A bake sale at Heritage House was the civic activity last month for Baltimore's Jack and Jill youth group (9 to 10).

Their purpose was to "raise a needed fund for Fellowship House — a community resource which we have all made use of in the past and will continue to use in the future."

They called it "our small way to help."

Miss Josette Blackwell, 19, became Miss Third Alarm 1968-69 as the result of a beauty pageant sponsored by the SHC Firemen's club recently.

The winners were chosen on the basis of personality, poise and verbal expression.

The recipients were presented trophies and other awards at the Fire School's annual spectacular.

Miss Third Alarm and her Court led the fire prevention parade atop a gold and blue float.

Since inception of her reign, Miss Third Alarm and her court have been in numerous affairs sponsored by the club and Fire Department. They have received awards and been congratulated by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro III at a luncheon at the Emerson Hotel.

Miss Blackwell was presented in the Eighth Annual Christmas Cotillion of the Girlfriends and is a sophomore at Morgan State.

A native Baltimorean she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. (Rebecca) Blackwell of Baltimore.

Now to Jan. 18

Photographs and drawings of the proposed rapid transit system for the Baltimore region will be exhibited in the central hall of the main Enoch Pratt Free Library through Jan. 18.

Dr. Sheldon speaker for Philomathian Club

Dr. Thomas D. Sheldon, superintendent of Baltimore public schools, spoke to the Philomathian Club on Saturday evening.

He discussed the problems and progress made since he became superintendent six months ago.

He offered special praise of his number one assistant, William Pinderhughes, describing him as "a man who gets the job done.

He discussed his plans for the future. These included administrative reorganization which would give directors and principals wider participation in their areas: a citywide testing program; staff training seminars; community school expansion and restrictions on purchase of textbooks which fail to mirror the true ethnic picture.

Mrs. Frank De Costa was hostess at the dinner meeting which was held at the Morgan Christian Center.

Her special guests included, Mrs. Helen Sheldon, wife of the speaker; Mrs. G James Fleming, Mrs. Henry Niles, Mrs. Alexander Stark, Mrs. Wilbert Jones, Mrs. Gilbert Banfield, Mrs. Frank A. DeCosta Jr.

Also, Mrs. Antoine Elias, Mrs. William B. Russell, Mrs. Thomas Fraser, Miss Aurelia Taylor and Miss Rebecca Sydnor, the Peabody student, who was soloist.

Her brother, James Sydnor, was at the piano.

Members of the club present included:

Mrs. A. Paul Moss, president, who presided; Mrs. John Chissell, Mrs. Ralph V. Cook, Mrs. Howard L. Cornier, Mrs. Frederick Dedmond, Dr. Irene Diggs, Mrs. Carol Diggs, Mrs. John Hampton, Mrs. Miriam Hughes, Mrs. Charles J. King, Mrs. Carl Murphy, Mrs. Warren Peck, Mrs. Joseph L. Press, Dr. Ruth Brett Quarles, Mrs. S. Edward Smith and Mrs. Roger K. Williams.

120 Opportunities To Further Your Education Given In Evening Division Of Community College Of Baltimore

Students learn data-processing on up-to-date machines.

Many Train For Better Jobs In Local, Business Industry

With the business boom now going on in Baltimore, a strong demand has been created for specialized business training.

To move ahead in business, industry or finance, persons need additional background, specific knowledge and practical skills. High school graduates find they are handicapped without additional education.

Careers are blocked without a college training. But opportunity beckons those with a college certificate or degree.

At the Evening Division of the Community College of Baltimore, the business curriculum is designed to give students a broad general background of business and industry. The program also furnishes knowledge and develops insight and skills required for many specialized areas of business.

The college offers 18 courses in the business administration curriculum for ambitious persons employed during the day. To get an overall view of the business world, students enroll in the Business Organization and Control course. Marketing is vital to business and industrial success, and a course in techniques of selling is offered. Because of its importance business law is presented.

Sound accounting methods is a keystone in business success, and many students begin their work at the Community College. They study accounting principles, while others enroll in the intermediate accounting and tax accounting. Closely allied is the course in business mathematics, the foundation for successful operations.

Six courses which help those who wish to begin their secretarial work or to improve and strengthen their present skills are taught. Some students take the business machine course, other students enroll in the Stenography I class, or if they wish to speed up their skills and become more accurate, they study Stenography II. For secretaries who wish to improve their skills, Secretarial Practice is given.

5 Courses Offered in Data Processing

One of the fastest-growing of the new occupations is data-processing, and for some time CCB has been aware of the need for trained persons to fill the many positions opening up in this area.

The college has acquired some of the latest equipment to teach its courses, and has added able, competent instructors.

CCB's Evening Division offers 5 courses in this subject. Students may enroll in the fundamental course in data processing or in electric accounting machines. They may choose to study the fundamentals of computer programming or Fortran programming. For the more advanced person, the department offers Introduction to Data Processing Systems.

Many Low-Cost Courses Draw 1,600 Adults

By DR. SIDNEY KOBRE
News Bureau
Community College of Baltimore

More than 120 courses designed for those who wish to advance themselves in business, in industry and in the professions in the metropolitan area of Baltimore will be offered in the Evening Division of the Community College of Baltimore.

"The business, technical and other courses will draw more than 1,600 persons from all types of stations," said Herman E. Westerberg, Director of the Evening Division. "These men and women work by day in retail, wholesale and manufacturing concerns, in accounting offices, real estate concerns, insurance companies and banks."

The adults, from every section of the metropolitan area, desire to learn more about their trades and professions, seeking to improve themselves on their jobs and get further promotions. They aim at greater financial returns and more deep-down job satisfactions. Many study to enter new careers. Some students pick up where they left off or dropped out in high school or college. A number of the adults operate their own businesses and wish to learn more to make them more successful.

"The Evening Division Courses are designed to meet every occupational need — whether the student is in business, industry or one of the professions," said Mr. Westerberg.

Qualified Instructors

Students enjoy the classes, for they are instructed by 120 persons qualified by their experience, experience derived from the day-to-day work in downtown businesses and professions. The instructors have been selected because of their expertise, their teaching know-how and their deep interest in other adults who want to learn.

Registration begins for these courses on January 27, and will extend through January 31, 1969. Hours are 6:30-8:00 p.m. Classes begin the week of February 3. The courses, a number of them new, last from two to three hours, and are usually given one evening a week.

Degree Awarded

Many of the students, as those in the Day Division, are working toward a degree. The Evening Division is an integral part of the Community College which awards the Associate in Arts (AA) degree. A full day-school program with 44 programs is available. Certificates are also awarded for one-year career programs, requiring fewer courses and credits. Community College is fully-accredited and CCB credits are transferable to more than 100 colleges and universities not only in Baltimore, and in Maryland, but throughout the United States.

To assist students in choosing the suitable courses for them, four evening counselors are available: J. Wilson Hensen, Sheldon Weinstock, Herman Epstein and Walthall Berry. They give personalized consultations on courses, programs and career opportunities.

Easy Access

The college campus at the intersection of Liberty Heights Avenue and Druid Park Drive can be reached easily by auto and inter-connecting buses from all sections of the city. The cafeteria serves delicious snacks, tempting sandwiches and hot meals in the evening for student use, the CCB library has 40,000 books and hundreds of current general, trade and professional magazines.

Low Cost

Classes are usually held from 7 to 9:45 p.m. and give three credits. Baltimore city residents pay $12 per semester hour; residents of Maryland counties, $19.

For a catalogue and further information write Director of the Evening Division, Community College of Baltimore, 2901 Liberty Heights Avenue, Baltimore, Md. 21215. Or call 225-6731, 224, 234, 236, 238, 237.

Building, Mechanics, Electronics Courses Taught at CCB

In the engineering technology program, experienced instructors present courses in drafting, descriptive geometry, and reinforced concrete design. Students learn specifications, contracts and estimating in another course. Other students in the program study the mechanics and strength of materials. The department has a construction laboratory where practical work is undertaken. In the mechanic of engineering courses students learn about manufacturing processes and also hydraulics and pneumatics. CCB workshops have a variety of modern equipment used in factories.

The electronics industry is one of the fastest growing businesses in Baltimore and considerable research is being done. Trained personnel is in great demand. A strong background in the theory and practical applications of electronics is obtained at CCB. Students study electronic fundamentals, transistor circuits and systems principles of R. F. transmission and microwave measurements.

Food Service

Because restaurants, factories and institutions, such as hospitals and educational institutions have installed their own cafeterias and food-dispensing operations, the need for persons trained in food service is acute today. CCB offers adults who would like to learn more about this growing business and introductory course in this area and a more advanced course in the subject of nutrition.
