School employees graduate from union study program

The first union-sponsored training program for city workers came to a conclusion when 40 employees of the Baltimore City Board of Education recently completed an intensive 20-week course.

With a shortage of fully-trained personnel many workers unable to meet civil service requirements were, in effect, performing operating engineers' duties in the schools, according to the union.

Local 44, AFSCME, the union representing city employees, recognized the critical shortage of qualified operating engineers and initiated the program.

A series of meetings with representatives of Baltimore City, school officials, the federal government, and union leaders resulted in the training program.

After reviewing the union's program, the Civil Service Commission agreed to waive the usual examination required for such upgrading.

The fully-trained graduates will receive a wage increase of $1,633.00 per year.

In certain areas where public funds were not available, President Raymond Clarke of Local 44 made union money available to assure the continuation of this program.

Among many civic, educational, and union leaders attending the dinner and graduation ceremonies at the Sheraton Motor Inn on Saturday, Nov. 9, were:

Charles Della, president, Md. State and D.C. AFL-CIO; Dr. Saul M. Perdue, assistant superintendent of Business Management of Baltimore City Schools; Dan Zaccagnini, administrative assistant to the mayor; Ernest B. Crofoot, director of Council 67, AFSCME, AFL-CIO.

P. J. Ciampa, international field staff director of AFSCME, AFL-CIO;

Andy Lewis, treas., Md. State and D.C. AFL-CIO; Edward Bryant, personnel director, Baltimore City Schools.

Albert P. Hartke, manager, School Building Operations, city schools; Sylvester O'Grince, director school buildings and grounds; Elmer Jennings, assistant manager, School Building Operations and Louis J. Mellick, representative, AFSCME, AFL-CIO.

The union is one of those vying in a representation election for 3,000 members of the Department of Public Works Nov. 26.

Those who successfully completed the program were:

George F. Shackleford, John Wilman Gray, William Council, Emory H. Cooper, Jerome Griffin, Anthony J. Gardner, Clarence I. Smith, Luther Silcum, Kenneth A. DeGross, James B. Lee, James H. Jefferson, Junior Cecil Thomas;

DEATH SCENE — This is the apartment complex on Thorndale Rd. where tragedy exploded a love triangle last week causing the death of Mrs. Asylem Jason and injuries to a companion, James H. Snow, and her estranged husband, Edward Jason. The latter is in critical condition at Sinai Hospital. Mr. Jacon is accused of slaying his wife and inflicting head wounds on Mr. Snow.

Prizes for kids tonite at Clippers-Kings tilt

The Baltimore Clippers will present their second Kids Night of the hockey season tonight (Tuesday) when they play host to the Springfield Kings.

Garnishing the attraction which pits the Clippers against the Kings in an important Eastern Division game, will be a bevy of valuable prizes to be given away after the first period. The long list is headed up by a half dozen bicycles, radios, phonographs, a wrist watch and many other outstanding gifts.

KIDS NIGHT at a Clipper hockey game has become one of the season's top attractions at Civic Center.

Two years ago the first one drew a record capacity crowd of over 11,000.

And succeeding ventures have attracted between 9 and 11 thousand. Local merchants buy the tickets and then distribute them to the thousands of young hockey fans in this area through their own outlets.

ANY YOUNGSTER interested in coming to the game Tuesday should contact the various local outlets to pick up his or her ticket free of charge. The participating merchants are and have been announced daily over radio station WBAL which broadcasts the Clipper hockey games.

So, all youngsters are urged to contact WBAL to find out where tickets for Kids Night may be obtained.

MUND meeting with residents

The Model Urban Neighborhood's (MUND) newly elected members of the Neighborhood Development Corporation will be holding a series of mass meetings with the residents in their respective districts.

First such meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday at the Cecil Elementary School, 2000 Cecil Ave.

All residents who live in District 2 — bounded by North Ave. on the south, 25th St. on the north, Homewood Ave. on the east and Greenmount Ave. on the west — are requested to attend.

Residents attending will be able to meet the area's five representatives, voice ideas, goals and criticisms.

Further information may be had by calling 752-5752.

Nurses to host holiday party

The student nurses of the Johns Hopkins Hospital plan to make it a neighborhood Christmas in the East Baltimore community.

The nurses, part of a three-year course that prepares them for work as registered nurses, will hold a Christmas party for the neighborhood children on Dec. 8 at Hampton House, the dormitory at Broadway and Monument Sts. across from the hospital.

One of the nurses told the AFRO that presents, food, and drinks will be available from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the dormitory. No one would confirm the rumor that Santa Claus would attend.

Real Estate unit opens blood bank

A blood bank program has been initiated by the Real Estate Board of Greater Baltimore which will provide protection for realtors and their sales representatives as well as members of their immediate families, James P. O'Connor, head of the project, announced.

The program will be dedicated to the memory of Robert J. Seifert, a member of the Greater Baltimore Board, who died last year, he said.

Under the plan, the American Red Cross will replace the total blood needs of any family within the board's program provided 20 per cent of the protected members — or an immediate member of their family — contribute a minimum of one pint of blood annually.

The semi-annual Ingathering of the United Thank Offering of the Women of the Episcopal Church will be held at St. Andrew's Church on Tickneck Rd., Pasadena at 10:30 a.m., with the Rt. Rev. Harry Lee Doll, bishop of Maryland, celebrating Holy Communion.

YMCA day camp to get $$ donation

The first donation to the 1969 Black Rock YMCA Country Day Camp will be made by the Executives' Secretaries Inc. at an Executive Night banquet to be held at the Sheraton Belvedere Hotel Wednesday at 6:30 p.m.

The secretaries group will present a $100 check to Elmer Wingate, former Baltimore Colts star and chairman of the committee for the day camp, according to Miss Patricia Tartnino, president of the organization.

The day camp, operated by the YMCA near Butler, Md., brings together in a woodland setting young boys and girls from suburban areas and the inner city. It was operated for an eight week period for the first time this past summer.

Executives' Secretaries Inc. is a unique organization in that membership is held by the firm, rather than, the individual secretary, and the chief executive appoints the top secretary or key administrative woman to represent his company at organization activities.

Scholarship exams set for Saturday

State Sen. John J. Bishop Jr. (R., 4th Balto. Co.), issued a reminder today that the examination for all state scholarships, including senatorial scholarships, will be given on Saturday, at selected high schools throughout the state.

Students wishing to know the examination site in their district should check directly with the State Scholarship Board, 383-3010, ext. 6322 or with their individual school counselors.

ALTHOUGH HIGH SCHOOL counselors throughout the state have this information, and although it is extensively publicized by the State Scholarship Board, Mr. Bishop said that the examination date should be given additional publicity.

This will help to encourage all qualified high school seniors who plan to attend a Maryland college or university to take this examination and be considered for a scholarship award, he said.

Sen. Bishop added that every year a number of deserving students apply for scholarships after the test has been given.

"Then, of course, it is too late even to consider doing anything for them for another year," said the senator.

Mr. Bishop also noted that many needy young people with acceptable high school grades and good potential, fail to apply because they feel it would be futile.

"Need, in addition to ability, is a major criterion for granting a scholarship award.

"Needy youngsters are precisely the ones who should be strongly urged to apply," said Senator Bishop.

NOV. 24

The Religious Education Committee of the Baltimore Association for Retarded Children will hold a conference for teachers of special classes in churches and synagogues at 7 p.m., in Fellowship Hall, Towson Methodist Church, on Hampton Lane just north of exit 27 off the Baltimore Beltway.

OLYMPIC PAYOLA SCANDAL IS TRIVIAL

By SAM LACY

The furore being raised by the U. S. Olympic Committee over the alleged acceptance of money by certain athletes in return for wearing a particular brand of shoe, continues to confound this writer ... Especially, when some of the big things that happened at the 19th Olympiad were, as one might say, "swept under the rug."

For example, it is conceivable that African delegates to the Games are still seething over the shabby treatment they received at the Mexico City meeting of the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) ... Their continuing plea for better representation in the makeup of the organization met with the usual rebuff from the Western-dominated convention, and they must have left there convinced that complexion is not a stigma in the mind of Uncle Sam alone.

At one point, for instance, African representatives sought to place just one colored name on the list of aspirants to membership on the federation's Technical Commission ... They asked, also, that another be considered among candidates for the Cross-Country Commission ... A delegate from Kenya was nominated for the first, and one from Tunisia for the second ... Neither was elected.

Marquis challenged

In one of the sessions, the delegates — hoping to gain a first step toward greater equity — proposed a change in the IAAF voting rules, which at present give larger nations such as the United States, France, Russia, Great Britain, Australia and 12 others eight votes on any proposal while smaller nations receive lesser numbers, down to some who have only one vote ... The proposed change to a one-nation, one-vote rule was knocked down, 170-129, with the Soviets the only major power backing the move.

The absence of any African names from the original lists of nominees was explained by the Marquis of Exeter as an oversight on the part of the Africans ... He referred to the federation rule which requires that names of any and all candidates to the various committees must be sent in five months in advance of the meeting of the body ... When the Africans replied that they had not received the usual forms for filling names of nominees, the Marquis persisted that the papers had been mailed, and he could not believe that none of the African nations had received them.

One African representative scoffed at the federation president's disbelief, pointing out that it would be a reasonable suspicion if only one or two of the darker countries had failed to receive the papers, "but all of us," he shouted, "that's preposterous."

No win for them

When it was suggested that, for this meeting, the rules be set aside to allow additional names "and prevent another major blunder" in the conduct of international affairs, the Marquis said flatly it could not be done ... But then a number of other delegates joined the Africans in insisting that some exception should be made ... and the Marquis finally acquiesced, provided the delegates approved by a two-thirds vote ... It was suspected by many that he did not expect the big show of hands repudiating him.

On the actual vote for members to the Technical Commission, however, the Kenyan candidate finished 16th with only 15 members being elected ... And on the Cross-Country Commission, the Tunisian nominee was seventh in the voting, with six being chosen.

Western stranglehold

Undoubtedly, the darker delegations are aware that they have a long fight ahead in their hope to gain the recognition they feel they have a right to expect in the governing IAAF ... But, if they didn't already realize this, the evidence became firm as the end of the convention neared.

An Englishman, the Marquis of Exeter, was re-elected president ... another Englishman, Donald Pain, was returned to the post of executive-secretary ... still another Englishman, Harold Abrahams, declined to accept the Technical Commission chairmanship, and turned it over to an American lieutenant of Avery Brundage, Pincus Sober.

Already an actor

Bob Gibson, the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching ace, is going to be seen in an upcoming movie and it will be a relatively minor role, which is understandable ... but the evidence is in that Bob could make it as an actor, if he so wished ... He proved that last week.

United Press International dispatches from Japan described the Redbird righthander as "surprised" and "gratified" and "stunned" when he was informed that he had been voted the Most Valuable Player Award for the National League in 1968 ... If actually it did "surprise" Gibson, he was one of a very small minority thus affected by the voting ... the same goes for "stunned" ... I'll go along with his being grateful ... there's always a measure of gratitude to be felt when others place you in a special category, even though you know full well nobody else belongs but you.

Obvious to everyone

It had to be fairly obvious to everyone that Gibson would be the NL's boy, after the American League picked Denny McLain, Bob's Detroit Tiger counterpart, for the dual MVP and Cy Young awards ... Thirty-one victories notwithstanding, McLain could hardly have been more deserving of special honors for last summer's work than Gibson.

SAM LACY

No better evidence is to be had than that encouched in a comment from one of Bob's fellow players in the NL, and the man who was second to him in the MVP balloting ... Outfielder Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds, declared: "I was just happy I came as close as I did in the voting ... it's no disgrace to finish second to Bob, the way he pitched last season.

Morgan cool to Bowl bids

by SAM LACY

Talking to Morgan State College coach Earl Banks, one gets the unmistakable impression that he and his coaches, and his players as well, couldn't care less about playing in one of the usually coveted post-season football games this year.

The general attitude of the Bears was detected during a weekend conversation with Banks following Saturday's 34-7 victory over Norfolk State College in Norfolk.

"I was pleased with the way the team played," said Banks, "and a little surprised, too. For several weeks, I've noticed a little letdown on the part of the boys. It's been mental and physical, and that can come from but one thing: fatigue.

"We're all tired, and we're all looking forward to next week when we can get this season out of the way."

DOES THAT mean Morgan has no interest in a post-season game?

"Well, now, I'll let you say that; I won't. We've had 'feelers' from two bowls, but right now I'd say we'd give a lot of thought to the matter before we accepted either.

"THE BOARDWALK Bowl and the Orange Blossom Classic," Banks replied when pressed to identify the invitations.

"We're somewhat obligated to the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), which sponsors the Boardwalk game at Atlantic City, and if they decide to make us the definite pick, we'll probably think about it some more. But we're tired."

The NCAA formerly sanctioned the post-season promotion at Orlando, Fla., known as the Tangerine Bowl. Morgan won in the 1966 Tangerine game against West Chester State.

"MANY PEOPLE don't realize" declared Earl, "that we had our bowl game, at the opening of the season." He referred to the Yankee Stadium victory over Grambling.

It takes an awful lot to prepare for a game like that as your opener — with no previous tuneup.

"That means we started at peak. And when you do that in anything you're drained almost dry trying to maintain the edge you want and need.

"Add the pressure of keeping a winning streak alive week after week, and you'll understand the mental and physical beating you take."

BUT ISN'T the bowl invitation a sort of bonus for the kids, something they naturally look forward to, as the season progresses?

"Sure it is," was the ready answer, "but there are other things to be considered.

"As I explained earlier, we went into this season with a much stiffer program than usual. That makes it much longer for all of us. Now, suppose we extend it another three weeks or a month, what do we have?

"We have workouts that must be restricted. We have no fieldhouse like a lot of other schools, so we must work in the gym when the weather is bad. You've seen our gym. You can imagine how much we benefit from football drills in there.

"THEN, TOO," Banks added, "we have to think about the boys. We're loaded with freshmen and sophomores, and they're a fine bunch.

"But if they don't hit the classroom, we're going to be looking for a lot of new freshmen to fill their places when the academic needle gets stuck in them."

Sonny By KO

PLEASANTON, Calif. (UPI) — George Foreman, winner of the heavyweight boxing championship in the recent Olympics, said Tuesday he probably would turn professional "within a year."

Foreman, 19, a 6-foot-3 ½, 211-pound sports instructor at the Parks Job Corps Center in Pleasanton, made the comment to newsmen during a special ceremony and luncheon in his honor.

"I NEED the money and if I can be handled properly, I probably will turn pro within a year," he said.

The former Houston, Tex., resident had said after the Olympics he planned to wait until he was 20 or 21 before becoming a pro. He entered the Olympics with only 21 bouts to his credit.

ASKED HOW long it would take him to become world heavyweight boxing champion, foreman replied:

"It took me two years to become amateur champion of the world. With proper mamagement, it shouldn't take much longer to become the professional champ."

WBC to lift Ali's crown

MANILA — The World Boxing Council (WBC) says it will withdraw its recognition of Cassius Clay as heavyweight champion unless he defends his title against a "worthy opponent" before the end of the year.

WBC chairman Justiniano Montano Jr. said Clay (Muhammad Ali) has been holding on to the title for more than one year since his last defense. He said WBC rules require a champion to defend his title at least once within one year.

MONTANO said he was aware of Ali's problems arising out of his political views and activities as a Black Muslim but added his inactivity was not working for the good of doing particularly for the heavyweight division.

"There are many other fighters who deserve a crack at the title," he said.

Montano said if Ali fails to heed his warning, the WBC will declare the heavyweight title vacant and may recognize the winner of a bout "between two worthy rated contenders."

LEAVES HOSPITAL — Unidentified nurses' aide blows a kiss toward Gale Sayers, Chicago Bears sensational running back, as he leaves Illinois Masonic Hospital following successful knee operation, last week. Gale is accompanied by his wife, Linda, left, as he leaves for his home and rest. Sayers had the ligaments in his right knee torn in game with the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday, Nov. 10. Sayers spurns crutches, says he'll be back in 69'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gale Sayers Friday lifted a 15-pound cast on football's most famous knee and promised, "I'll be back next year."

The Chicago Bear halfback walked stiffly, but unaided and without crutches out of Illinois Masonic Hospital just five days after a submarining tackle by Kermit Alexander of the San Francisco 49ers ripped the ligaments in his right knee.

"I knew the knee was gone as soon as I was hit," Sayers said, "and I told the doc (team physician Ted Fox) so as soon as I saw him."

Fox, who performed surgery early Sunday evening to repair the damaged knee, said Sayers would be 100 percent physically fit next season.

"YOU HAVE both of our words that he'll be back next year," Fox said, "and that's no idle statement. It's backed up by experience."

Psychologically, Sayers said, "It's something you just have to get out of your mind and go on and try to have a better season next year."

Sayers sat on the edge of a desk in the hospital administration office and lifted the leg with the thigh-to-foot cast at the request of photographers. It was the type of exercise he will be doing for another few weeks.

FOX SAID the cast would come off two weeks from Friday and be replaced by a lighter one for three weeks. Then Sayers could begin ta conditioning program.

"There is no chance for him coming back during the regular season," Fox said.

Sayers said he received "thousands of cards and letters" from fans. In honor of his uniform number 40, fans sent him 40 pork chops, 40 records, 40 cakes, an assortment of 40 types of nuts and 40 pints of ice cream, Sayers said.

SAYERS WHO said he would go back to his off season job as stock broker, had a few words of encouragement for his team.

"Everyone has to put out a little more effort," he said. "They have a chance to go all the way, and I hope they can."

Bears and Aggies romp, Eagles claw Panthers

Morgan State College and A and T State University of North Carolina continued their hectic race for the CIAA football championship Saturday, with both registering victories.

Morgan exploded for 24 points in the second quarter to key a 34-7 win over Norfolk State at Norfolk, and A and T toppled previously undefeated Virginia State, 33-7, in a contest at Greensboro, N.C.

THE ULTIMATE result is that both go into their final conference games with 7-1 records, and the need for winning over rivals who make a career of making it tough for them.

The Bears tangle with Virginia State at Petersburg on Saturday, and the Eagles visit North Carolina College at Durham the following Thursday (Thanksgiving Day). The Trojans and Eagles — like Morgan and A and T — have lost but once this season, North Carolina having routed Virginia Union, 60-6, on Saturday.

AGAINST Norfolk Saturday, Morgan played heads up ball on both offense and defense, despite the steady downpour which drenched Foreman Field and the athletes all afternoon.

George Nock, having what coach Earl Banks described as "one of the best days of his career," tallied two touchdowns. Freshman Eugene Neal, who is being groomed to replace Nock when the latter is graduated, went his older running mate one better in the scoring department.

"Much of their success," explained Banks, "was due to the brilliant blocking of the offensive line. It functioned better than it has at any time since the opening game."

THE AGGIES, at the same time, were bursting the bubble raised in the Virginia State camp.

Sparked by their sensational sophomore quarterback Stan Jacobs, they struck for two quick touchdowns in the opening moments, but needed a three-touchdown barrage in the final period to shake the determined Trojans.

After being down by two touchdowns, Virginia State rallied to close the gap to 12-7 by halftime.

The two clubs staged a gallant defensive battle most of the third period, but Jacobs threw a 35-yard touchdown strike to freshman end Willie Wright on the first play of the final period. That signaled the beginning of the end for the Trojans, now 5-1-1 for the season.

JACOBS then left the game for good and his replacement, freshman Charles Middleton, engineered two more quick scores, one a 35-yard touchdown bomb from Middleton to flanker Daryle Cherry.

Jacobs' two touchdown passes were his 13th and 14th of the season.

NORTH CAROLINA College kept pace with the top two by running wild against Virginia Union at Richmond.

The victory for the Eagles meant that coach George Quiett and his lads are right back in the thick of the title fight.

Should they upend the Aggies in their annual clash on their home field Thanksgiving Day — and should Morgan lose to Virginia State Saturday — North Carolina will ease into the CIAA title.

It makes for an interesting week ... SAM LACY.

Erv Hall sets hurdles mark

BERLIN (UPI) — Ervin Hall of Villanova, a 1968 Olympic Silver medalist, bettered the 60-meter world hurdles indoor mark Sunday with a time of 7.6 seconds during an invitation track and field meet.

Hall, who placed second in the 110-meter hurdles at Mexico City last month, chopped one-tenth of a second off the previous time held by Italy's Eddy Ottoz.

Charlie Breene of the U.S., co-holder of the world 100-meter standard, twice covered the 60-meter spring in 6.6 seconds.

The oldest national anthem sung today is the Netherlands' "William of Nassau," dating from 1626.

The deepest lake in the world is Lake Baykal in Asia with a depth of more than 5,700 feet.
