Mrs. Turner cited by Murphy Council

Residents of the George B. Murphy Homes turned out for a stalwart friend who has worked with them and was instrumental in founding the Improvement Council which honored her Sunday.

The affair honored Mrs. Hattie Turner, who, the residents way, was a bit of everything — social worker, manager's aide — in her tenure at the homes.

Mrs. Turner was cited for her performance as mine's policewoman, a little bit of a lawyer, truant officer officer and founder of the George B. Murphy Improvement Council.

Mrs. Turner has now been assigned to the Westport Homes.

Mrs. Gladys Spell, president of the Council and member of the tenants advisory board of the Department of Housing and Community Development, was among those who spoke at the meeting. Mrs. Spell gave a talk, "What Is in Thine Hand?"

Housing Commissioner Robert Embry and other officials sent representatives to the meeting.

Mrs. Turner spoke to the group on the privilege of working with them for two and a half years.

The meeting was adjourned by the chaplain, Mrs. Rosie Butler.

W. Gorusch is manager of the homes.

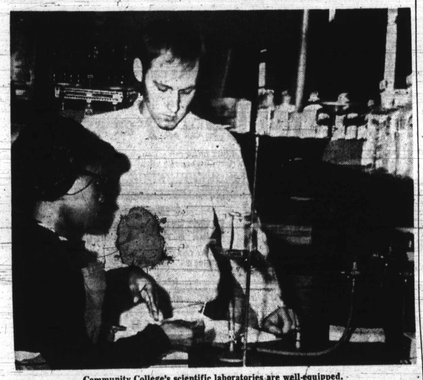
Community College Evening Division Enables You To Get Ahead In Business, Gives Wider Cultural Background



Community College's scientific laboratories are well-equipped.

By DR. SYDNEY KOBRE
News Bureau
Community College
of Baltimore

Evening Division of the Community College of Baltimore not only offers programs for the career-minded who want to succeed in business or one of the professions, but the college also attracts many who wish to broaden their cultural background and intellectual horizons.

"These adults include persons in the business world who seek to widen and deepen their general knowledge," said Herman E. Westerberg, director of the Evening Division. "These adults know that the broader the base of their knowledge, the higher they can build their careers. Today management wants persons with broad backgrounds, with insights into what is going on in the world around them."

CCB courses are designed for these forward-looking individuals, but also for the adults who like to learn more about the social and political happenings of the day. They want to understand trends and the meaning behind the headlines. They are interested in world and American history as well as government.

These alert persons want to explore science and literature, art and music. Many of these "students" are housewives who want to change from the routine of housekeeping and rearing children during the day.

Registration for the Evening Division begins January 27 and extends through January 31, hours 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Classes begin the week of February 3. They usually last from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m.

The college's programs of instruction have considerable variety, ranging from English literature to mathematics, from chemistry to art. On this page will be found only a few of the 120 courses in the Evening Division.

The Evening Division is an integral part of the total program of The Community College of Baltimore which operates a Day Division of 2,800 students and two summer sessions.

For further information drop a postcard to Director of Evening Division, Community College of Baltimore, 2901 Liberty Heights Ave., or call 523-2151, Ext. 205, 206.

Art, Music, English Depts. Teach Appreciation, Skills

Community College of Baltimore believes that a knowledge and appreciation of art and music and literature are needed by modern men and women.

The Art department aims to increase the appreciation of adults in their artistic view of the world. Students get a broad background in the history of art. The program, too, helps students discover their artistic potential. Beginners are encouraged "to try their hand." Some students desire to become professional artists or commercial artists, while others want to teach art in public schools. Courses in drawing and painting, fundamentals of design and commercial art are offered.

The CCB music department seeks to increase the appreciation of adults and lively discussions of trends in music are held, with records of the masters being played and talked about.

The English department believes that the mastery of English is basic to success in life. The department offers a program in the evening that makes students articulate, and enables them to enjoy the rich literary heritage of English-speaking peoples. Structural English for those who need to strengthen their knowledge of grammar, punctuation, spelling is given. An effective reading course helps adults comprehend more of what they read.

We live. The science department seeks to increase the awareness of all adults of what science is and how it tests and discovers new principles and new concepts.

The department also furnishes specialized training for those who will use science in their present work or their future profession. To enter pharmacy, dentistry or medicine, or engage in laboratory work, scientific knowledge and courses in chemistry, and biology, physics and astronomy as well as the earth sciences are needed. Students in the Evening Division can study general inorganic chemistry and organic chemistry. Well-equipped laboratories in the science department, are used. In the general subject of biology, instructors present the study of general botany and zoology. Another course teaches technical physics.

With the rise in crime in the Baltimore metropolitan area and throughout the nation, attention is focused on the severe crime problem. The Evening Division of the Community College gives special attention to this in a number of courses. These are attended by adults who are concerned about this issue and by others who are considering entering law enforcement as a profession.

In the classes also are local police captains, lieutenants, sergeants, and patrolmen who are learning more about their profession and are seeking to advance themselves. Police cadets, trainees in the department, are sent to CCB for their academic background. Also persons from correctional institutions and security forces of local plants attend.

The Division selected a group of experienced practicioners in law-enforcement work to teach. They give a course in the introduction to law enforcement and corrections, and another in police administration. Students also study criminal investigation as well as criminal law and court procedures. In the psychology and sociology departments, courses in criminal psychology, the crime problem and juvenile delinquency may be studied.

Crime, Divorce, Housing Studied As Social Problems

Critical problems are faced by our cities today.

The Evening Division gives students the opportunity to examine these current issues under the guidance of fair, knowledgeable experts who devote their lives to these problems.

In the introductory sociology course instructors lay a foundation for adults' knowledge of our social institutions, how they develop, what makes them succeed or fail. In the social problems course the students get right down to the heart of today's troubles, learning deep causes and remedies suggested.

Adults who want to learn about one of the most severe of the modern social cancers enroll in the course in penology or juvenile delinquency. Others study programs in public welfare and, and the professional workers learn, "Interviewing in Public Social Services." Closely related are the courses in elementary geography and urban geography, which deals with social and economic and political problems of the modern city. Courses on this area serve for general education purposes or as refresher courses for career preparation.

Science gives Insights Into World 'Round Us

Science has revolutionized our way of living. It has brought us changed industrial methods and transportation facilities. It has presented us with new medicines and antibiotics, eliminated some diseases, reduced others and extended the life-span. It has given us household electric necessities, jetplanes and atomic power-plants.

We live in an age of science, and it is necessary that all persons learn about the physical and biological world in which

Madison Housing elects Mrs. Gorham president

Mrs. Lucille Gorham was elected President of the Madison Square Housing Corporation Wednesday evening at the first annual meeting of this nonprofit corporation.

The Madison Square Housing Corporation was created as a spin-off of the Interfaith Housing Council and composed of five members appointed by the Interfaith Housing council, and ten members elected by and from the community served by the new housing construction.

Other officers elected for a one-year term were: Walter Lively, vice president; Mrs. Maritha Branch, treasurer and Jack Ladd Carr, secretary.

Other members of the Board elected were:

Frank Bien, the Rev. Wayne Moulder, Stuart Wechsler, Rabbi Howard Simon, the Rev. Ellsworth Bunce, Mrs. Odessa Thomas, Mrs. Clara Hill, Mrs. Myrtle Spencer, Mrs. Patricia White, Harry Mills and Nathan Irby.

Mrs. Gorham expects that the Madison Square Housing Corporation will break ground in the next few months in Lot 19 of the Gay Street I Urban Renewal Area.

In reviewing the past years' activities of the Board, Mrs. Gorham said the group has learned much about housing including dealings with Baltimore mortgage bankers, the local F.H.A. office and the myriad of government agencies required to make comments before progress can be made.

Mrs. Gorham expressed her gratitude Lon Gore, her gratitude to Lon Gore, her Baltimore Housing Development Corporation, who has acted in the capacity of housing consultant to Madison Square Housing Corporation's board; to Joseph Finnerty, attorney and Michael Quinn, Financial consultant

New Baltimore County school executive once AFRO newsie

CECIL M. COOPER
New Baltimore County school specialist was once AFRO newsie

"My experience as an AFRO newsboy taught me how to be independent and how to work with people. I feel that every boy should at one time or another be a newsboy."

This was the reaction of 7-year-old Cecil M. Cooper, who started out as an AFRO carrier during the personel specialist in the Baltimore County Public Schools.

His appointment, announced last week, is effective February 1.

Mr. Cooper is a 1955 graduate of Morgan State College and has earned his master's equivalent in education.

He began his teaching career in Baltimore County at Banneker High School.

From 1961 to 1963 Cooper taught at Sollers Point Junior-Senior High School. There he coached cross country, indoor and outdoor track and field.

In his second year at Sollers Point he was selected chairman of the Physical Education Department.

Presently Mr. Cooper is the chairman of the Physical Education Department of Johnnycake Junior High School, a post he has held since 1965.

His new offices will be at the Board of Education office in Towson.

A good athlete, the six-foot-one Cooper participated in football, basketball, track, and swimming while attending Douglass High School in Baltimore City where he graduated in 1951.

At Morgan he captained the Varsity Swimming Team for two years.

Affiliated with many professional and civic organizations, Mr. Cooper is currently vice-president of the Maryland Association of MAHPER (Maryland Association Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

A member of the Druid Hill Y.M.C.A. for over 25 years he has received two Mentions — Certificates for his outstanding service and contribution.

The 37-year-old educator's wife, Elizabeth, is also a graduate of Morgan and presently works for the Baltimore Department of Social Services. The Coopers have one child, Marcia.

City and county set school ties

The desire to establish a working relationship between the Baltimore school system and the twenty-three county school systems of Maryland has moved another step closer to realization.

School Board President Frank D. Murnaghan Jr., Board member Mrs. M. Richmond Farring, and Superintendent Thomas D. Shields led a representation from the Baltimore City Public Schools on a day-long visit to the Frederick County School System.

The visit and the discussions focused primarily on educational innovations and the practical steps necessary to implement them.

The Baltimore group toured the South Frederick Elementary School, a well established non-graded school; and the Governor Johnson Junior-Senior High School, a new secondary school in which instruction is carried on through team teaching in multiple-use classroom facilities.

In both of these schools practicing newer educational ideas, the Baltimore educators found that the Frederick school leaders, too, faced the need to establish criteria for selecting and training faculty to teach in newer educational environments.

They face the need also to gain public support for capital improvement investments and selection of school sites and to develop citizen understanding and acceptance of new educational programs.

Although Frederick is somewhat removed from Baltimore geographically, the educational opportunities and concerns that both school systems recognize and deal with daily are obviously very similar.

Mrs. Mary Condon Hodgson and Richard Kline, president and vice president of the Frederick County Schools, and Assistant Superintendent Edward Hamilton received the Baltimore group.

The Frederick County educators visited Baltimore last October in response to Mayor D'Alesandro's invitation to all county school systems to confer with city school officials and study common concerns.

At the conclusion of the meeting in Frederick, both groups agreed to make arrangements for future meetings and visits that can be beneficial to all parties.
