack of some services. Classes will begin on September 16.

Full-time applicants to the college must submit results of the American College Test, in addition to records of previous school work and a medical report form, Mr. Vinzant added.

A special make-up session for the American College Test for those who have not had previous opportunity to take it will be held on the college campus, at 800 S. Rolling Road, at 6 p.m. on August 26. Information about procedure for registering for this test is available from the Registration's Office, Mr. Vinzant added.

Beginning on Thursday and continuing through September 5, general admissions meeting will be held, in the Counseling Center at the College, every Thursday, at 7 p.m.
