RULER OF MEN AND NATIONS

God created and rules the universe

GOLDEN TEXT

"Look unto me, and be saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is non else."— Isaiah 45:22.

By R. H. RAMSEY

TODAY'S lesson emphasizes control of men and nations for His own purposes. He is the director and ruler of history and we see how His plans are worked out through the lives of individuals.

Our material comes from the latter portion of the Book of Isaiah often referred to as the "Book of Romans of the Old Testament" for in it are recorded the highest points of Old Testament theology.

Some of the greatest themes to ever occupy men's minds and some of the greatest prophecies ever uttered are introduced here accompanied by praise to Jehovah for His power, His mercy, His uniqueness and His creative activity.

Prophets

The truth is set forth that God's promises, as related by His prophets are always fulfilled, while those of false prophets come to nothing.

As an illustration of this He gives Isaiah one of the most amazing predictions of the Old Testament to utter, that of a king whose birth would occur more than 150 years later.

Even his name—Cyrus—is given, a rare occurrence in Old Testament prophecy (Isaiah 44:28).

At the beginning Cyrus was the King of a small principality in Elam.

With the help of God he conquered all of what is now Iran, Iraq, Afghanistan, founding an empire which stretched from India on the east to Egypt in the West.

Medes

Uniting the Persians and the Medes, he became ruler of the greatest world power of his time and established the Achaemenid dynasty of Persian Kings.

Aside from those of Israel, Cyrus — not yet born and a Gentile—is the only king who is called the "anointed."

He was not anointed by an earthly ceremony, as were the prophets, priests and kings of Israel, but chosen and ordained by God for His purposes.

As the "Shepherd" of the Almighty, Cyrus was called to continue the care of God's Covenant People, to gather the lost sheep of the house of Israel, return the Jews from Exile, restore the city of Jerusalem and rebuild the temple.

Power

God Himself raised up Cyrus, giving him the power to conquer and establish a mighty empire and the resolution to restore the Chosen People. His purpose in ruling the history and conquests of the time in order to relocate a small number of people in an obscure land is of little importance politically, but of great importance to His plan for the salvation of the world.

Rival

Cyrus did not know the one true God, but God knew him and ruled his mind and purpose to accomplish His end, that the God of Israel might be glorified and known as Jehovah, without rival.

It is interesting to note that God has allowed Cyrus Persia—Iran—to remain a living nation while other Biblical nations have vanished; and the title, "King of Kings," used by the Achaemenid Kings," to come down to and be used by the present Shah of Iran.

Isaiah's prophecy concerning Cyrus closes with Jehovah's assertion that He is the Creator, sustainer and ruler of the universe and the world.

Sovereign

The order of the cosmos, the establishment of the earth, the phenomena of nature are in His hands. His is infinite, eternal, self-existent, self-sufficient, sovereign and omnipotent.

Because this is true it is folly for men to contend against Him, for He is stronger than His foes or critics.

He is God. There is no other. And ultimately all men will recognize Him as such and all nations will seek the God of Israel.

Prevail

Reflecting momentarily on the time when Israel shall be saved and righteousness will prevail over the earth, Isaiah turns from the immediate future concerning Cyrus to Israel's restoration and salvation.

The prophet speaks of God as the true Savior and Deliverer of Israel, emphasizing the fact that God's utterances are not those of a magician, soothsayer, spiritist or necromancer.

Salvation

Reliance upon such false prophets or upon idols is vain. God has shown His merciful providence — as evidenced by the prophecies of Cyrus and the return of the Exiles— and a richer grace is to follow.

Though the people might be scattered to the ends of the earth, they can look to Him for salvation.

In Him only, and assuredly, is the spiritual salvation of Israel and all mankind.

PRESIDENT LYNDON JOHNSON participated in a White House Rose Garden ceremony in which a $600,000 grant was announced to start a public school teaching career program for returning Vietnam war veterans. The initial project is expected to povide a model for a future national program. Legislation for the Veterans in Public Service (VIPS) program has been introduced in Congress. Political Conventions face disorder, turmoil

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (NPI) — Look for the 1968 presidential convention to be among the most tumultuous in the nation's history.

At both conventions, the issue of delegation integration is expected to create a stir that could produce disorder, walkouts, and challenges of delegates' credentials.

There will actually be two delegation issues. At both party conventions, the inclusion of black people on state delegates will become a focus of attention. Some states, until this year, had no black delegates or only a token number.

* * *

NOW, many black leaders are demanding no less than proportionate representation in the delegations.

Another issue relating to the delegations is the question of "open convention" — delegates' right to vote for the party of their choice, regardless of directions from party officials.

Supporters of such presidential candidates as Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn.) are among backers of this idea, which is apt to spark controversy in the Democratic convention.

* * *

BOTH CONVENTIONS are likely to be hit by unprecedented turmoil — and police officials in both cities are ready for the trouble.

In Miami Beach, site of the Republican convention, which started Monday officials are worried about race riots, picketing, and protests by poor people, Cuban exiles, and old people.

As if that weren't enough, Miami Beach is only 90 miles from Cuba — to which several American planes have been hijacked recently.

* * *

THE REV. RALPH DAVID ABERNATHY, SCLC president, was planning to send a group representing the "51st state — the state of hunger" — to the convention in a demonstration against poverty.

In Chicago, whe e the Democratic National convention is slated to begin Aug. 29, the prospect of disorder prompted Mayor Richard J. Daley to announce that he would not tolerate any disruption of the convention.

A leading Democrat, Daley declared: "As long as I am mayor of the city, there will be law and order in its streets."

* * *

THE MAYOR issued his statement in the face of threatned turmoil both inside and outside the convention during its proceedings.

Inside there was expected to be tension between white and black delegates, demanding the same seats. Outside, there is likely to be all sorts of protests ranging from opposition to the Vietnam war to charges that the U.S. was practicing "racial genocide."

As the mayor put it, "We are in troubled times in our country." Few disputed that the nation had its troubles. The only question was: Do the troubles spur the country to right its wrongs or merely produce new woes for its citizenry?

Dr. Clark given rebuilding post

NEW YORK — The state's $6 billion Urban Development Corporation acquired its second director last week when Gov. Rockefeller appointed Prof. Kenneth B. Clark of City College to the board.

Last month he named Whitney M. Young, of the National Urban League, to the body.

The agency will work to rebuild the slums. Its operating head is Edward Logue, whose planning work in Boston and New Haven is well known.

The two criteria for citizen members of the board were representation for the minority groups whose neighborhoods would be affected and those who could attract private capital to the program.

MRS. RAWLINS is a member of the Literary Guild and Women's Club of Rutgers University.

A mother of a teen age son the prize-winning Steno attends Rutgers University where she is enrolled for her degree majoring in accounting.

Her son who also plans a business career of following in his mother's footsteps is a student at Farleigh Dickerson College in Rutherford, N.J.

House committee bars R. C. camps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House Committee last week overwhelmingly recommended approval of legislation that would bar from National Park Lands any future Resurrection Cities.

The House Interior Committee by a 23 to 40 vote recommended passage of a bill that would order the Interior Department to prohibit, overnight camping or erection of temporary shelters except under a strict set of guidelines.

The measure would not affect designated public camp sites in National Parks since it applies only to sites outside such areas.

Congo president ousted in coup

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (UPI) — The Army Saturday overthrew President Alphonse Massemba-Debat for "betraying the ideals of the 1962 revolution."

The coup was disclosed in a Brazzaville radio broadcast of an army communique which paid former defense minister Augustin Poignet had been asked to replace Massemba-Debat "because of the absence of the chief of state."

It was not clear whether what had been killed in this meant Massemba-Debat the army takeover or had fled into exile.

Jackson State fund announced

JACKSON, Miss. — The establishment of the Jackson State College Development Fund has been announced by Dr. John A. Peoples, president of the college.

"The development fund will be used to provide scholarships and loans to deserving students and faculty and for other purposes to improve the services of Jackson State College to students, faculty and alumni, "Dr. Peoples said.

"It will not be used for the operation of the college since state funds are available for that purpose," he added.

A two-year initial drive to raise $200,000 under the direction of Dr. Dolores Funches will create the fund.

North, South School Bias Equally Obnoxious To U.S.

WASHINGTON — The cutting sword the U.S. Government uses to enforce school desegregation has two edges — a northern one as well as a southern edge.

This tought seemed to be in the minds of Senate keepers of the public purse as they registered satisfaction this week with the government's crackdown on southern school segregation, but insisted that equal attention be given racially unbalanced schools everywhere else in the nation.

That was the gist of tough, mandatory language the Senate Appropriations Committee wrote into the $18 billion money bill to keep the Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare departments going in fiscal 1969.

Ever since the 1964 Civil Rights Act, many southern members of the Senate and House have complained bitterly that the administration unfairly concentrated its desegregation drive on dixie schools.

Southern schools which failed to meet the federal desegregation guidelines were denied funds, they claimed, but schools in the North remained relatively immune.

* * *

THE HOUSE put the Senate Appropriations Committee on the spot by writing into its appropriation bill a ban on spending federal money to force busing of students, to abolish a school or to force attendance of students at a particular school. It said none of these aims could be set up as a condition of eligibility for federal school aid funds.

After three days of wrangling over language, the Senate committee softened the wording considerably Tuesday by inserting the words "to overcome racial imbalance" in place of the ban on specific activities.

Then the committee added a provision that HEW assign as many persons to the investigation of compliance with school desegregation guidelines in other states as are assigned to the 17 southern and border states.

The language in the bill also directs HEW to enforce compliance with the 1964 civil rights act "by like methods and with equal emphasis in all states of the union." Noncompliance has in the past been threatened with the suspension of federal aid.

The Senate bill also directed HEW to report by March 1 "on the results achieved in establishing this compliance program on a national basis."

IN THE wake and concurrent with the Washington action, the following developments occurred outside D.C.:

The government filed a civil suit Tuesday to desegregate the public schools in Tulsa, Okla.—the third school desegregation case filed outside the South.

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said the complaint was brought in U.S. District Court in Tulsa against independent school district No. 1, of Tulsa County.

The Justice Department last April 25 filed its first northern desegregation case against a Chicago suburban school district.

HARNETT COUNTY (N.C.) school officials say they'll follow a court edict to consolidate white and colored high schools this fall.

J. R. Bagget Jr., chairman of the Harnett Board of Education, said the action, announced Wednesday, has nothing to do with federal funds and "we are answerable to the court and not to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

The Board has been under fire both from HEW and the U.S. District Courts. Last week, Federal Judge Algernon Butler ordered the county to come up with a consolidation plan to replace the "freedom of choice" assignment plan by Aug. 5. He ordered the county to institute a study to end the dual school system in lower grades the following school year.

"The board has considered every alternative and now proposes to submit to the court on Aug. 5 a plan for complete and total consolidation of all white and colored high school grades 9-12 for 1968-69," Baggett said in a letter.

"It will then institute a study to determine the best way to comply with the court order in 1969 with the least amount of disruption to the school system.

"It should be emphatically pointed out that this action is being taken because of a direct order from the United States District Court," Baggett said.

Earlier this year, a HEW team told the school board it wasn't too happy with the freedom of choice plan and that federal funds might be cut off if improvements were not made.

Under the announced consolidation plan, students at County High School will go to Dunn High, which is mostly white; students at the other all-colored high school —Shawtown — will attend several other predominantly white schools in the area.

THREE MORE North Carolina school systems have been ordered to take steps toward desegregation by this fall.

These orders came from Federal Judge John D. Larkins Jr., who ordered the Edenton, Chowan and Northampton school systems to integrate some of their schools this fall.

Larkins told the Edenton and Chowan boards to integrate their elementary schools by this fall.

Northampton has been ordered to transfer high school students this fall to integrate the secondary schools.

All three school systems must submit plans for total integration for the 1969-70 school year.

In Edenton, students in the first three grades will be assigned to D. F. Walker School, the predominantly colored school. Students in grades four through six will be assigned to Swain Elementary, the formerly predominantly white school.

Northampton's Willis Hare school will be closed, and its students will be transferred to Northampton High School. The order also calls for the transfer of some 100 students from Gumberry to Gaston High School, and 25 per cent faculty integration in all high schools.

The o der does not reuire the transfer of any white students to any school with an all-colored student body this year.

Approximately three-quarters of Northampton students are colored.

IN GREENSBORO, N.C. — Motions asking dismissal of a "dual school system" suit were filed in U.S. District Court Wednesday.

The suit was filed June 10 by J. Alston Atkins of Winston-Salem, a non-white seeking to eliminate what he described as "the dual school system in North Carolina."

The city of Winston-Salem, the Forsyth County commissioners and the Board of Education asked for the dismissal on the grounds the complaint failed to show existence of a controversy.

Atkins had charged the city "had an obligation to join with the school board in a massive job of upgrading colored schools."

The city said Wednesday it has been unable to find any "legal authority to support the contention."

IN WILMINGTON, N.C. —The New Hanover County Board of Education Friday adopted a two-step plan for school desegregation to be instituted in 1969.

The plan, which calls for geographical zoning of the schools, was submitted to U.S. Eastern District Court Monday.

It was prepared by the school staff and a committee of the board under a court order issued by Judge Algernon L. Butler last month. The order said the plan must have been submitted by Monday.

The plan would continue "freedom of choice" during the 1968-69 school year, except that the colored students formerly assigned to the all-colored school which has been closed will be shifted to the two white high schools.

The other parts of the plan which will go into effect in 1969-70 call for the geographical zoning of all junior and senior high schools.

"Certain elementary schools will be zoned in pairs starting in 1970-71.

School Superintendent Heyward Bellamy said the school board would "continue to do what's necessary to guarantee a child a good education."

WHILE THE Justice Department Friday was announcing from Washington that it had filed suits asking that "freedom of choice" desegregation plans in three South Carolina school districts be replaced this fall with speedier and more effective plan, the chairman of a group of Columbia citizens said he expected large support fro m three districts which the order affects.

JAMES H. SIKES, head of the "citizens for freedom of choice" group, said although he has received support from "all over the state"he felt residents of the three areas involved would strongly support the group's efforts.

The Justice Department earlier Friday announced it had filed suits asking that "freedom of choice" desegregation plans be replaced with speedier and more effective plans in Dorchester District One, Anderson District Three and the Allendale County District

A group of 1,500 angry parents held a meeting last week to protest Columbia's geographical plan which would send white students into formally all-colored classrooms for the first time.

Sikes said the group's steering committee would meet in closed session Sunday and another public meeting would be held in Columbia's Township Auditorium Monday August 12 at 8 p.m.

IN ATLANTA — The State Board of Education has ordered Walton County schools to show cause why its state funds should not be cut off because of failure to comply with a consolidation contract.

The board was asked today to dissolve the contract because the Walton County Schools are expecting a federal integration order which would conflict with the State agreement. The state board has not yet made any decision on the matter.

NAACP EXECUTIVE Director Roy Wilkins, left, and Ernest Kolowrat present folio of Martin Luther King Memorial Scholarship to Suzanne Langford, 15-year-old high school student of East Elmhurst, N.Y. The scholarship, sponsored by the American Institute of Foreign Study, will cover all expenses of a six-week summer study tour at leading universities and schools in seven European countries. Mr. Kolowrat is director of information of the AIFS.

B.D. degree replaced at ITC by new one

ATLANTA — Details of a new degree program were announced recently at the Interdenominational Theological Center from the office of Dean Charles B. Copher.

The Master of Divinity degree replaces the Bachelor of Divinity as the basic theological degree offered by the institution. The program of studies differs in several respects from that which led to the Bachelor of Divinity.

The student may regularly complete the program of study in three years after graduation from college as in the older program.

Students must, however, do two things not required previously: (1) complete 40 hours regularly during the first two years in a "core" which is distributed across the white curriculum; (2) do nine hours concentration above the core in a selected field.

Job opportunities improve at Department of Labor

WASHINGTON — Job opportunities for colored people within the U.S. Department of Labor have increased substantially over the past seven years as a result of the agency's equal employment opportunity program according to Labor SEcretary Willard Wirtz.

The Secretary cited a recent survey of the Department's work force revealing that for the first time a substantially higher prcentage of colored workers (61.5 percent) are in middle and upper grades, while only 38.5 percent are occupying the lower-grade positions they dominated as recently as 1961.

Comparing the grade distribution of colored within the Department between 1961 and 1968, the survey shows that the number of colored workers in grades GS-5 through 11 had increased from 339 (or 29.4 percent of the colored workers) in 1961 to 1173 (or 51.1 percent) in 1968, for an increase of 21.7 percent.

* * *

IN GRADES G-12 through 18 the number had increased from 24 (or 2 percent) in 1961 to 237 (or 10.4 percent) in 1968, for an increase of 887.5 percent.

In 1961, the race comprised 18.1 percent of the total Labor Department work force, while today that figure has risen to 24.11 percent, or an 86.3 percent increase. While in 1961 some 56.7 percent of all employees of the Department were in grades GS-4 and below, that figure today has dropped to 38.5 percent.

The survey was conducted to measure the results of the Department's equal opportunity employment program, initiated in response to Executive Order 10925 of March 6, 1961. This Order stated that it was the "plain and positive obligation of the Government to promote and ensure equal opportunity."

* * *

THIS ORDER was followed and strengthened by Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, and Executive Order 11246 in 1965, which pointed the way to an affirmative and active equal employment program within the Federal government itself.

In 1961, when Executive Order 10925 was issued, the uneven distribution of colored workers was the result of the small number of qualified minority applicants for high-level positions.

This lack stemmed from the fact that no previous efforts had been made to contact minority colleges to reach the minority community, or to make clear to minority candidates that the Department meant what it said about equal employment opportunity.

Government employment procedures and Civil Service examinations were often cited as impediments to potential minority candidates. No studies had been made of backgrounds or the potential existing to move persons into higher-level positions. And no efforts had been made to encourage minority participation in training and development programs.

* * *

HOWEVER, THROUGH the active efforts to assure equal employment opportunity, the staffing patterns of the Department had changed significantly by 1968.

In 1968, the Department began to initiate programs which will provide entrance and training opportunities for the disadvantaged of the communities in which the Department is located. Those completing such programs will be provided meaningful career positions with potential for upward mobility.

Today, Mr. Wirtz said, new ways of providing equal employment opportunities are continually being sought by the Department, while methods which have previously succeeded are being continued in all areas of the Department.

NAACP wants Illinois Guard funds withheld

CHICAGO (NPI) — The NAACP has asked that federal funds be withheld from the Illinois National Guard.

Charging racial discrimination by state guard units, the NAACP's Chicago office said "Segregation is the rule, not the exception, in the National Guard of this state."

Investigation of guard units in 19 Illinois cities "substantiated allegations of discrimination completely," the NAACP said, in a letter to U.S. Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford.

THE CHARGES were based on a three-week investigation by Brig. Gen. Raymond Watkins (retired), a black man and former guard officer.

According to the NAACP, (Guard) units situated in integrated, and ironically, all-black neighborhoods are virtually all-white in membership and command.

"Recruitment policies simply are not designated to reach the black community nor have the individuals responsible for recruitment made any reasonable effort to reach that community," the letter stated.
