Gadabouting U.S.A.

by Lula Jones Garrett

She could become the first black British Viscountess.

Lovely 21-year-old Elizabeth Vambe, a native of Highfield, an african township near Salisbury, Rhodesia, was married to David Stephen Pollack, son of the second Viscount, Lord Hanworth, in Lonodn, England, Saturday. The bridegroom is 22. As the wife of Lord Hanworth's only son, the new Mrs. Pollock would become Viscountess should her husband assume the family title. She has lived in London for the past nine years.

WITH THE LADIES: She works like a beaver, sometimes 18 hours a day, breathes politics and is confident of her election and the entire Democratic ticket on Nov. 5. That in a capsule is the description of Fannie G. Jones of East St. Louis, Ill., school teacher, who seeks to become the first non-white elected clerk of the Illinois Supreme Court... a $20,000-a-year post. Having won in the primaries, Miss Jones has campaigned in practically all of the 103 Illinois counties, traveling by plane, train, bus, automobile and even on foot.

Her political pluses include organizational know-how, administrative ability, experience of working with youth, and a bubbling personality. A Baptist, Miss Jones has been a youth worker in the Illinois State Convention, National Baptist Convention USA, and in politics since she was 21. She firmly rejects the proposition that politics is a man's world, and is as much at home in the rough-and-tumble political arena as she is in the school rooms of the Public Schools of East St. Louis, where she has taught for 22 years. A Tuskegee alummus, she has done post graduate work at St. Louis University and the University of Illinois.

LOIS LIBERTY JONES of New York City is a trend innovator. Her newest is "Coiffures Aframéricana"... and with her husband, John Henry Jones, (journalist and critic) in publishing "Our Crowning Glory — Natural Hair Beauty." The tome is a histrical and scientific, but popularly oriented study of African and Aframéricaan hairdressing styles and concepts.

Researching the book, she studied cosmetic practices of several African tribes, including the Mangbettus, the Bahima, the Yorubas and the Watussi. Then she studied the techniques of the Frenchman, Marcel, as well as the innovations of the American greats — Madam C. J. Walker, Mrs. Annie Malone and Madam Sarah Spencer Washington.

Pointing out that Parisians have begun using the African motif in clothing, hairstyles and makeup, indicating that general copying of African practices in this country is not far behind, Mrs. Jones observed "I hope we don't begin copying African hair styles and makeup from Europeans. This is our thing. Let's develop it and benefit from it both psychologically and financially."

ADD TO those unsung beauties that add to the attractiveness of college games, a cutie from Lakewood, N.J., Gloria Herring, who is a cheerleader at Winston-Salem State College (North Carolina).

Add to pretties who have broken the bars, Emily Bates of Chicago, who, last week, was elected Homecoming Queen at Luther College. She will reign over homecoming activities, including the Luther-Simpson game.

And the hosts of the week, Dr. M. Maceo Nance Jr. president of South Carolina State College, Orangeburg, and Mrs. Nance, whose luncheon honoree, last week, was Jackie Robinson. The former major league baseball player was in South Carolina for two days campaigning for the Humphrey-Muskie Democratic Presidential ticket.

Mrs. LaSharon Mason Holt of 2509 Edmondson Ave., flew to Hawaii from Friendship Airport, Baltimore on Friday to spend some time with her husband SP/4 Edward Holt. He is on his way to Hawaii from Vietnam where he had been with the U.S. forces since February this year. Mrs. Holt, an employee of Western Electric, will vacation with her soldier-husband before returning to Baltimore on Nov. 2. The couple's eight-month-old baby daughter is being cared for by her grandmother, Mrs. Edith Mason.

Miss GLORIA HERRING (Pert cheer leader)

Mrs. WILLETTE T. MERRITT (Award winner)

Miss FANNIE JONES (Seeks court post)

Miss LOIS JONES (Innovates style)

Miss NANCY COLLINS (Delaware Queen)

Free to wed

LITTLE ROCK (NPI) — Michael David Higgins, 20, and Susan Elizabeth Lane, 19, are now free to marry, with parental consent.

The state had tried to keep the interracial couple from marrying, but a federal court, citing a recent decision by the nation's highest tribunal, struck down the state law.

Media Women cite Founder

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — The National Association of Media Women officially conferred upon Mrs. Rhea Callaway of New York City the title of "Founder" at the convention, held here, recently.

The resolution to honor Mrs. Callaway was sponsored by the Metropolitan New York Chapter, which pointed out her foresight in bringing about the organization as a means of creating a new climate of understanding among women in mass media and of encouraging and opening up opportunities for young women who wished to enter the field.

Mrs. Callaway served as national president during the first years and until the association was firmly established. The present president is Dr. Blanche B. Crayton.
