Classes resumed at 'tense' Bluefield

BLUEFIELD, W. Va. (UPI) — Classes resumed Monday for 1,400 students at racially troubled Bluefield State College. The atmosphere was described as quiet but tense.

The formerly all-colored college was closed Nov. 21 when a bomb cause $30,000 damage to a new $1.3 million building on campus. Five black militants were arrested and charged with conspiracy to damage property and lives.

All five were held in lieu of $25,000 bond, pending grand jury action.

"It's quiet out there now," Bluefield police chief Andrew Dodson said, "But it's naturally a little tense."

Dodson, the state's only colored police, said, "we only have two men on campus now, along with eight security guards from the school."

• • •

THREE STATE police cruisers were assigned to patrol the campus.

"We'll occupy the campus until the climate changes," Dodson said, "and we'll make sure that every student walking on campus after dark has a pass."

The passes were the idea of Dr. Wendell Hardway, the school's first white president and the target of much of the violence. Under Hardway's administration, the colored enrollment dropped to an all-time low of 35 per cent.

The militant groups demanded Hardway's resignation and said he was "trying to turn Bluefield into a white commuter college."

Hardway's life was threatened in letters signed "black power," and bands of roving students stoned his house on two occasions. Police protection was deemed necessary for Hardway five times during his two years at Bluefield.

Walter Carter buried in Salem

SALEM, Va. — Funeral services were held for Spec.4 Walter A. Carter III on Nov. 20 at Big Hill Baptist Church here. The Rev. Charles Charlton officiated.

Mr. Carter, 21, had served for over two years with the Army in the U. S. and Germany. He was the son of Mrs. June Carter.

Services were attended by many friends and relatives from New York, New Jersey and Fort Riley, Kan.

Deaf couple raises family; works to overcome handicap

By ADRIENNE MANNS

WASHINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. George Luckey are a deaf couple who have raised a family of five children without outside help, worked in their church and now plan to buy their home in southeast Washington.

But they haven't been free of problems that people who can hear have faced. Communicating through her daughter, Mary, Mrs. Luckey said that if she had her life to live over again she "would fight for Negro deaf people.

• • •

"THEY'RE NOT taught enough. White people are sent to college and the government pays for it with no trouble. But for people like us who are Negroes and who try to lift themselves up, there is no one to help," she said.

Mr. Luckey has worked for the Hecht Co. 25 years. He started as a stock man and now works as a porter. Mrs. Luckey works at the National Geographic Society as a file clerk.

• • •

"IN THE EARLY years of our marriage, my husband had just started working at the Hecht Co. There were three children and it was hard to raise them on his pay alone," she said.

Mr. Luckey, 46, is a native of North Carolina and his wife, 42, was born in Baltimore. Both have been deaf since childhood. Mrs. Luckey had been ill since infancy and became deaf at three and a half. "The doctors told her grandmother they would have to either take her hearing away or she would die," said Mary.

The Luckeys met at the Maryland School for the Blind and Deaf in Overlea, Md. They were married and moved to Washington, because he had a job waiting at the Hecht Co.

• • •

AFTER FINISHING school, she took some courses at the American Institute of Typing. It was hard for her to find a job, she says, because she was both deaf and colored. She worked at a funeral home and held a part-time job as a dish washer at Shiloh Baptist Church's nursery.

The Luckeys have been married 22 and a half years and the family has lived in their house on Bass Pl. about 19 years. Besides Mary, their children are George Washington, 19; Johnny, 16; Samuel, 15; and Anita, 11.

• • •

NOBODY TAUGHT the Luckey children sign language. They just picked it up. And Mary says her own four children know how to communicate with her parents even though two of them are tots.

Mr. Luckey is a deacon, and his wife a deaconess at Shiloh Baptist where she teaches Sunday school for the deaf and is the choir leader for the deaf.

"She's just about in everything at the church," says Mary. Mrs. Luckey added, that she has "a hard time making the kids go to church."

"It's hard for her to get her children to go to church because other parents don't make theirs go," adds Mary.

• • •

MRS. LUCKEY says she doesn't "feel comfortable on the streets now . . . there's so much happening now. I used to be able to go out alone and feel comfortable." Her solution is to "make everybody go to church."

She doesn't let being deaf worry her as much as it used to, she said. Now when she worries, she prays.

The only thing she really worries about now she says is her son, George, who has been in Vietnam a month and a half.

And Mr. Luckey, after working all week, relaxes at his favorite pasttime, working in the family's garden in the back yard.

DEAF COUPLE — George and Helen Luckey have battled the handicap of deafness since childhood and are now the parents of five children, that they raised themselves with very little outside help. They met at a school for the blind and deaf and have been married 22 and a half years. (Photo by Cabell).

J.U.G. entertain with benefit dance

For a first time around, it was like they had been doing it for a long time.

Speaking, of course, of the JUG's Inc., Baltimore Chapter members who held their first benefit dance on Friday evening at Cherry Hill Union Hall.

Sherman Lewis provided music for dining and dancing.

Out-of-town Juggers here for the affair included Mrs. Jan Barrow and Mrs. Claudette Johnson of the D.C. chapter.

Also here, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Owings, Reston, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Dou Ried of Rockville, Md.

The subscription event will help the group continue their contributions to a variety of charities. Members have already paid on a life membership in the NAACP.

Television stars honor Johnny Philip Morris

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Television stars and many tobacco industry leaders recently honored Johnny Philip Morris on his 35th anniversary as the world's most durable living trademark.

Among those attending the party at the El Mirador Hilton Hotel, scene of the joint meetings of the California Association of Tobacco and Candy Distributors and National Association of Tobacco Distributors, were Eva Gabor of "Green Acres"; Martin Landau, Peter Graves, Barbara Bain, and Greg Morris of "Mission Impossible"; Ken Berry, George Lindsey, Arlene Golonka and Jack Dodson of "Mayberry R.F.D."; Kathy Garg, Sigrid Valdis and Dick Dawson of "Hogan's Heroes".

All are TV stars of Philip Morris-sponsored shows on CBS. Hosting the anniversary event was Pat Buttram, star of Green Acres."

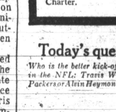
Johnny was discovered while a page boy at the New Yorker Hotel. The late Alfred E. Lyon, then a vice President of Philip Morris who later became the company's chairman, and Milton Biow, a famous advertising agency executive signed the 48" personality to a contract in 1933.

Tell it to HARRY

Here's your chance to give your opinions on sports to Harry Thompson, formerly with the Los Angeles Rams, now sales specialist for Old Charter.

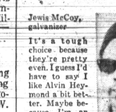
Today's question:

Who is the better kick-off return artist in the NFL: Travis Williams of the Packers or Alvin Haymond of the Eagles?



Rudye Bailey, store manager

Nolan Smith of the Kansas City Chiefs is better than both of them. Pound for pound and inch for inch, he'll do better.



George Jenkins, punter

What you want most in a kick-off returner is dependability, and Alvin Haymond of the Eagles is the best in the NFL because he's more dependable.

Senator L. L. White, retired

Travis Williams. It's neat close, because they are two outstanding runs, but I'll give Williams the edge.

Jewis McCoy, galvanizer

It's a tough choice because they're pretty even. I guess I'd have to say I like Alvin Haymond a bit better. Maybe because I'm an Eagle fan.

Something there's no question about:

OLD CHARTER is Kentucky's Finest Bourbon.

Booklet out on breathing

Samuel E. Proctor Jr., president of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association has noted that doctors have found that people coming to them with breathing troubles, in almost every case, are not making the best possible use of the breathing ability they have.

Mr. Proctor pointed out that, "Without realizing it, many people have fallen into bad breathing habits or have been pushed that way by their problem as it developed."

"In almost every such case the doctor, by his advice and by the treatment the situation calls for, can alleviate some of the handicaps and help the individual to achieve better basic breathing."

The increase of breathing problems is of particular concern to the local Christmas Seal organization.
