

1 any change is made, and it leaves room for change, the change
2 will be made knowing what the change is, knowing that it is 3 required by the Federal Government and the state agreeing
4 to it.

5 THE CHAIRMAN: Any other questions?

6 Delegate Koss.

7 DELEGATE KOSS: Delegate Boyer, I am certainly 8 very sympathetic toward extending the rights and privileges
9 of citizenship to people who live on federal enclaves.

10 What implications does this have should, for 11 instance, the national government establish a very desirable
12 national park, like Assateague, or anything like that?

13 Would this language require that the state
14 assume policing powers within that park?

15 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Boyer.

16 DELEGATE BOYER: No, it is my understanding that 17 if this GP-5 is adopted in the constitution that the state
18 will reserve to itself all the inherent powers that it now
19 possesses save and excepting those specifically deeded
20 to the Federal Government for any specific purpose, not 21 a general exclusive jurisdiction. For instance, Assateague
