Gadabouting U.S.A.

by Lula Jones Garrett

Earlene Franette Cox (she's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl E. Cox of Fort Barnwell, North Carolina) had a lot of dreams wrapped up in a pretty package, last week. She received a degree in home economics from A and T State University in Greensboro, she received a teaching position in Gatesville, N.C., but most of all, she became the bride of 2nd. Lt. Warren Joseph Jones, Jr. The Rev. William Bell, Jr., director of the United Campus Christian Ministry at A and T, officiated at the wedding which took place in the reception room of Vanstory Hall on the campus. Lt. Jones, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Sr., of Greensboro, was graduated from A and T in June, and commissioned in the U.S. Army. He is presently employed by Westinghouse Learning Corp in Raleigh.

Add to campus romances, the marriage of Jarvis Christian College sophomore Bessie Douglas and Julius Cotton. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Douglas of Baton Rouge, La., is a math major, who plans to specialize in computer programming.

Prices on the loose at GOP convention

By SAM FOGG

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The local chamber of commerce said that Miami Beach merchants, hotels, restaurants and night spots were "holding the line" on prices during the Republican National Convention last week.

If so, it was a pretty steep line.

The coffee shop menu in a large hotel offered these prices: hard boiled egg sandwich, 90 cents; French fries, 40 cents; corned beef or pastrami, $3.50; coffee, 25 cents. Below this notation, "To guide your tipping. In answer to many requests, we respectfully suggest the following: (per person) breakfast, 35 cents; lunch, 45 cents; dinner, 75 cents.

DINNNER AT a first rate hotel dining room could cost $15 a person with no special extravagances.

Open handed tipping was not frowned on in Miami Beach. It was expected. If a snack ran to $2.95 and you handed the waiter a ten spot, he returned with a five, 2 ones and a nickel on the tray. He didn't expect you to leave the nickel and you didn't intend to leave the five which left his option; which one of the ones was he going to get.

HOTELS STERNLY inveighed against guests taking towels from their rooms to poolside. Beach towels could be obtained from the beach boys, the sign said. That beach boy had both hands out — and only one had a towel in it.

The nightclubs soaked visitors $2 per drink — even for beer. The taxis charged 40 cents a mile on the beach; 50 cents a mile a Miami. They wore a sign in small print telling customers that during convention week they were entitled to deduct a dime from the fare showing on the meter. There was no reason why you shouldn't have done it — if you were big, healthy, strong and indifferent to what anyone says about you.

THE HAPPIEST visitor in town was the reporter who deposited his dime in a pay phone got a busy signal and hung up to get his coin back. Two dimes fell into the coin return pocket. For one brief shining moment, he was 10 cents up on Miami Beach.

But he didn't have the character to quit when he was ahead. He put two quarters in a cigarette vending machine and didn't get either the 50-cents-a-pack cigarettes or his money back.
