JOHNNY SAMPLE

COLTS OVER JETS:

Richardson vs. Sample a Super Bowl high spot

By SAM LACY

The Baltimore Colts figure to defeat the New York in Sunday's Super Bowl football game at Miami, to complete a string of three straight playoff titles for the National Football League in as many years.

Professional oddsmakers have established the Colts at 18½ point favorities over the American Football League champions, but this could be a bit extravagant under the circumstances.

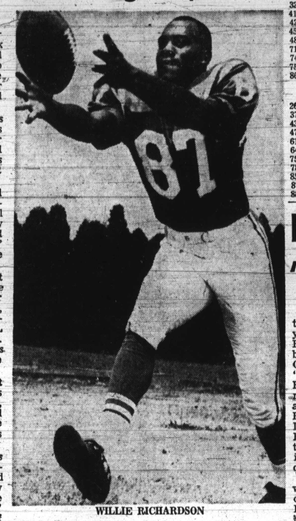
With due respect to all the other elements involved, this Orange Bowl confrontation could possibly hinge on the head-to-head meeting between the Colts' Willie Richardson and the Jets' Johnny Sample.

Sample has made it known repeatedly that he stuck around a year longer than he planned to play, simply because he was aching to play against an NFL team in the Super bowl. The fact that the team is the Colts makes it all the better.

Because of this drive that coach Weeb Ewbank senses in his defensive captain, Johnny has been handed the assignment to handle the Colts' most dangerous longball receiver.

Ewbank indicated as much this week in Ft. Lauderdale, when he suggested that tight end John Mackey will probably draw "double coverage" from the Jets' defense. This means of course, that Weeb has taken Sample's intense desire as evidence that John will be able to cover Willie one-on-one.

In view of the way Johnny showed his age while being consistently beaten by Oakland's Fred Biletnikoff in the AFL title game, this could develop into a classic battle between the opposing aces of the two opponents.



WILLIE RICHARDSON

Under normal conditions, Baltimore's 1968 team appears to be easily that much better than the New York aggregation, but a one-shot thing of this kind is a slightly different proposition.

This writer would estimate that the Colts are from 20 to 25 points better than their upcoming opponents, but not in a situation where bitter incentive and high personal pride can serve to move the acknowledged underdog several notches upward.

The American Football League in general, and the Jets in particular, are smarting over the NFL's continuing superiority. And no team in the league could be more anxious to end it than New York, with her large collection of one-time Colts.

Heading the list is Ewbank, of course.

Weeb coached the Baltimore club to the only two world championships it has won since the franchise was launched in 1953. He was let out in favor of the present coach, Don Shula, whom Ewbanks once tutored.

Also in the Jet camp are the likes of Bake Turner, Mark Smolinski, Carl McAdams and Bill Rademacher, all of whom saw brief service with the Colts.

But the most celebrated of all the Baltimore alumni now in New York livery is Sample. And it could be his head-on battle with Richardson that will spell the difference referred to earlier.

Bears invade D.C., meet HU

Morgan State College basketeers, fresh from an overtime victory over Winston-Salem Teachers College early in the week, visit Washington tomorrow (Saturday) night for a CIAA game with Howard.

It will be the final outing of the Bears before enjoying a week of rest. Their next court appearance will be at home next Saturday night against Hampton Institute.

Coming as it did in the midst of one of their darkest moments, the victory over the Rams Tuesday served a twofold purpose.

It snapped a morale killing loss string and upped the Bears' conference record to a respectable 5-3. In overall play, the Bears are 8-6 on the season.

Banks to receive 'Big Brother' nod

In recognition of his interest in and work with young people in Maryland, Earl C. Banks, head football coach of Morgan State College, will be named "Big Brother of the Year For Maryland," by Baltimore's two Big Brother agencies, the non-sectarian Big Brothers of Baltimore, Inc., and the Jewish Big Brother League, as well as the Big Brothers of Washington County with headquarters in Hagerstown.

Presentation of the award will be made at the annual dinner meeting of Big Brothers of Baltimore to be held at 6:30 p.m. at Eudowood Gardens, Eudowood Plaza.

The Big Brothers dinner meeting and the league's annual banquet to be held January 15, at Blue Crest Fordleigh, 6307 Reisterstown Road, will highlight the local observance of Big Brother Week, America's tribute to the thousands of Big Brothers throughout the U.S. and Canada.

The award to be presented to Banks will read in part: "For over 25 years you have embodied the spirit of good sportsmanship for hundreds of boys and young men. . . and your outstanding contribution for ten years at Maryland State College and for eight years at Morgan. . has firmly established your high reputation throughout the State and nation as a moulder of men."

The certificate of award will also cite Mr. Banks for his "Summer Fun" program which has "brought many hours of happiness to over 35,000 deprived boys." . . . and his "unselfish dedication to the youth of Baltimore and the State of Maryland (which is). . in keeping with the highest ideals and purposes of the Big Brother movement."

Banks, who has been associate proefssor in the department of Physical Education at Morgan, and head football coach, since 1960, has helped produce a number of outstanding players, including Roger Brown of the Rams, Sherman Plumkett formerly with the N.Y. "Jets," Johnny Sample now with the "Jets," Leroy Kelly and Alvin Mitchell of the Cleveland Browns, Willie Lanier of the Kansas City Chiefs, Daryl Johnson of the Boston Patriots and Carlton Dabney of the Atlanta Falcons.

Coach Banks has 65 wins, 13 losses and 1 tie to his credit, and two consecutive "Bowl" wins.

Prior to joining the faculty of Morgan, he was instructor in the Department of Physical Education at Maryland State College in Princess Anne, Maryland, where he also served as assistant to the dean of men, faculty advisor to the freshmen classes and Letter-men's Club and head baseball coach.

He is a graduate of the University of Iowa.

number of advantages at the lowest total owning and operating costs.

Provident Hospital has traditionally served the colored population of Northwest Baltimore, especially the indigent group. The New Provident will continue to serve this segment of Baltimoreans and unlike the older hospitals of this type, will have only private and semi-private rooms. There will be no wards.

In addition to the tradtional target area of the hospital, Provident will serve a wider area of the community. The Comprehensive Neighborhood Health Center on Edmondson Ave. will provide care of a calibre heretofore unavailable to medical indigents.

Provident is a hospital which has always striven toward, and achieved, excellence in the health care it provides, although in the face of the greatest odds.

The desire for high calibre service extends even to the food service, which is extraordinarily flexible.

With the new structure now going up on Liberty Heights Avenue, some of the difficulties of maintaining high standards will be removed.

Despite these odds though, the hospital has maintained an enviable reputation among medical professionals. 1324 surgical operations were performed last year in the hospital.

Provident's School of Nursing, which will have facilities for one hundred students, is being constructed alongside the new building.

This nursing school is to be directly affiliated with the Community College of Baltimore and is a member of the National and State League of Nursing and is a member of the American Hospital Association's new division.

Up to this time, Provident Hospital Development Program has accounted for $13.2 million of the $15 million needed for completion.

The final fund-drive for the remaining $1.8 million has been approved by the Coordinating Council of Fund Raising and is just beginning now.

George L. Russell, City Solicitor and president of the Board of Trustees, explains it this way.

"We are proud of the response of the community to our need for tangible support. As a very necessary member of the family of health-care institutions in Baltimore, we are confident that the New Provident will continue to be supported."

The construction has reached some work in the fourth level now and completion is expected in 1970.

Usual powers in battle for MSA supremacy

It looks much the same in the Maryland Scholastic Association basketball race.

The usual powers — City, Dunbar, Poly and new-comers Gibbons and Forest Park — loom as the major contenders in the three-division setup of the schoolboy title competition.

The first two are tied at the top of Division 1, each boasting four wins in five starts for the session.

Poly is unbeaten and, consequently, in sole possession of first place in Division 2. And Forest Park is locked at the top of the B Conference standings with Northwestern at 3-0.

All of which brings this afternoon's (Friday) MSA schedule into focus as one of the most important days of action thus far in the campaign.

Poly tangles with City on the Collegians' floor. And Northern takes on Dunbar with the latter playing host.

The Engineers could establish a comfortable margin in their Division 2 lead, inasmuch as second place Cardinal Gibbons is idle. A 6-0 slate would give Poly a game-and-a-half edge over the Catholics' 4-1.

City, on the other hand, will be bent on upending the Engineers in the interest of their own race with the Poets. The latter will face an improving Northern aggregation, but should win.

Northern poses a threat because she moved into a challenging position on Tuesday, by routing Calvert Hall, 67-56. This put Northern only two games out of first place in Division 2, behind Poly.

Banks lectures coaches on winning philosophy

LOS ANGELES — In a Thursday speech here before the 1969 annual meeting of the American Football Coaches Association, Earl Banks, coach of championship football at Morgan State College, attributed his team's successes to coaching philosophy as much as to specific plays.

Banks declared that his football training philosophy centers upon "convincing young men that they can learn and play football at levels of excellence and then proceeding to teach them the elements of such football excellence."

Banks' teams have had eight consecutive winning seasons, have held five consecutive conference championships in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and through the end of the 1968 season have won 34 of their last 35 games.

They have been champions of the Orange Blossom Classic and the Tangerine Bowl.

In a special 1968 pre-season standing-room-only Yankee Stadium encounter, they toppled Grambling (La.) from its high ranking by a score of 9-7.

Banks related that his plays are basically four and that "there is nothing particularly unique" about them.

Because he believes that one can over-teach, Banks says that "we do not teach our players an abundance of things so much as we teach them a relatively small body of movements and behaviors on which various other modifications may be based."

Most of all, Banks declared, "We do not teach frills. We neither teach nor play a fancy game. We keep it simple."

Contrary to mistaken analysis of his coaching program and resources, Banks said that Morgan State does not attract the best high school athlete.

"Our recruiting and grants-in-aid resources," he related, "do not permit us to compete with the larger colleges and universities.

"Often we are unable to compete even with schools smaller than we. And so we take what we get and shape it into what we need."

"And," Banks concluded, "even if the future may see fewer games won, or a winning streak of more modest proportions, we would still hold to these principles.

"In doing so, we would simply be behaving as good teachers should — that is, energizing a student into believing that he can achieve, and then teaching what he needs to know in order to achieve."

NBA All-Star game sellout

Their 15,000 seat Civic Center home court already over-subscribed, officials of the Baltimore Bullets are twiddling their thumbs and awaiting Tuesday's 19th annual National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Once again the East — winner of 12 of the 18 previous contests — is favored over a West aggregation which boasts one of the most exciting players of the year, in rookie sensation Elvin Hayes.

Hayes, establishing a precedent in threatening to capture the NBA scoring title in his first season, leads a contingent that also includes the Lakers' Elgin Baylor, Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West, the Warriors Nate Thurmond and Rudy Larusso, and Seattle's Lenny Wilkens.

The East, which also boasts an outstanding rookie in Baltimore's Westley Unseld, has the Bullets' Earl Monroe and Gus Johnson, the Celtics' Bill Russell and John Havlicek, and the Pistons' Dave Bing.

Barbs Delight is favored in Bowie stake Saturday

BOWIE, Md. — Guy Huguelet Jr.'s Barb's Delight, who flashed a 1:13.2 six furlongs workout at his rivals in a workout after the first race Wednesday, heads the ten probable starters in the 32nd running of the $30,000 added Southern Maryland Handicap at Bowie Race Course tomorrow (Saturday).

Handicapper Lawrence J. Abbundi said trainer Hal Steele intends to accept the 126-pound impost assigned Barbs Delight, who will be in quest of his fourth straight win. His latest success in the Monumental Handicap at Laurel produced a new track record for the mile and one-sixteenth.

Those expected to oppose the highweighted Barbs Delight were listed by Abbundi as follows:

Woodside Stud's Rock James P. Mills' Salerno (122), winner of the seven furlongs Capitol Handicap at Laurel in track record time; Charles L. Shell's Sub Call (118), third less than a half length back in last year's Southern Maryland Handicap; John A. Hersberger's Juvenile John (116), winner of a division of the Congressional Handicap at Laurel;

Westinghouse is people

30 YEARS OF HELPING TO BUILD A BETTER BALTIMORE.

Progress in space, sea, land and the development of human potential are the goals of Westinghouse/Baltimore. We are now observing our 30th year of corporate citizenship in Baltimore, three decades in which we have sought to participate to the fullest in building a healthy, harmonious, prosperous community in which every citizen is entitled to develop his personal resources in pursuit of a better life.

From a modest beginning of a single plant with 250 employes in 1938 to today's 23 locations employing more than 16,000 people, Westinghouse has enjoyed steady growth in Baltimore. During these years, Westinghouse has paced the electronics industry in many sophisticated developments in radar, communications and weapons systems for application on the ocean floor, on land and in outer space.

As important to Westinghouse as our scientific achievement is our participation in such projects as Job Corps, Peace Corps, Youth in Industry and the training programs of the National Alliance of Busirtessmen. As part of the N.A.B. Program, a group of men and women have been trained to assemble small electronic components.

Already full-fledged Westinghouse employes, these individuals are contributing to the company's goal of making a better tomorrow today.

In addition to such training programs, Westinghouse and its people lend their strong cooperation to many areas of community activity, such as supporting hospitals, helping Scout groups, sponsoring Junior Achievement, contributing to charity funds, working with service clubs, P.T.A.'s and other worthwhile citizens' groups.

Westinghouse and people go hand in hand.
