Where does Nixon stand on education?

In the back of the bus with Thurmond.

Where does Hubert Humphrey stand on education?

As he said when he accepted the nomination of his party: "There can be no compromise with the right of every American who is willing and anxious to learn to have a good education."

Humphrey wants to insure a quality education for every American from age four right on thru college.

Because Humphrey is for all the people. And not for the extremists.

Methodist Women issue annual call

NEW YORK — "The Call to Prayer and Self-Denial", one of the major annual observances of two women's organizations in The United Methodist Church, is scheduled for the week of October 27.

About 1,600,000 women in 36,000 local Women's Societies of Christian Service and Wesleyan Service Guilds in all 50 states are expected to participate. Started in 1887, the Call to Prayer and Self-Denial focusses on guided mission study, an offering for special world and national mission projects, and a deepened spiritual life.

THE CALL IS sponsored by the Women's Division of the United Methodist Board of Missions. The Division, one of four major units of the Board of Missions is the national policy-making body for Women's Societies and Guilds.

The theme of the 1968 Call to Prayer and Self-Denial is "Christ, the Giver of Life." Inspired, planners said, by the opportunities for special giving during the week and by a 1968-69 study book for United Methodist Women, Coming to Life, by Dr. Ernest W. Saunders, dean and professor of New Testament interpretation at Garrett Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.

THE TWO MAJOR events of the observance are the program meeting for interpretation of mission projects, for which a special offering will be made, and the Quiet Day, a service of prayer, meditation and a silent meal.

Each year the Women's Division designates certain mission projects in the United States and overseas as beneficiaries of the offering given as part of the call to Prayer and Self-Denial.

In 1967, the Call to Prayer and Self-Denial offering totalled $645,911.90.

Chi U. resumes summer school

CHICAGO — A special University of Chicago summer school program for youngsters from metropolitan disadvantaged areas has proved such a success that it is being continued through the autumn quarter.

Larry Hawkins, director of special programs in the college, said most of the high school students plan to continue in the program at the university during evenings and weekends. The first sessions started September 24.

"The youngsters this summer thought it was great," Hawkins said.

The summer school was financed by the university. The autumn program is being aided by a grant from the Olin Mathieson Foundation.

The summer program, sponsored by the College of the University, operated from July 1 to Aug. 16. During that time 75 students, ranging in age from 12 to 19, participated is what Hawkins described as a "group learning experience."

Say women's words have lasting effect

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — It was inevitable that university classrooms would one day be blessed with feminine charms and graced by the presence of inspiring young women.

It seems hard to believe that before the Civil War, fewer than a half-dozen colleges accepted women.

But now that higher education of women is apparent, what's the next step?

According to Purdue senior Linda Jo Mitchell, 'utilization' of that education is the next frontier for women. She speaks not about women's professional role as an engineer, teacher, or home economist — but about her ability to vocalize on social issues, world affairs and current problems.

* * *

CHALLENGES confronting our society, she believes, confound most women, and they just inherently underestimate the role they can play in changing the status quo.

Well, it's not that way for Linda Jo. Here's one college student who doesn't tiptoe through the forest of information — or misinformation — available on current issues. Instead, she plods ahead with a heavy hand to read, listen, worry and talk.

Talk. That's the magic word, she says, adding, "Women must try to change minds in their own communities. Their words can have a lasting effect."

* * *

MISS MITCHELL urges women who are concerned about the division of this country into two racial camps to let their voices be heard whether at a neighborhood coffee or large gathering at church or school.

Most important, says Miss Mitchell, is to reach those persons in responsible positions in the community.

"Talk is therapeutic," she contends, saying, "speak frankly, say what you think. And do so with a degree of honesty. If there is prejudice and bigotry, the best way to chop away at it is to recognize its existence."

CURRENTLY, her big project is a series of Thursday noon lectures on "The Black American," giving a little history of the background out of which each race has had to form its ideas and prejudices.

A typical luncheon topic might be "What is Black Separatism?" or "Can the Black Man Use Christianity?" Meetings are held at the University Presbyterian Church near the campus and are open to students, faculty and local citizens for 15 weeks.

IN ADDITION to the seminar Linda Jo spends 12 hours per week counseling students in the Office of Black Student Affairs at Purdue and 40 additional hours in similar campus activities.

A product of Gary's Tolleston high school, the humanities senior is familiar with the overwhelming problems in the urban ghetto, as well as problems of the black in a predominantly white community.

An outstanding student, she serves as historian of Mortar Board, is a student senator and works unceasingly for University Theater and Purdue Readers.

Miss Mitchell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Mitchell, 4441 West 19th Ave., Gary.

Students hear Mrs Walker

RALEIGH, N.C. — Mrs. Betty Walker was the speaker at the installation ceremony for the Shaw University Student Council, here, last week.

Mrs. Walker spoke on the Role of Black Student Leaders.

In doing so, she reminded the students of their inheritance from Malcolm X and Dr. Martin Luther King. Calling Princes of the Black race she said, "...I concluded that although our Princes have been taken from us in the most brutal way — the work of their hands and heart remain with us. So much time passes, yet so little seems to change. We must carry on."

* * *

IN CHALLENGING the new Council to service Mrs. Walker stated that, . . . the Government Association, like any other good Student governing body must concern itself with student problems on the campus — the full range of student life. In closing, she further challenged the student body, "to begin now to love ourselves and dedicate our lives to our liberation."

Donald Brent, new president of the Student Body, in accepting the challenge said that the aim of the group is to "create a unified student body," and that the challenge of leadership and trust was accepted with "dedication and vigor."

Ancorage gets aid for water

A $1 million loan from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will enable the City of Anchorage, Alaska, to solve its critical water shortage.

The money will assist the city in financing and constructing additions and extensions to the existing water system.

Poor get aid to buy homes

The National Homeownership Foundation was created by the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 to carry out a continuing program of encouraging private and public organizations to provide increased homeownership and housing opportunities for lower income families in urban and rural areas.

Homes insured

Mortgage insurance is now authorized, under any of the Federal Housing Administration's insurance programs, for the purchase, repair, rehabilitation, or construction of housing located in older, declining urban areas — without regard to normal requirements.

However, the FHA must find that (1) the area is capable of growth and development so as to provide adequate housing for families of low and moderate income, and (2) the property is an acceptable risk in view of this consideration.

$2.2 million for rural areas

Small communities in 38 States are using Federal and state sources of information and technical assistance to solve problems related to local government, community development and public management.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has encouraged this trend by making grants totaling $2.2 million to states or state-designated agencies during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1968.

The funds, made available under the Urban Information and Technical Assistance Program, are funneled to states to aid communities under 100,000 in coping with a broad variety of municipal problems.
