CITIZENS FOR HUMPHREY-MUSKIE, 1625 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. • Hon. Terry Sanford, Chairman

70 million Americans are working today.

That's still not enough.

Under the Democratic leadership of the last eight years, our work force has swelled to the highest level in history.

Similarly, unemployment has been reduced to the lowest rate in fifteen years.

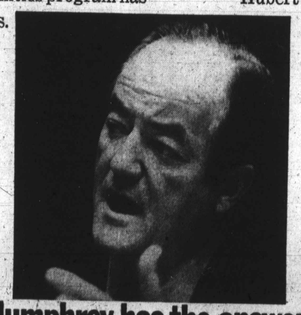
Much of this achievement stems from the Democratic leadership. And the policies Presidents Kennedy and Johnson have instituted.

Like the Job Corps. Designed to help young people who have not finished school acquire the skills for productive jobs, the Job Corps has done just that.

The Youth Opportunities program has helped create more jobs. So have the Fair Employment Practices Acts. So have employee retraining programs.

And all of this is good. But we need to create even more jobs to meet the needs of young people who will soon be joining the ranks of the employed.

Hubert Humphrey, leading a new Democratic Administration, can help achieve this.



Humphrey has the answer. Now give him the authority.

Mrs. Roger K. Williams cited for long community service

Baltimore — Mrs. Roger K. (Beryl) Williams was named "Woman of the Year", here, Saturday, in a contest sponsored by the Greyhound Lines and the AFRO-AMERICAN and designed to point up the contributions of women to the local community.

Runner up was Mrs. Harold (Flozella) Clark and second runner-up, Mrs. Bernice Thompson.

The selections were made by a panel of judges from several hundred nominations sent in by readers.

FIRST PLACE went to Mrs. Williams for exceptional leadership in many facets. Mrs. Williams, who is the wife of Dr. Roger K. Williams, chairman of the Department of Psychology at Morgan State College, is the first woman to become academic dean at that college. She is now the director of the evening and summer sessions. With Dr. Williams she wrote the manual used by freshmen at Morgan entitled "How to Take Tests."

In other fields Mrs. Williams has served as a volunteer at Crownsville State Hospital (music therapy), in the League of Women Voters (voters' information), in the Greater Baltimore YWCA. (as first vice president, chairman of the Personnel Committee, as member of the Committees of Administration of the North Area Center and International Area Center, as member of the Public Affairs Committee), in the Central Maryland Girl Scout Council (as leader and troop service director.)

MRS. WILLIAMS served as member and officer in the Wilson Park Savings Club, the Wilson Park Improvement Association, the Third District Democratic Council, the Northeast Baltimore Symphony Society, the Greater Northwood Community Council, the Faculty-Trustee Wives Club of Morgan State, the Urban League Guild, the Que-Etites, the Philomathians, the Baltimore Section, National Council of Negro Women, the Baltimore Alumnae Chapter, Delta Sigma Theta, the OPHA, UN Association of Maryland. She was a neighborhood doorbell ringer for drives, including the NAACP, Mothers' March on Polio, and United Communities Campaign. She expanded the community interest of her family by having as guests in her home students from Africa, Asia, and Europe.

* * *

SHE PARTICIPATED in the Maryland League of Women's Clubs for 20 years serving as officer, chairman, advisor, historian and president.

Placing many of these activities behind as the increased responsibilities and relationships of her job required, she is now involved in developing programs for women's activities and continuing education for women as well as programs for the opportunities of students. Her interest is in the "now" for community life and in the immediate future which is the 21st century.

MRS. CLARK was cited for "conservation of human resources" and lauded for her involvement with children, families and foster parents.

Since 1943, Mrs. Clark has worked with the Children's Division of Family and Children's Society of Baltimore City. She has also worked with unwed mothers and helped them release their children for adoption, and is credited with seeing scores of children to fruitful adult life.

THIRD PLACE went to Mrs. Thompson, who has, on a volunteer basis, aided children of all races in the inner city. Mrs. Thompson is currently on the faculty of the Coppin State College, and serves on local and national levels of the Baltimore Urban League.

The ladies were cited at a luncheon in the Belvedere-Sheraton Hotel, Saturday.

JOE BLACK of the Greyhound Lines addressed the guests, particularly pointing out to them the extreme necessity of each woman casting her vote in the November 5th election, and seeing to it that her neighbors also voted. He presented silver bowls to the honorees.

Mr. Black was introduced by Kenneth O. Wilson, vice president, advertising, of the AFRO-AMERICAN.

John H. Murphy, president of the AFRO-AMERICAN Publishing Co. presided. Another program participant was Mrs. Anethia Williams, who gave the invocation and benediction in poetry. Mrs. Anna Clinkscales, president of the Baltimore section of the National Council of Negro Women, thanked the judges.

MRS. BERYL WILLIAMS, "Woman of the Year" arrives at hotel for luncheon and is escorted by John H. Murphy 3rd, president of the AFRO-AMERICAN.

Dr. Walker goes to Justice post

BALTIMORE — Dr. Dollie R. Walker who resigned from the Baltimore School's Community Schools Division in September, is now education specialist for the United States Justice Department in the Division of Community Relations.

The position will give her the opportunity to utilize her skills both as a community organizer and educator.

Her focus will be with field representatives in 34 large cities throughout the United States.

Government assignments are not new to Dr. Walker. She served as a research and program specialist, Office of Equal Educational Opportunities, Health, Education and Welfare from March, 1965 to 1966 and since then has served as consultant to the U.S. Department of Education across the Board.

ONE OF Dr. Walker's Ad Hoc assignments entailed heading a team which not only desegregated Anne Arundel County but several other counties throughout the state. The State NAACP applauded her efforts.

The late Baltimore Superintendent Laurence G. Paquin recognized Dr. Walker's talent and creative abilities and appointed her as a liaison to work with Johns Hopkins University Center on School Reorganization.

In addition, she wrote proposals and ideas for innovative programs.

She did a ten year study of Pupil and Staff Desegregation in the Baltimore Public Schools 1955-1965.

Three publications have emanated from this effort. The first was a detailed evaluation, edited by McDill, Stenchcomb and Walker that was published by Johns Hopkins University Press. Two other articles appeared in the fall issues of the Journal of Sociology and the Journal of Social Forces.

* * *

IT WAS Dr. Walker whom the late Dr. Paquin chose to help John O. Hopkins set in motion the concept of "community controlled school complexes."

Dr. Walker surveyed the needs and wants of 6000 persons living in the radius of six community schools. This survey was done by sixty community workers mostly paraprofessionals, who also acquainted the respondents with the goals of community schools.

Dr. Walker, who served on four National Committees of the National Association of Social Workers, is much in demand as a speaker.

She has served as a consultant to nearly every well known civil rights organization in the city and found time to serve on the Advisory Board of the William L. Moore Educational Center, the Mayor's Task Force on Equal Rights and Social Welfare, Education Committee of Model Cities Program and the Over 60 Employed Service.

* * *

AS AN educational specialist in Programs and Resources of the Justice Department, Dr. Walker's beginning salary is $19,200 with a maximum of $25,711.

Dr. Walker is the wife of Dr. Alexander J. Walker, professor of Political Science at Morgan State College. They have a son, Douglas, who is a senior at the Park School, Brooklandville.
