GAINING RENOWN —Daniel Comegys, who has earned a reputation in Europe for his singing, returned to Baltimore for a visit. With him are son, Marc Solomon, who is nearly two years old; daughter, Danielle, five years, and wife, Mrs. Elaine Comegys.

TESTIFY AT HEARING — Brian Malloy, 8, and his mother, Mrs. Glenda G. Malloy, of the 1300 block Kitmore Rd., testified at a Pubic Service Commission hearing Tuesday that a cab driver dropped young Brian off at the wrong hospital and then abandoned him for another fare. The cab driver said he was "convinced" he had taken the boy to the right hospital. The hearing will be continued at a later date when a security guard who witnessed the incident at Johns Hopkins Hospital is expected to appear.

This left newsmen dangling, until he finally explained he felt the law should be left on the books.

He said he plans to review all cases on death row, including that of Johnny Brown before any decisions.

In other matters, the governor said he had made no study on the proposal to expand Morgan State College into a university.

Also he observed that the Baltimore Transit Company is likely to be faced with a long stretch when the union's present contract expires.

He said he would have no decision on a possible tax hike until after the next 30-day period.

The budget, he said, is being submitted to the General Assembly just as Gov. Agnew left it.

On the matter of crime in Baltimore City, the governor said he had met with members of the Baltimore Licensed Beverage Association early in the week and Police Commissioner Donald D. Pomerleau and they had been advised there would be more patrolmen on the streets as a reward Young, 18, a senior student and four-year veteran of the band.

The young musician, who has high hopes of entering the Peabody Conservatory of Music next September, noted that the band's schedule has been growing longer and longer of late, and that exercises have become more and more strenuous.

"We've been working out forms, marching out on the football field, practicing every day," he said. "But I guess I can't complain — I'd have to practice this much anyway if I want to get into Peabody."

Steven Elliott, 16, a junior and drummer in the school band, looked forward to the march down Pennsylvania Avenue, past the reviewing stand full of dignitaries.

"It's a good feeling — going to Washington and playing for all those important people like the President," he almost shouted, trying to be heard over the martial strains of "Maryland, My Maryland," which the band is practicing to play in honor of the new vice president.

"In a way, I'm glad it's happening while I'm at school here. This is the first year I've been in the band here, though I used to play in the junior high school band," he added.

Arderer McClendon, carrying her flute with her as she left the band practice room, hesitated a moment as she was asked for her feelings on the matter.

"I feel really proud — it's an honor — this will be the first time the band's played at a really important event," she said, smiling prettily. "My family's kind of proud of me, too."

For Mr. Hamlin, teaching his first year at Forest Park, the past week a period of strenuous preparation and constant practice for the coming event. But perhaps the most dominant feeling for him has been one of surprise.

"I didn't even know as late as the day I left for Christmas vacation that we'd be marching in the Inaugural Parade — I didn't have the slightest suspicion," he told the AFRO.

"The first I heard of it was on Jan. 6, when we came back. It seems Mr. Norris Weiss, the principal, got a phone call from the Executive Mansion, and then a letter from the Governor formally inviting us."

Asked how he thought the vice president would feel in pointing out to his new associates on the reviewing platform that the all-black band represents his alma mater, Mr. Hamlin noted, the "peculiar twist" to the story behind the change in the school's student body.

"If this brings anything at all to light it's the fact that there's been a very thorough change in this part of town. I wonder if it will make anyone think."

The band will be dressed in green and gray, the school colors.

Gray pants with a green stripe and green jackets are the basics for the outfit.

The majorettes will be attired in green skirts and white sweaters with a green "F" on them.

The two young ladies on either side of the school banner will wear white skirts, white sweaters with a green "F" on the sweaters.

The color guards will have green uniforms.

The members of the band include:

Trombone: King James, Wallace Cole, Walter Brown and Paul Carter. Saxophone: National Hotler, James Lindsay, Harold Ray, Kirby Reid, Alfred Riley and Lawrence Jenkins.

Harold Delaney, dean of the college, who received the petition from Sam Lloyd, president of the Student Government, told the AFRO: "There was no threat of takeover at the time I received the petition."

Maj. William "Box" Harris, head of the Police-Community Relations Division of the Police Department, said that city police were not detailed to the campus, but that plans were being formulated in case of unrest in the future.

As the campus is a state institution, Maj. Harris explained, State Police would take precedence, though city police may patrol the perimeter of the school or be alerted for additional help.

He emphasized that city police were not needed this week at the college.

Evening and graduate school registration at the school will be held on the evenings of Feb. 5-6. Final examinations are schedued for Jan. 20-28.
