Drop market owner from stamp plan

A Baltimore County retailer has been disqualified from participation in the Federal Food Stamp Program because of program violations, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced.

The disqualified retailer is Leonard Kabik, owner of Eddie's Super Market in Dundalk.

The retailer allegedly accepted food coupons for ineligible items, accepted loose $2.00 coupons for food stamp transactions and gave excess due bills in food stamp transactions.

The disqualification is for a 30-day period, according to Philip B. Hearn, who, as Northeast District director for Consumer Food Programs, USDA, administers the food stamp projects in this area.

After the 90-day disqualification period, Mr. Kabik may apply for reinstatement. If approved, he will be issued a new authorization card and number.

Hearn said the disqualification does not preclude further action to collect claims under food stamp regulations or possible prosecution under any criminal or other applicable statute.

$50,000 in stolen loot recovered

After an exhaustive investigation police in several raids last week apprehended at least five persons and recovered an estimated $50,000 in goods stolen from Northern Baltimore City and Baltimore County residences during the last two months.

Two raids conducted on Tuesday netted a large portion of the stolen property and resulted in the apprehension of Mrs. Pearl E. Cole, 61, of the 4000 block Liberty Heights Ave., and her two married daughters — Mrs. Camille J. Jones, 28, of the same address as Mrs. Cole; and Mrs. Yvonne Bright, 40, of the first block of S. Morley St., according to police.

The three women are being held under a total $11,500 bail.

Additional raids on Wednesday and Thursday resulted in additional goods being recovered and the apprehension of John Cole, also of the 4000 block Liberty Heights Ave., and Edward Flynn, of the 400 block S. Collington St., police said.

The two men were charged on Friday — Mr. Cole on nine counts of breaking and entering, under $15,000 bail; and Mr. Flynn, on one count of breaking and entering and one count of auto larceny, under $6,000 bail.

Police records of seven of the burglaries in the Northern District indicate that the suspects allegedly operated almost exclusively during daylight hours, when the residents were not in the home.

Items stolen were apparently carefully chosen: a $2,500 diamond ring, $400 and $500 ladies wrist watches, a console television set.

Detectives of the city CID and the Baltimore County Police said their first break in the case occurred when an auto was sighted at two closely-spaced breaking-and-enterings in Baltimore County.

The auto, which was later impounded in Baltimore City for improper parking, was found to have been stolen and then illegally registered, police said.

The stolen goods — glitteringly displayed at the Central Police Station — included jewelry, watches, televisions sets and tape recorders, revolvers, furs, radios, cameras.

Raiders crash fortress to get dope suspects

Today (Tuesday) at 3 p.m. in Western District Police Court, the presiding magistrate will hear four cases which stem from a narcotics squad raid in the 1400 block Bruce St. last Friday.

The four detectives armed with a search and seizure warrant arrived at the two story brick house at 4 p.m. but had "a time of it" as one of them said, getting inside.

"It was a fortress," a detective told the AFRO, adding, "Some of the clients got inside but most of the folks wanting a 'bag' had to deal through a hole in the back or front door screens or window screens."

Described also as a "shooting gallery" where addicts go to use or obtain "stuff," the house was so well braced and barried against unwanted entry, it took the officers nearly five minutes to break the front door down with a 12-pound sledge hammer. Then the door came off the hinges.

The back door, according to the raiders, was fortified by a horizontal iron bar. All windows were covered with ½ inch wire mesh, they stated.

One of the rear windows had sheets of plywood that folded back so customers outside could be supplied from inside with ease.

Pieces of 2 by 4's were nailed horizontally on the back of the front door which was also further fortified by sheets of plywood and three-by-six wood blocks nailed for braces.

According to police reports, the house was without furniture except for a couple of lawn chairs and a table.

One of the four men apprehended bears the nickname of a famous Walt Disney character and is reported by the detectives to have had $537 in his pocket.

* * *

ACCORDING to police investigators the house which was under three-weeks observation is a part of the operation of the heavy dope traffic in the area of Fulton Ave. and Baker St.

The 1400 block Bruce St. is populated by families and a great number of children who appeared happy to see the raid come and bring at least a temporary halt of the comings and goings of "all kinds of characters" day and night, police state.

One of the raiding officers said a large crowd of adults and "about a million kids" stood by to watch them enter the fortress and bring out suspects from the house that had become a mysterious place in recent weeks.

Police also report the raid netted capsules and white powder.

Two men in the back yard were not apprehended and were possibly "clients" who had arrived for purchases through the back screen hole, the raiding officers said.

Congress, judgeship races top primary

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO Political Analyst

Exactly one week from today (Tuesday), Democrat and Republican voters will be going to the polls in Baltimore and throughout Maryland to cast ballots in the state's belated Sept. 10 primary.

They will be selecting party nominees for the U.S. Senate and for Congress in Maryland's eight districts.

In addition, 3rd, 4th and 7th District ballots in the city will carry candidates for judgeships on the Supreme Bench and People's Court.

This will be Maryland's first primary to come after the national conventions of both parties and the already selected Democratic and Republican presidential nominees.

The General Assembly moved the primary from May to September, after Alabama's former Gov. George C. Wallace came in the state four years ago and captured 42 percent of the Democratic vote in his presidential bid for the Maryland delegation.

Consequently, Maryland voters were denied a presidential primary this year.

As a result, any assessment of voter interest in next Tuesday's balloting will likely be determined on a district level in congressional and judgeship races.

* * *

GENERALLY CONCEDED at this point is that no upsets are forthcoming in the state-wide senate race.

The Democrats' sen. Daniel B. Brewster is seen winning nomination handily, and the Republicans' Congressman Charles McC. Mathias, bidding for his party's senate nomination, is also seen as a frontrunner.

In the city, top interest, such as it is, centers on the candidacies of Parren J. Mitchell, trying for the Democratic congressional nomination in the 7th District.

Joseph C. Howard bidding for the supreme Bench and Archie D. Williams running for the People's Court judgeship in city-wide races.

Significantly, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, angered by protests from the colored community over his late unsympathetic attitude, has made three white appointments to the Supreme Bench since Mr. Howard entered the race.

Mr. Howard is a former assistant state's attorney of recognized note, and a veteran atortney of indisputable ability.

Two of Gov. Angew's recent judgeship appointments are virtually unknown in court house circles.

UP IN the 7th District, Mr. Mitchell is making a strong bid to wrest the Democratic congressional nomination from the man who has held the seat since the district was created — Congressman Samuel N. Friedel.

He is aided in this by still another strong contender for the Friedel post, Alan M. Resnick, a member of the House of Delegates.

Some early observers see a splitting of votes between Messrs. Friedel and Resnick.

All of the district's colored Democratic voters, however, are not in Mr. Mitchell's corner.

There are some colored politicos of sorts who are openly campaigning for the Friedel nomination. Mr. Resnick also has friends in this community.

Whatever the repercussions resulting from the Republican and, more reasonably, the Democratic conventions could be felt in the degree of voter turnout in next Tuesday's primary.

Citizens in these parts have demonstrated in recent years a marked apathy toward primaries.

The Republicans' coming up with a Nixon-Agnew presidential ticket, and the police state tactics surrounding the Democratic convention in Chicago a few days ago are not likely to enhance voter interest.

Two other colored candidates are also in city congressional races.

DeHaven L. Smith, an attorney, is a Democratic candidate in the 4th District. Ernest D. Young, a former Democratic House of Delegates member, is now a Republican candidate in the same district.

Agnew seen aiming for Dixie vote

Last week, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew made a whirlwind tour into the mid-west in an effort to firm up party ties and promote unity among Republicans.

While his major speech before the Michigan Republican State Convention in Grand Rapids and brief talks to Ohio party faithfuls were not traditional campaign speeches, the technique and issues Mr. Agnew plans to throw against the Democrats did emerge.

The Vietnam War, crime in the street, alleged domination of state affairs by the Federal Government, protests to achieve social justice, and fiscal responsibility will constitute his list of issues.

* * *

MR. AGNEW will attempt to erase the charge that he is a racist, but his campaign format will be designed to appeal to southerners as well as other conservatives.

If his tour of Republican strongholds can be used as a barometer, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee will project an air of confidence, calmness, unity, and dependability when he and Richard M. Nixon open their quest for the White House.

With the exception of two paragraphs in which he plugged local politicians and predicted overwhelming victory for the GOP in

Candidates poll backs Humphrey

While Democrats were locked in a violence-punctuated struggle to field a ticket with the best chance of turning back the bid of the Republican's Richard M. Nixon and Spiro T. Agnew, a select number of AFRO readers were having equal difficulty making up their minds.

The AFRO's man on the street queried 26 persons at the Mondawmin Shopping Center one day before the Democrats nominated Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to head their ticket.

Mr. Humphrey subsequently chose Maine's Sen. Edmund S. Muskie for his running mate.

While readers offered 11 Democratic ticket combinations, none mentioned Sen. Muskie, now serving his second term as U. S. Senator after serving the New England state as governor for two terms.

* * *

THE DIVERSITY of suggested slates notwithstanding, all except two readers agreed on Vice President Humphrey as the party's standard bearer.

Of the two dissenters, one felt that a slate of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, lone surviving brother of the Brothers Kennedy, and who spurred both the Presidential and Vice Presidential nominations, should head the ticket with Mr. Humphrey in the second spot.

Another thought that a duplicate of the present team of President Lyndon B. Johnson and Mr. Humphrey would have the inside track against the Nixon-Agnew slate.

* * *

ONE READER, who prefaced her choices with the observation that Democrats need to "counter balance" the Republican choice of Gov. Agnew, suggested the unusual combination of Mr. Humphrey and Georgia's Lester Maddox.

Other choices included slates headed by Mr. Humphrey but including T. Sargent Shriver, U.S. Ambassador to Paris, 1; Humphrey and Sen. Kennedy, 4; Humphrey and Gov. Hughes of Iowa, 1; Humphrey and Sen. George McGovern, 1; Humphrey and Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, 1.

Still another reader chose the slate of Humphrey and Sen. McCarthy, but also reversed the order with Mr. McCarthy at the head of

Expressway shifts anger MAD group

City housing commissioner Robert C. Embry's recent statement of assurance that Rosemont would not be destroyed by the proposed East-West Expressway was branded Tuesday as inadequate by Movement Against Destruction (MAD) chairman Stuart Wechsler.

Mr. Wechsler, discussing the aims of the movement and the general shortcomings of the proposed highway, expressed mild gratification that some response to citizen demands was being voiced by the city, however.

MAD Chairman Wechsler stressed the need for greater citizen participation, noting that the proposed routes of the expressway follow the path of

Hate business not what it used to be

From a small two-storied structure on Southwest Baltimore's Eastern Ave. — the Vinland Bookstore, an establishment licensed by the state of Maryland — a young man named Joe Carroll directs the activities of the National States' Right Party (the NSRP) throughout the northeastern U.S., and the Maryland presidential campaign of George Wallace.

According to Mr. Carroll, the foundation of the NSRP's platform is unabashed racism. He pronounces himself a racist in the same tone as someone else might call himself a liberal or a conservative, a Democrat or a Republican, or even an existentialist.

And, indeed, the literature available at the bookstore supports Mr. Carroll.

A sampling of this literature reveals "experts" quoted from technical works published decades ago. Results of IQ tests are cited without mention of what is felt by many today to be the inherent trouble with such tests — i.e., that they index 'middle class' IQ.

In innumerable instances in the literature, the writer refers to the international conspiracy, by now common in the literature of the "lunatic right" — the conspiracy of non-whites led by Jews — which will inevitably foment a world-wide war of races.

Mr. Carroll describing his career with the NSRP, said that he is presently awaiting the appeal of the two-year sentence passed upon him for inciting a riot, "two years ago."

The narrative of the NSRP as told by Mr. Carroll is one of ten years of white righteousness and harassment by authorities.

Sadly shaking his head over pictures in a spurious pulp showing the infamous church bombing in Birmingham, where four children were killed, he said, "We had a goor thing there, until the Klan came along and bombed that church."

Asked about membership in the NSRP, Mr. Carroll declined to discuss numbers.

He asserted, however, that he never encountered difficult in encouraging people to join the NSRP on purely racist grounds.

The Klan, according to Mr. Carroll, however, is "falling apart."

And perhaps the NSRP, if not also falling apart, is not the power it would like to be.

The Vinland Bookstore — "Vinland' from the name given this continent by early Nordic explorers — could hardly be called luxurious.

The structure's downstairs consists of a sparsely appointed front room — three card tables with selections of Wallace and NSRP literature in neat piles on them; a desk, from which Mr. Carroll sounds dire warnings pointing up the necessity of all whites to join together; an armchair and lamptable.

Behind the front room is a smaller room, in which what appears to be a mimeograph machine sits.

Although Mr. Carroll declared that blacks "do not have the 'guts'" to approach the bookstore, its door is kept locked, 24 hours a day, and opened only after examination of the caller.

"Black people can expect to get nothing decent out of Spiro T. Agnew as long as he holds public office."

PROPHETIC—Freedom Ticket candidates Archie D. Williams, Parren Mitchell, and Joseph C. Howard seeking victory in today's election for nomination to the People's Court, the Baltimore Supreme Bench and the 7th Congressional District, respectively, struck what they and their supporters hope were prophetic poses Sunday night at a testimonial in honor of Mitchell.

Limp body found dangling from rope

A Cherry Hill mother yesterday nimbly provided motherly attentions to two of her remaining seven children as she relived the Sunday noon tragedy that took the life of her 13-year-old son as he was playing in the house.

The boy, Darnell Ezra Mills, was pronounced dead at South Baltimore General Hospital after he had strangled himself in a closet of the home in the 3400 block of Spellman Rd.

Mrs. Carrie A. Mills, the distraught mother, insisted that the eight-grade student was "too intelligent" to have hung himself on purpose.

Mrs. Mills said that the youth had frequently played with a worn-out clothesline in the past, although she had told him to throw it away.

She said the tragedy occurred after or about 11:30 a.m. She had told the boy that he would have to wait "until your clothes dry" to go outside and play.

He seemed to accept her ruling, Mrs. Mills said, and went to the second-floor bedroom to play, accompanied by his eight-year-old brother, who later found him unconscious.

The younger brother, Donnie, came downstairs for about 10 minutes, Mrs. Mills said, then returned upstairs to play with his brother.

However, the mother said, the youngster quickly came down again to her in the kitchen and told her his brother was in the closet and wouldn't speak to him.

She ran upstairs and found young Ezra hanging by a clothesline rope in the closet.

Although his feet were touching the floor, he was completely limp, with all his weight on the rope around his neck, his mother said.

An older brother, Mich-

Moderate voting due

Maryland voters are expected to turn out in light to medium numbers today to cast their ballots in primary elections for congressmen and senators.

Two areas that expect large turnouts include hotly contested races for Congress in the 7th and 4th Districts in Baltimore.

Called an election of "national significance" is the contest between Parren J. Mitchell and incumbent Representative Samuel N. Friedel in the 7th Congressional District.

Observers give Mr. Mitchell, a young black politican who headed Baltimore's anti-poverty agency, a good chance to defeat his opponent.

Loyall Randolph, assistant chief clerk of the Board of Election Supervisors, told the AFRO that they expect a turnout of 40 per cent of the eligible

Off-duty officers beat 17 militants

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — "Law and order" came to Brooklyn Wednesday in the shocking form of some 200 off-duty policemen wielding hard-rubber blackjacks against the heads and bodies of 17 defenseless members of the Black Panther organization and their young white friends.

Some of the policemen wore Wallace for President buttons.
