Neighbors harass, threaten new tenant, family in N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Horace Caple didn't like the house he now rents, but he had to take it because there wasn't anything else. The neighbors didn't like the drama professor moving into the neighborhood. Caple claims, because of his race.

The FBI joined the investigation of harassment of Caple, a professor at Shaw University, and his family by neighbors in an all-white neighborhood in East Raleigh. The Caples moved into the section last week on arrival from Charlotte where he had taught at a high school.

Robert Murphy, special agent in charge of the Charlotte division FBI office, said the U.S. Justice Department had asked his men to investigate the matter. This, he said, is a standard procedure.

"The day we moved in here neighbors began calling us 'N——rs' and the drama professor said in Charlotte," Caple said, shouted for us to get back on his wife, who also teaches at Shaw, and their two children had been threatened.

"And my wife came home the other day and said the realtor who rented us the house had been threatened," said Caple. "I'm almost sorry I came to Raleigh. The new job was a promotion, but now I'm disillusioned."

* * *

AN EFFIGY was hung in a tree on the block. It was removed later when FBI agents visited Caple's home. "No trespassing" signs appeared overnight in the neighborhood, Caple said.

Caple met with the Mayor's Human Relations met with "legal advisers" met with "legal davisers" at Shaw on the college campus and at his home.

Raleigh police, who say they have been aware of the situation and have maintained a round the clock surveillance of the neighborhood, but no arrests have been made.

Murphy said his men were investigating to see if there were any violations of the 1968 Civil Rights Act which forbids interference with the exercise of one's rights. Open housing became the law of the land last summer.

CORE gives full support to candidacy of Farmer

NEW YORK — For the first time in its history, the Congress of Racial Equality has endorsed a Congressional candidate.

Speaking at a sidewalk press conference on Gates Ave., in the Bedford Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, National Director Roy Innis announced that his civil rights organization stood 100 per cent behind the candidacy of James Farmer in his quest to become the first non-white Congressman to represent this underprivileged area.

"In recognizing the significance of the Nov. elections in relationship to colored people, CORE has abandoned its long-standing policy of non-participation in political elections and has decided to campaign actively for Mr. Farmer's election in the 12th Congressional District of Brooklyn," said Innis.

"CORE believes that Mr. Farmer's candidacy offers colored people of Brooklyn a long awaited alternative to the unrepresentative and unresponsive leadership that has perpetuated oppressive ghetto situation and prevented the natural evolution of a potentially beautiful colored Community," he added.

STRESSING THE need of an articulate and informed person to represent the nation's largest colored ghetto, Farmer told reporters that he will flout his campaign on bad housing, inferior schooling, the lack of jobs and the bringing of colored owned businesses to the community.

Acquainted with his name and record as a leader in the colored Revolution every one indicated that they're in complete accord with his program to uplift the community, from its slum area designation into one that will make a worthwhile contribution to better living in all its facets.

Sheriff wins runoff in Ga,

ATLANTA (UPI) — Fulton County Sheriff Leroy Stynchcombe won a Democratic runoff primary victory over a colored opponent Wednesday night, but a Carrollton farmer beat veteran legislator William Wiggins.

Stynchcombe surged ahead of bondsman Alley Pat Patrick with 179 of the county's 198 precincts in, after trailing in the first returns. The count was 34,470 votes for Stynchcombe, 23,101 for Patrick.

Patrick, a former disc jockey who edged one-time Ku Klux Klan leader Calvin Craig two weeks ago to win the runoff, grabbed a 300-vote lead shortly after the polls closed.

But Stynchcombe fathered strength, and with 42 precincts counted, pulled ahead. He now will face a Republican opponent in November, E. O. Mullen.

Unique internship program introduced at Penn. State

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa — To introduce able science and engineering students to one of the largest new interdisciplinary fields of research on American college campuses — solid state science — a research internship program was held at The Pennsylvania State University during the summer months.

Eight science students participated, becoming involved in the program of research of the Materials Research Laboratory at the University.

The participants, it is explained, were outstanding science students recommended by faculties of their own colleges, where research facilities at the graduate level were limited. Each student worked closely with his faculty adviser in carrying out independent research.

Their projects encompassed such areas as clay mineralogy, analytical work with the scanning electron microscope, crystallographic models, and hydrothermal growth.

Four hours of each five-day week were devoted to lectures and seminars, which included computer programming and back-up work in chemistry, physics, and mathematics.

The students' reaction to the program at the end of the summer was unanimously enthusiastic.

* * *

"I THINK THE PROGRAM at Materials Research Laboratory is a program that should be attempted by other large universities," said one. "It has given me some insight on graduate work and strengthened my desire to go to graduate school."

Another participant wrote: "The program has given me my first taste of scientific research, the feeling of work without direct supervision, and the feeling of responsibility. It has given me a chance to try something of my own."

The research interns came from Dillard University, New Orleans, La.; Grambling College, Grambling, La.; Earlham College, Richmond, Ind.; Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga.; Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Miss.; Tennessee A. and I. State University, Nashville, Tenn.; and Tuskegee Institute, Ala. One Penn State student, a junior in physics, also joined the program.

The students lived with faculty families during the summer. Hosts included Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Engman, Dr. and Mrs. John Lennox, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. John F. McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Schrader, and Dr. and Mrs. Herbert McKinstry.

"All of us — students, faculty, and host families — feel that the program has been a success," says Dr. Rustum Roy, director of the Materials Research Laboratory.

"It has introduced able students to research work at the graduate level and to the relatively new field of solid state science, and we believe it has attracted some of them to careers in research and technology," they said.

Dr. Bruce E. Knox, assistant professor of solid state technology, coordinated the program.

Enrolled in the program were Tom Shade III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shade, Jr., 83-B McKenzie St., Tuscaloosa, Ala., student at Earlham College; Jerome McK. Floyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Floyd, 985 Ross Ave., Bartow, Fla., student at Tuskegee Institute, and Arlington L. Finley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Finley, 1392 8th St., West Palm Beach, Fla., student at Tougaloo College.

From Georgia was George S. Willis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Willis, Sr., 71 Howard St., N.W., Atlanta, Ga., students at Morehouse College.

The others were: Andrew Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Turner, Rt. 1, Lutcher, La., student at Dillard University; Allen M. Miles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles, of 3425 Erato St., New Orleans, La., student at Grambling College; Keith Watts, son of Admiral and Mrs. A. Watts, 474 Mt. View Dr., Lewiston, N.Y., physics student at Penn State and Jacqueline E. Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldie M. Hill, 120 Stephenson St., Alcoa, Tenn., student at Tennessee A. and I. State University.

Fletcher Likely To Win Race For Lieut. Governor's Office

CAMPUS ORGANIZER — Typical of new breed of campus leaders taking active roles in political process, Craig Washington, president of the Texas Southern University student government in Houston, pledges support to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey during the presidential candidate's recent visit. Craig interviewed Humphrey on student panel.

PASCO, Wash. (UPI) — Arthur Fletcher, whose ghetto self-help projects were the model for the Republican "black capital" is platform, has become the first colored candidate nominated for statewide office in Washington, that of Lieutenant Governor, where only one resident in 50 is black.

Fletcher, 45, not only won the GOP nomination in the primary election, but shocked political experts by carrying every county.

And he became a pied piper of hope to residents of urban slums by providing an incentive for "the guy who dares to have the courage to dream."

The overwhelming primary victory over hydroplane pilot Bill Muncey brought an elated reaction from the self-assured Fletcher. This means we can put race on the shelf as a political factor in Washington State."

* * *

FLETCHER was as much at a loss to explain his victory as anyone, although Gov. Dan Evans implied—during the primary campaign—that he backed Fletcher's candidacy.

Some observers suggested that the appearance of a "responsible colored man" on the political scene in a state where the first tremors of racial unrest are being felt might have held a special voter appeal.

The burly former professional football player, who still has the build of a defensive end, faces an uphill battle to win an office which Lt. Gov. John A. Cherberg, a one-time University of Washington football coach seeking a fourth term in the office, has traditionally relied on a handshaking campaign and plans again this year to emphasize personal contact with the voters.

Cherberg has indicated the racial issue has no place in his campaign.

* * *

FLETCHER believes his campaign platform of making the office a liaison post between the people and the federal and state governments will win the support of a majority of the voters Nov. 5.

A man who scoffs at urban renewal as "black removal" and who has rejected poverty program funds because they are "so bound up in red tape," Fletcher hopes to build a bridge between the Republican Party and the black community.

It was Fletcher's East Pasco Cooperative Association which attracted the attention of Republican platform writers who helped provide impetus for the "black capitalism" concept of ghetto improvement being boosted by the GOP this campaign.

Fletcher's project is a cooperative effort begun nearly three years ago by residents of east Pasco who purchased shares in the project with their own dimes and dollars for what was destined to become a shopping center. One service station has been completed, work on another is underway and the cooperative is now working on a credit union and supermarket.

That same concept, which Fletcher likes to refer to as 'sweat equity,' has been broadened to help neighborhood of Spokane and other cooperatives are on the drawing board for other slum neighborhoods in the state.

Although he has expressed some reservations in the past about what the GOP has to offer the colored man, Fletcher is a member of a special minority groups committee formed as an advisory body for presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon.

As far as Fletcher is concerned, the flocking of colored people to the Democratic Party has created a situation in which Democrats have had to offer the colored man very little to get his support.

"We need to usher the two-party system back into the colored community so there is some competition for the colored vote," he said.

Quoting The Candidates

What the candidates are saying:

Hubert H. Humphrey, campaigning at Portland, Ore.: "Peaceful, nonviolent dissent is a right in this country, whether you like it or; whether you don't. But when people start to break up your meetings, to deny you the right to speak, and when they say they're going to lie down in the voting booth, provoke the police and make them drag them out, we are not talking of people who are democrats with a small d, we are talking of storm troopers, of American style Hitler youth."

Richard M. Nixon, to antiwar hecklers at Chattanooga, Tenn.: "Let's say to our friends who just came in here looking for peace: if they'll listen to me, they'll get peace."

Spiro T. Agnew, on Chief Justice Earl Warren in Washington: "What I quarrel with Mr. Warren about, is not his ability as a lawyer or judge, but his sensitivity as a Republican appointee. I don't see why — to be completely candid — that he couldn't have waited to resign until after November."

Edmund S. Muskie, campaigning at Ann Arbor, Mich.: "I know that the country is torn by war, poverty, unrest and discrimination. Mankind has never yet found a way to live together harmoniously. The adjustment period is going to mean some unrest, violence and injury. Too many Americans have forgotten this is the way we built a great country."

Monthly compensation payments for some 112,000 veterans with 100 percent service-connected disability will be increased from $300 to $400 in 1969.

VA payments to war veterans are not counted as income in determining whether dependent received half of his or her support from taxpayers.

National 4-H observance set

WASHINGTON — More than 75,000 Tar Heel 4-H members will join hands as three million youth in 50 states and Pureto Rico observe National 4-H Club Week, Oct. 6-12.

The 4-H'ers have chosen the theme, "4-H A World of Opportunity," points out Dr. T. C. Blalock, state 4-H leader at North Carolina State University. "Our focus is to expand 4-H to all boys and girls, ages 9 to 19, regardless of cultural, racial or economic background," he said.

Chevrolet introduces 1969.

Caprice. Match this, you other 69's!
There is no joy in the land of our competitors today. But let us ask you this.
Should we have made Caprice shorter instead of the longest Chevrolet ever built? Or adorned it with flashy nicknacks to make it look less expensive?
Just because competition doesn't, should we not have offered you washers to clean your headlights, new variable-ratio power steering, liquid tire chain you can apply to your rear wheels at the touch of a button?
Should we have given you less power, instead of the largest standard V8 in its field?
Some people think so.
