—6 die in holiday weekend

Brown, 42, 1000 block N. Wolfe St.

George Strawder, died from a police bullet.

Homicide detectives say young Strawder was sitting in his 1966 Corvette, which was parked in the 800 block N. Charles St., at about 2 a.m. Saturday when a fight broke out on the sidewalk nearby.

When the altercation threatened the auto's recently renewed coat of wax, the victim produced a pistol and fired it into the air, the homicide detectives say.

When the fight failed to move from the area of the car, police say Strawder got out of the car, leaving his dog inside, and began striking one of the men with a pistol.

At this point police said Central District officer Walter L. Lee cruised past on nearby Madison St., saw the disturbance and heard what he thought was a gunshot.

Officer Lee rounded the block, then parked on Charles St. near Madison and approached through the crowd on foot, he said.

On reaching the immediate scene, the patrolman states that Strawder was beating a man later identified as William J. Messner.

Officer Lee identified himself a second time, he reports, but there was no noticeable effect.

When the victim turned toward the officer pointing the gun at him, the policeman told superiors he fired one shot from his service revolver, striking the 23-year-old man in the upper left chest.

The wounded man was dead in Maryland General Hospital about 20 minutes later, at 2:20 a.m.

Funeral services for the victim will be held Wednesday at 1 p.m., at the March Funeral Home, 928 E. North Ave., followed by burial in the Arbutus Cemetery.

Irving Shur died Fr. less than two hours after he told police two youths entered his 500 block N. Carey St. market and shot him without provocation, and one of them announced, This is a hold-up."

The 70-year-old grocer, who had operated the store since 1923, reported that he told the intruders to take anything they wanted.

The youths fled the store at about 1:20 p.m. without taking any money or merchandise, the fatally wounded man told investigators.

Police say a neighbor heard two shots and reported the incident.

The victim was discovered by responding officers lying inside the glass door of the store. The officers had to break the glass to reach the victim, they say.

Mr. Shur was struck in the lower abdomen and neck by two .38-calibre bullets, homicide detectives said.

The victim died as doctors at the Franklin Square Hospital operated to save him.

No arrests have been announced. Police say the investigation is continuing.

Central police were summoned to the home of Felton Williams at about 3 a.m. Saturday and there found the 57-year-old truck driver unconscious from an apparent bullet wound in the head.

Officers said the victim's wife, Mrs. Minnie L. Williams, 47, approached them hurriedly as they were stopped at Pennsylvania Ave. and W. Lafayette St. and asked them to accompany her.

Mrs. Williams later told investigators that the victim had pointed a gun at her, and that there had been a struggle, during which the weapon had discharged.

The victim was pronounced dead at Provident Hospital at about 3:45 a.m.

Mrs. Williams has been charged with the homicide and is being held without bail awaiting action by the State's Attorney.

Funeral arrangements for the victim are incomplete.

Also dead from a head wound is Mrs. Minnie Jefferson, who Western police say was shot after an altercation in a bar in the 500 block Baker St., near where the dead woman lived.

Police say the victim was pronounced dead at Provident Hospital, shortly after an 8:30 p.m. incident at the Dixie Tavern.

Charged with the shooting is William T. Nowlin, 56, 2500 block Druid Hill Ave., being held without bail awaiting action by the State's Attorney's office, after a preliminary hearing Saturday.

Homicide detectives say Sidney E. Brown was removed from the 200 block Calvin St. early Thursday, after police were called by a resident of the block who noticed the victim lying on the sidewalk.

The victim was pronounced dead at Mercy Hospital, from a gunshot wound in the left front shoulder, at 1:52 a.m.

No arrests have been made. Police are continuing investigation.

Funeral services for the victim were held Tuesday, 1 p.m., at Wilson's Funeral Home on Orleans St., followed by burial at the Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Police say Miss Mary Frances Brown — also known by the name "Mayers" died late Thursday afternoon from a gunshot wound in the head.

The victim was dead at Johns Hopkins Hospital at 6:07 p.m., after police were summoned to her 1000 block N. Wolfe St. residence.

A 35-year-old man has been named in a warrant in connection with the death.

Funeral services for the victim will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Lynchburg, Va.

would be playing the new album by Miss Makeba were it not for the boycott and the fact so few of the stations beaming to colored audiences are controlled by them.

"They have to go along with what the white owners do," he said.

MISS MAKEBA had cut a "Patter, Patter" piece that went over with young people just before her marriage.

The new album, basically African numbers, includes her "Down In The Dumps" recording that was out earlier as a 45 single.

Most record dealers have the album in stock or will get it.

However, when records are not played on the airwaves thousands of people who might like it and buy are not introduced to it.

Suddenly, who gets around-the-clock police checks wherever he goes, says she is more positive in his thinking now that colored Americans face new repressive measures up to and including genocide.

He says he is out working quietly these days organizing "for what we're going to have to face in the new five years."

"The sense of unity among colored people of the world is the one thing I'm optimistic about today," he told the AFRO.

site northeast of the intersection of Coldspring and Greenspring, education official report.

The school is scheduled for completion in 1970.

The Department of Recreation is in the process of constructing a school-connected center to serve the needs of thousands of children and young adults drawn to the area by a network of private housing developments already in use.

STRESSING THE fact that the new city will be planned with the community in mind, Mr. Embry said it "will be planned with the community, not for it.

Individuals and organizations wanting an opportunity to participate in planning the commissioner said, will be permitted to do so.

Mr. Embry said there will be two phases of "open planning sessions designed to involve the people.

Initially planners will go into the community to get the views of citizens and sessions in office of the Department of Housing and Community Development will be open to them, according to the commissioner.

Mr. Embry listed other advantages of the proposed city within a city as a rare opportunity to "build housing without displacing people and that no high rise dwellings will be constructed for low income families.

CONVERSLY, THE commissioner pointed out, middle and higher income families have expressed a desire for high rise units and those will also be included.

Neither the present school accomodations nor those to be offered by the Greenspring Junior School will be taxed by the school population of the new city, the commissioner explained.

Schools for the Younger children will be a part of the development, according to advance planning.

"It is hoped that they will be able to go downstairs from their homes to school, Mr. Embry said.

ASSISTANCE FROM government agencies and home developers will be used to aid low and moderate-income families to establish homeownership, Mr. Embry promised in reemphasizing his determination to prevent the development from being confused with public housing.

"It is new, it is different. It will be an asset to the city and its citizens, Mr. Embry declared adding:

"We will need the cooperation of all concerned if the development is to serve the purpose for which it is intended.

nates, Eric Frederick.

Mr. Frederick, who has been a city employee for 25 years, posted the highest score, 92, Mr. Bocker employed in another city division was close behind with a score of 92. Mr. Valis flunked the examination.

"In view of this situation," the lawyer observed, Mr. Valis has been holding that position illegally since the day that test was given.

"It is now a Civil Service position, and he cannot hold it unless he is certified by the Civil Service Commission as being qualified for it.

"Technically, he is indebted to the City for the amount of money he has received in salary since that position was placed under Civil Service jurisdiction."

ACCORDING TO Thomas J. Murphy, executive secretary of the Civil Service Commission, both Mr. Valis and his competitors have a legal right to the position, and could institute legal action if they desire.

"However," he added, "some other attractive jobs may be offered to them."

Although this would eliminate one sticky legal situation for the city if Mr. Frederick and Mr. Bocker agreed to take other positions, the continued employment of Mr. Valis in the position would remain unlawful, according to legal authorities.

One compromise was suggested by Bernard L. Werner, director of the Department of Public Works.

Mr. Werner mentioned the proposals of the "PPB committee", a watchdog committee composed of Comptroller Hyman Pressman, city auditor Daniel Paul, and finance director Charles Benton.

The committee suggested in a report issued earlier this year that the Division of Motor Vehicle Maintenance be divided into two sections.

The first of these, the "operational section," would be headed by Mr. Frederick.

The watchdog committee's report also suggests that a full-time position be created which would carry the functions of checking and assigning city automobiles.

"This position," Mr. Werner said, "could be handled by Mr. Valis. However, he would first have to have his name on the list from which such appointments are made. His name is not now on that list, to my knowledge."

MEANWHILE, Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro who was reportedly pressured by City Councilmen Clement J. Prucha and Joseph V. Mach, both of the Second District, to keep Mr. Valis in the job, has withheld comment on the disputed job.

An aide, Peter Marudas, told the AFRO Monday that the mayor was attending a funeral. Asked if Mr. D'Alesandro would have an opinion on the growing controversy, Mr. Marudas told the AFRO:

"I know nothing about it."

stance is a one way street, it is not brotherly and it is not love," Mr. Stark said.

Mr. Stark said that the county statements on the exchange of pupils were an "insult to the city of Baltimore" and that the city should "decline to be a doormat for neighboring counties.

"To draw from this that there is a conspiracy afoot is going far afield. The city solicitor's statements are not suggesting any forcing of the situation," Mr. Stark said in reference to an opinion on school integration by George L. Russell to the effect that it has not been achieved.

Mr. Stark called Mr. Caplan's accusations against Dr. Sheldon and the School Board "totally unfair and unnecessary."

Mr. Caplan said that his speech, read from a piece of paper, represented "my thoughts." He later told newsmen that he read a paragraph that he did not intend to include, but would not point out what it contained.

He refused to give reporters a copy of his statements, saying that a release would come later.

THIRD DISTRICT councilman Frank X. Gallagher entered the foray by saying that "incoming classes in the fall" should be affected by the ruling so as not to interfere in the education of present county students.

"I want a guarantee that the standards of the present Poly (Baltimore Polytechnical Institute) be maintained. And I won't go into the standards now," Mr. Gallagher said.

City council president William D. Schaefer added his contribution by saying that he was not treated "with courtesy" by the school board, and that he had hoped that they would act with more "consideration when dealing with council members."

He also stated that "a blasting (sic) editorial in the AFRO-AMERICAN" had not understood his position.

The news media came under further attack when Councilman Gallagher stood up to say that, "When you're dealing with the school board and equal time, you won't get equal time in the media because the (school board) chairman is on the directors (sic) of the AFRO-AMERICAN and the Sunpapers."

Administrative officials of this newspaper said that Mr. Murnaghan is not now and never has been on its board of directors.

FOURTH DISTRICT Councilman Dr. Emerson Julian pleaded with the council to "stop talking about people as black and white, but regard them as individuals."

Mr. Caplan later retreated and explained that his statement which precipitated the row was not meant to deal with integration, but was meant as a critique of the School Board's handling of county pupils.

Indicted officer may be dismissed

Patrolman Joseph D. Pine, 26, the Chicago policeman indicted recently on a charge of denying a man his civil rights, faces dismissal from the force on grounds he falsified his employment application.

It has been shown Pine answered "no" to an application question, "Have you ever been in consultation or under the treatment of a psychiatrist?"

old Mobile, Ala., man to 30 years in the Mississippi penitentiary.

TARRANTS' MOTHER, Mrs. Doris Tarrants, testified her son withdrew from a normal teenage life after Mobile Murphy High School was integrated in 1963 when Tarrants was a 15-year-old junior there.

Then began the associations with ultra-conservative groups, an obsession with Communism and the Bible and a withdrawal from all normal activities, the mother said.

Defense Atty. Thomas Haas used the same theme in an effort to show the defendant was not responsible for his actions. He said the verdict would be appealed.

Haas said the twisting of the "Heart, mind and soul of the defendant" began when Tarrants led a student protest against integrating Murphy High School.

"From that point on, step by step, the deterioration of the mental control of the defendant became more and more evident, the obsession greater and greater, as his activities increased," Haas said.

Haas, of Mobile, told the jury Tarrants' mind had become diseased with his anti-communist obsession until he felt he was fighting "for God and his country."

He pleaded with the jurors to find the alleged Ku Klux Klansman innocent by reason of insanity so authorities could "put this man where he can be treated by competent physicians."

• • •

HOWEVER, DISTRICT Attorney George Warner asked the jury to send Tarrants to the gas chamber under a tough Mississippi bombing law.

"He sowed destruction and he should reap destruction," Warner said.

Tarrants displayed the same emotionless expression he presented during all three days of his trial, silently working the fingers of his mangled right arm.

Before his arm was shattered by police shotgun blast June 30, police charged Tarrants wounded a policeman and a bystander with machine gun blasts.

Two Meridian detectives staked out an ambush for nightriders after a wave of anti-semitic terrorism and were the only state witnesses. They identified Tarrants as the man who placed a box containing 20 sticks of dynamite and a 30 minute timing device at the fashionable Davidson residence.

They said Tarrants fled in a waiting car.

THE CAR was forced to the side of the road 15 blocks away and Tarrants allegedly rolled out and sprayed his pursuers with machine gun fire.

In Tarrants' car police found Mrs. Kalay Ainsworth, pretty Jackson school teacher, who apparently was killed by police rifle bullets when the car sped from the Davidson home.

The 26-year-old woman carried a KKK membership card and loaded pistol in her purse. Her husband was in Miami.

In Tarrants' possession was a handwritten diary in which he declared that since March 23, 1968, he had been actively engaged in an underground Guerilla war against the "communist-Jewish conspiracy," using any means necessary.

has cut a new album and they refuse to play it because she married me."

Mr. Carmichael later repeated the charge in an AFRO weekend interview.

For the most part music and program directors in Baltimore claim that they have not received the album and even if they had it wouldn't be boycotted.

PAUL BURMAN, music director of WFBR put it this way:

"Our position is purely music. I heard the report on television about Makeba's concert appearances falling off in attendance because she had married Stokley Carmichael.

"But that has no bearing on the position of this station. Our criteria is familiarity. We play music that people hum or sing. We wouldn't boycott anybody on political grounds.

"We've played Miss Makeba's music, much of which is in the Click Dialect, which is something we consider, but we haven't received the new album yet."

LARRY DEANE, music director of WEBB says of his station:

"This is the first time I've heard of the boycott, but certainly WEBB would not take part in political disputes. If it's a good record we play it regardless. We haven't received the album yet."

Les Corum, music director at WITH, "The World Of Beautiful Music Station," isn't quite sure who Miss Miriam Makeba is, "But", he assured the AFRO, "if she does the type of thing that we play we'd play her.

"It's as simple as that."

IN THE past Miss Makeba's recordings have been heard on WITH.

Charlie Purcell, assistant manager at WCAO, also reported he has not received the new Makeba album yet, but then, "I'm sure we wouldn't make a determination on the basis of politics."

Mrs. Jean Kupers is program director of WSID which beams its programing to a predominantly black listening audience.

"I haven't heard about the boycott," she says, "nor have I heard the album but we stick close to the choices of our listeners and we don't do any boycotting at WSID."

KEN QUORTIN, sales manager at WIN says "We play the music which conforms to our format come hell or high water." The WWIN format is based on the top 40 in record sales.

Al Jefferson, WWIN's program director and himself a popular deejay, added:

"We're really not interested in politics. We play music and the only reason that you might not have heard any Makeba sounds on our station for a while is that she hasn't had a hit since "Patta Patta."

"She's cold now and when she gets a hit record, whether it be this one 'Makeba' or any other, we'll play it.

"Frankly, I haven't heard her latest album. But our station wouldn't be affected by politics. It's just not in our bag."

A SURVEY of the top ten record shops in the city shows that "Makeba" has not been distributed widely. Only one shop had the album at the beginning of the week and three others indicated that they would have it before the week ended.

The remaining six all base their order on requests and names which prove saleable. Thus far none have received requests for "Makeba," the respective spokesmen said.

tended to provoke a gun battle at the Pine Street site.

For the past month, Cleaver spent much of his time away from his wife at the home of a white writer, Paul Jacobs, but he wasn't found there, either.

As time went on, police discarded a theory that Cleaver was around town and waiting to be picked up. The theory was that he wished to avoid the symbolism involved in his "surrendering" to white officers.

Instead, police said he was "a deliberate fugitive."

Rampant speculation placed him in Canada, New York and Cuba. A Stockholm newspaper said he may be attempting to seek asylum in Sweden as "a political refugee."

However, attorneys said Cleaver would be subject to extradition in most countries. It was expected the FBI would be brought into the case by filing of a complaint charging unlawful flight across state lines.

CLEAVER WAS paroled from prison in 1966 after serving nine years of a 13-year sentence for assault and rape. His detailing of the crimes in "Soul on Ice," a bestselling book, won him the admiration of numerous literary figures.

The parolee became a senior editor of Ramparts Magazine and earned fees of up to $1,000 for bitter lectures about racial problems. A series of lectures planned at the University of California, Berkeley, ignited a major crisis for the institution.

The parole was suspended last April when Cleaver was found at a house where Black Panthers were involved in a shootout with Oakland police.

Cleaver was released again in June by order of a judge who held the suspension was procedurally improper and politically motivated.

Reversal of this ruling by an appellate court became final Wednesday, automatically ordering Cleaver back to prison.

HIS SERIES of appeals ended last Tuesday when the U.S. Supreme Court rejected his arguments that the parole was revoked because of his political beliefs. He was ordered to surrender Wednesday morning for a return to San Quentin.

Although Cleaver failed to show up, his attractive wife, Kathleen and his attorney, Charles Garry, were on hand at the appointed time.

Mrs. Cleaver, who said she hoped her husband would use guns to resist arrest if guns were used against him, said she hadn't seen him since last Sunday.

Garry said he would continue as Cleaver's defense attorney, but "I won't make any plea for him to turn himself in."

"I don't superimpose my white background to tell black militants how they should live their lives," he said. "They have an intelligence beyond my comprehension in these matters. They make their own decisions."
