Methodists take '68 stride after Central disappearance

WASHINGTON

Black persons as bishops and in other executive positions are not new to Methodism, but 1968 has seen, for the first time, their non-segregated election to the episcopacy and to top positions of national program agencies.

This year also has seen, along with elimination of the 29-year-old Central Jurisdiction, the assignment of all six colored bishops to non-segregated areas and an increase in the number of colored superintendents of predominantly white districts in the United Methodist Church.

The number of pastors appointed to local congregations without regard to race is still minimal, but increasing steadily.

The end of segregated episcopal areas was part of the package involved in termination of the Central Jurisdiction, though few persons had expected election of a colored bishop for several years yet. But the Northeastern Jurisdiction, integrated in 1964-65, named one of its colored pastors, Roy C. Nichols, a bishop in July.

Each of the colored-led areas is overwhelmingly white in membership — New Jersey, Iowa, San Francisco, Holston (parts of Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia), Nebraska and Pittsburgh. The first two were assigned in 1964 and the rest in 1968.

Since 1939, the Central Jurisdiction had elected bishops to preside over its own areas and conferences, which comprised 90 percent to the colored Methodist membership. Before 1939, the Methodist Episcopal Church elected at General Conference the bishops for colored annual conferences.

During the quarter-century of The Methodist Church's life, most general boards had one or two colored executives, usually assigned to special work with colored churches, but none reached the top echelons until this year.

The two who have been selected to date as associate general secretaries, or top executives of divisions, making them members of the influential and prestigious Council of Secretaries, are Miss Theressa Hoover of the Board of Missions' Women's Division and the Rev. Dr. Earnest A. Smith of the Board of Christian Social Concerns' Division of Human Relations.

The situation of a colored staff member working primarily with colored churches has largely, but not entirely, vanished.

Two general agencies have set a precedent by electing colored persons as presidents — Bishop Charles F. Golden for the Board of Christian Social Concerns and Bishop Noah W. Moore, Jr., for the Board of Evangelism.

Although the number of colored superintendents of integrated districts increased steadily since the first one in 1964, this year saw such appointments in the South for the first time.

These were for the Rev. James C. Peters in Western North Carolina, the Rev. Raymond E. White in Holston Conference and the Rev. John G. Corry in Tennessee Conference.

Several de-segregated conferences across the country also have assigned colored ministers to their staffs.

Mrs. Mae Fike

"She was so kind in spite of her illness, when she had suffered with for the last three years. She always had a kind word and smile for everyone. She had many friends and was loved by young and old."

Mrs. Ruth Drew was speaking of her sister Mrs. Mae O. Fike, 58, who died Christmas at Bon Secoure Hospital.

She had lived at 314 N. Fulton Ave., Mrs. Fike was a former laundry employee. For 30 years she had been an active member of Gillis Memorial Church.

Mrs. Fike was a member of the sick committee, the choir, honorary member of the Helping Hand and the Flower Circle.

Funeral services were held last Saturday at the church. Burial was in Mt. Auburn.

SOUTH BALTIMORE NOTES:

Mr. Patterson dies in N.J.

Howard Patterson, one of the pioneers of the Mount Winans Community, died this week in Bridgeton Hospital, Bridgeton, N.J., where he was residing with his son, Preston.

Mr. Patterson, a member of the Bethany Baptist Church, was also a civic leader with the Mount Winans Industrial Association and Community political leader.

The Mt. Winans Civic Interest Group C.I.G.) will hold its regular meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 15, at the school. The public is invited.

The Family Circle Club met last week at 1615 E. 23 St., with Mr. and Mrs. M. Harges as hosts. During the party held later, members exchanged gifts and presented Christmas baskets to needy families.

John H. Fauntleroy has been re-elected Exalted Ruler of the Spirit of Chesapeake Lodge for his fourth term.

The lodge and temple presented Christmas baskets to needy families.

Vincent A. Wheeler has been elected finance secretary, and Daughter Anita Shorter has been elected Daughter Ruler of the temple.

The annual Christmas party was held last week at the Temple.

Mrs. Iona Green is sponsoring a benefit supper at the lodge Friday for the Flower Circle of Ebenezer AME Church.

Brother William Lee, ex-financial secretary of the Spirit of Chesapeake Lodge, is confined at Lutheran Hospital.

Mrs. Thelma Bailey, sister of Roland Brown the mortician, is ill at South Baltimore General Hospital. Blood is needed.

The "Foxes" are giving a variety supper on Saturday at the Elks Home, 912 South Sharp St.

Ruby Rodgers dies suddenly

NEWARK

The sudden death of Miss Reubena Rodgers, well-known in bridge circles both in North Jersey and nationally, came as a shock to many of her friends and fellow bridge players.

Miss Rodgers died shortly after being rushed to the hospital Dec. 22, from her home at 123 S. Munn Ave.

Services were held last Tuesday from the Elmwood Ave. Presbyterian Church, with interment in Woodlands Cemetery.

She had been an employee of the N. J. Unemployment Compensation office for several years, and was a part-time counselor at East Orange High School.

Miss Rodgers was publicity chairman of the North Jersey Bridge Unit, was also a member of the North Jersey Bridge Association and affiliated with the national bridge association. She has participated in tournaments throughout the country.

She is survived by her cousins, Mae Byrd, Mrs. Simmons and Robert Allen.

tances, spread of infection is at a remarkably low level.

Cases among adults largely is the result of a breakdown in the health of adults infected many years ago rather than the result of a recent tuberculosis infection. Aside from the economic improvement of low income families.

The Department's continued control of active infectious cases and the newly established preventive procedures of identity and treatment of dormant tuberculosis will be the chief elements protecting the population from this disease, Dr. Tayback stated.

Although widely removed from tuberculosis as a health problem, the health of mothers and children, is determined by the same factors, namely, social stability, economic support, and availability of adequate medical services, he said while reporting on maternal and child health.

Steady decline in the infant mortality rate over the past six years, from 32.5 infant deaths per 1,000 live births for the two year period 1961-1962 to 27.6 for the biennium 1967-1968, a 15 percent reduction, is an indicator of the progress made in this problem area.

Further progress could be made in the eduction of infant mortality, if child spacing patterns could be improved, he held.

Baltimore continues to have a difficult problem in the occurrence of approximately 1,000 live births among unmarried girls under 17 years of age.

The City Health Department with the financial assistance of the Thomas Wilson Sanitarium Fund has launched two experimental programs to contend with this problem.

One, in cooperation with the Maryland League of Women's Clubs is concerned with improving the social environment of young adolescent girls and provides health education and counseling to encourage sound family life patterns.

The second, in cooperation with Sinai Hospital provides medical services to assist adolescent girls with family planning when these youngsters with the consent of their parents seek such help.

These efforts are unique and need considerable further reinforcement and financial support if the City is determined to solve a problem which leads to a myriad of subsequent social, economic and medical difficulties.

Garrison Ellis, director of community relations, Regional Planning Council will be speaker at the central Enoch Pratt Free Library, at 12:30 p.m. His theme will be "Regional Rapid Transit for Baltimore: Who Needs It?"

Photographs and drawings of the proposed rapid transit system for the Baltimore region will be on display in the central hall of the library from Jan. 6 through 18. Admission is free.

TWIN PLEDGES — In a double donation ceremony last week, Mrs. Margaret Brayer, left, office manager of the Lord Baltimore Laundry, presented check to City Solicitor George L. Russell, Jr. for Provident Hospital and Mrs. Elizina Distance, a supervisor, presented similar check to John H. Horst, Sr. for Franklin Square Hospital. Businessman Samuel M. Hecht, co-chairman of the Provident Development Program, looks on. The workers pledged $1,000 to each hospital.

token opposition is represented by the candidacy of First District Cong. Rogers C. B. Morton who was elected to another two-year term on Capitol Hill in November.

Mr. Morton has the first ballot vote of the 33 Republicans in the General Assembly, but is not in the running by any means.

The one-sided contest is exemplified by the handful of votes that are credited to Mr. Gallagher in the Tuesday vote. One survey placed the number at five.

Mr. Mandel is chiefly noted for his administrative abilities and his strength in the legislature is unquestioned.

At least one legislator in the Baltimore's black community isn't fully convinced of Mr. Mandel's abilities in the field of civil rights, and his future actions in this area will be watched closely by some politicians.

Del. Lena K. Lee (4th D.) publically criticized Mr. Mandel last week.

The nine-member "black coalition" will probably vote for Mr. Mandel, but an auspicious exception will be Mrs. Lee's choice of Mr. Gallagher.

In announcing last week that she would break her pledge to vote with the group, Mrs. Lee said that she could not "in good conscience" vote for Mr. Mandel and that he "did not care about black people."

It will remain to be seen if Mr. Mandel is "the greatest advocate of black insensitivity".

The nature of the special election of a governor by the General Assembly has itself been a topic for controversy.

The voting public will have little or no voice in the selection. Legal problems have also arisen concerning the election.

An election of a governor by the General Assembly has occurred several times in the past, but the legal precedent is muddled.

Attorney General Francis B. Burch has ruled on the procedure of the special election, but a legal challenge although farfetched cannot be ruled out in this unusual election.

The Attorney General's office has indicated that it is preparing legislation that would make the procedure of gubernatorial succession clearer.

Needed in such an amendment to the state constitution would be a provision for Lieutenant Governor. Maryland's outdated constitution has no such section at present.

The proposed new Constitution had such provision, but was rejected by voters.

The election of Mr. Mandel on Tuesday will come as no surprise, and will strengthen the regular Democratic party's monopoly in state political power.

Panthers open D.C. chapter

WASHINGTON

The Black Panther Party, founded by Huey Newton in Oakland, Calif., has opened a chapter in D.C., but is holding off on a formal announcement until later this month, according to a spokesman for the group.

The Panthers cancelled a press conference scheduled for Dec. 29 at 1327 Rhode Island Ave., NE.

According to a press release, Robert Rippy is minister of defense for the local chapter and "applicants for membership must possess a gun and be members of the black community."

Rippy said the party has four purposes, which are listed as follows:

"To act as an instrument of self-defense in the black community against the criminal activities of white policemen as well as the unrestrained criminal activities of all people.

"To educate black people to the use of guns for the purpose of self-defense and to the protection of one's family, home, and neighborhood against marauders whether they are white or black.

"To be a watch-dog on all police activities and to keep the police under surveillance whenever they stop young black dudes to harrass them or set up official spot-checks of cars and similar investigations.

"To educate all black people to the legal constraints of police acts and the constitutional rights which all people have, but which are denied black people in particular.
