Catonsville Notes

The Banneker Parents club will sponsor a "chicken and pig-foot" supper at the Crescent Lodge Elks Home on Saturday, Jan. 11 from noon to 9:30 p.m.

Walter Carter, a businessman for many years, is a member of the Crescent Lodge Elks. He is widely known as an outstanding citizen of Ellicott City.

Remember our servicemen: Take time to write.

Bruce Hebron is now stationed at Fort Howard in North Carolina.

Private first class Thomas Hebron is in Vietnam.

Lawrence Watkin is ill at home. Send him a word of cheer.

FBI AGENTS, Anthony Palmisano, 26, left, and Edwin R. Woodriffe, 27, who were shot to death Wednesday outside a suspected bank robber's apartment in Washington. Police arrested Billie Austin Bryant, 29, who they said escaped from the Lorton, Va. Federal Reformatory. (UPI Telephoto).

Manhunt

Pvt. John Jenkins of the Eleventh Precinct, who found the bodies of the agents, police arrived on the spot and ordered the evecuation of other apartments in the building.

After bombarding the apartment with half-a-dozen tear-gas cannisters, the police entered and found the apartment deserted.

The two agents taken to the Cafritz Memorial Hospital were pronounced dead on arrival. According to District Coroner Richard L. Whelton, Woodriffe died of a gun wound to the brain, while Palmisano, died of a bullet wound to the chest. Their bodies were taken to the D. C. Morgue.

Under the direct command of Assistant Police Chief Gerry Wilson, more than 150 policemen patrolled the area, fanning out through streets and alleys and words throwing a dragnet over the suspect's hideout. They included the members of the canine corps and the Special Operations Division.

Four helicopters, one each from the metropolitan police and the Maryland State Police and two radio-station helicopters hovered around the area for hours.

Nearly 50 FBI agents, armed with machine guns, also combed the area.

At dusk, the police intensified its house-to-house dragnet of the area. About 6:45 p.m. Robert Ross, resident of an apartment at 167 Mississippi Ave., SE, informed the police that he heard some strange noices in the attic directly above his living room.

Bryant surrendered in the attic to the police without a struggle and was taken to police headquarters with handcuffs.

He was ordered held without bail at 9:30 p.m. on two murder charges in a four-minute hearing before U.S. Commissioner Said Wertleb. Wertleb postponed further hearing until Jan. 23 so as to arrange a counsel for Bryant by that time.

Woodriffe, 27, is survived by his wife, Helen Louise and two children, Eddie, 16 and Lee, 5. He lived with his family at 5659 Oakcrest Dr., Oxon Hill.

A graduate of Fordham University, Woodriffe joined the FBI in May 1967. He was assigned to Cleveland and then to Washington field office of the FBI.

Palmisano, 26, is survived by his wife Barbara of 4021 Cooper Lane, Landover. He joined the FBI as a clerk in 1960 and became an agent in July 1967. He came to the Washington Field Office last October.

The death of the two agents marks the 22d and 23d FBI agents killed in the line of duty.

Woodriffe became the first black agent to be killed in the line of duty.

According to FBI records, Bryant was born on May 1, 1939, in Mount Olive, N.C.

On his 28th birthday, May 1, 1967, the 6 foot 2, 175-pounder was arrested by District police, in a Northeast motel and was charged with the $2,700 holdup robbery of the Chevy Chase Capital City Savings and Loan Association.

—'Master plan'

"the State must chart a course of action to reduce the racial distirction in its institutions of higher education."

In fact the Council gives "opvortunity for all" its second priority in the master plan, but devotes little space to recommendations for its implementation.

"Quality education" is the first priority, and "satisfying manpower needs" is given third priority.

Despite the righ priority given it, the space allotted recommendations for "equal education opportunity" nearly equals that given for recommendations on "Library Coordination."

The study makes no mention of integration of the Board of Regents of the University of Maryland, the state's largest public institution of higher learning.

The equality recommendations include soliciting from the governor and legislature an "unequivocal statement" on removing all discrimination and urging to the colleges to avoid discriminatory practices.

The Council says it will review these efforts by the colleges.

In other areas, the study reviews the three-fold setup of the public colleges in the state (University of Maryland, the state colleges and the community colleges), and finds it to work as a structure, though needing periodic review.

On Maryland State College, the Council urges cooperation with the nearby and virtually all-white Salisbury State College to help eliminace deficiences of the two schools.

The report, which is Phase One of the master plan for the colleges, will be presented to the governor and to the Maryland General Assembly.

Dr. G. Russell Tatum is chairman of the 13-member Council, which includes Dr. Henry C. Welcome.

Dr. Wesley N. Dorn is director of the staff which worked on the document.

MATTHEW ALEXANDER HENSON (1866-1955)
EXPLORER: Born in Charley County, Maryland. Voyaged to Japan, France, Spain, West Africa, Russia and the Philippines in search of adventure. Accompanied Admiral Robert E. Peary in expeditions to reach North Pole in 1891, 1893, 1902 and 1905. April 6, 1909 Henson, sent forward by Peary, became the first man to reach the North Pole, as he planted the American Flag on the "Top-of-the-World." Received the Gold Medal of the Geographic Society and the Congressional Medal of Honor. (Civil Division)

Did you know that the first man to reach the North Pole was black?
This is just one of the 12 magnificent portraits of distinguished black Americans in our 1969 Negro Historical Calendar.
