
UNADORNED pine casket, lined with black cloth, holds remains of Charles P. Howard, pioneer civil rights warrior, buried in Baltimore Thursday.

Plain pine coffin, no flowers for impressive Howard funeral

BALTIMORE

There were no flowers, no tears, no special decorations for the brief and simple funeral services of Charles Preston Howard Sr.

The 74-year-old civil rights warrior, pioneer lawyer, publisher and world traveller, whose UN column regularly appeared in the AFRO, had the kind of farewell he desired.

His remains rested in a plain pine coffin at the foot of the altar in Heritage United Church of Christ where last rites were held on Thursday.

The single decoration was a black ribbon with three black flowers which matched the lining of the casket.

• • •

His son, Charles Jr. explained, "It is the tradition for members of the family to bury their own. The meshing of different ideas produced this casket. The black interior is symbolic of our father's love for black people."

"My father was very conservative and lived a simple life."

Cyprus wood was the basic material used. No special treatment was necessary except the adding of a coat of shellac.

Active pallbearers, and male members of the family wore black arm bands.

Acknowledgements from the heads of state came from the continents of Europe, Asia and Africa; from officials abroad, various foreign missions to the UN, and some 31 states here at home.

• • •

Nigeria's Kwane Nkrumah, stated, "We are deeply saddened by Chares' death. He was a great son of Africa and an unflinching fighter for the cause of Black Power. I personally have lost a true and strong supporter."

The Rev. Vernon N. Dobson, pastor of Union Baptist Church cited Mr. Nkrumah's message from among thousands of like expressions.

It was the oldest son and namesake who gave the eulogy for his dad.

He said in part: "He was a fisherman, his journey through this life ended . ours continues. He was the mantel of the "House of Howards."

The first principal in the House of Howards, was to "know who you are and what you are."

• • •

A second principal was learned as he passed on. "One's desire for freedom is measured in direct proportion to time spent sacrificing and the willingness to commit ones self to the cause."

He was a fisherman of men, "to his third born Dad was the statesman, confident of world leaders, especially the black ones."

He told his second son. . "Our people must learn that we can, and by your example they will."

To his second son, (Judge Joseph C. Howard of Supreme Bench), a sensitive soul, dad was the great justice. The fighter for civil rights. . the big, beautiful black soul.

But, to his first born son, "Dad was the most of all a big brother. He truly loved and respected womanhood."

Dad often said, history will report that in my day the strongest homosapians that lived were the black women and the weakest were black men."

And, then a friend, the Rev. Frank ("Father") Williams, the civil rights leader now minister of Washington's Asbury Methodist Church, said, "My friend, the stout-hearted, Charles P. Howard, knew there was only a little time left, but . he had a little more work to do. . he crammed as much as possible in to that little bit of time."

He and the deceased were close friends and worked together for the election of Mr. Howard's son, the Hon. Joseph C. Howard, who won a seat on Baltimore's Supreme Bench in November.

• • •

Other funeral participants were:

The Rev. F. Allison Phillips sang, "His Eye Is On The Sparrow."

Mrs. Katie Grove, organist who played, "Death is but crossing the world, as friends do the seas: they live in one another still.

• • •

Unique was the eight-page funeral program, purple with black print.

The first page carried a smiling likeness of Mr. Howard, with three black flowers at the top, and this verse:

"Every time a man has contributed to the victory of the dignity of the spirit, everytime a man has said no to an attempt to subjugate his fellows, I have felt solidarity with his act."

Inside pages carried the order of service followed by the sons obituary ("We celebrate Charles Preston Howard today—he, as a man and as a spirit. As a man he is gone but his spirit lives on."

And a verse which consisted of values taken from his life, "Who shall know this soul? Sorrow songs both sung and went. Wordless; wordless discontent Black consciousness. The tragic beat of life and hot black rage."

Interment was in Arbutus Memorial-Park, beside his wife of 38 years, the former Maude Louisa Lewis, who died in 1953.

They had four children, three of whom survive the three sons, the other child, Mary Louise, died in infancy.

Active pallbearers were Mr. Howard's three sons, Charles P. Jr., Judge Joseph C. Howard, both of Baltimore and Dr. Lawrence C. Howard, St. Louis; along with Bradford James, John B. Taylor, III, and Sam Brown.

Honorary pallbearers included attorneys, judges and civil rights leaders: —

Milton B. Allen, Soloman Baylor, Winston Berry, Benjamin Brown, Coleman Burroughs, Walter Carter, Evelyn O. Chisley, The Hon. Harry A. Cole, Samuel T. Daniels, Dr. Millard Dean, the Hon. Robert Douglass, Richard Durham, Dr. Homer Favor, Mal. Goode, Maj. William Harris, Nathaniel High-tower, Roy Innis, Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, Floyd McKissick, Clarence Mitchell, Jr., Rufus Mitchell, George B. Murphy, John H. Murphy, III., William H. Murphy, Michael Nichols, Dr. George Mack Phillips.

Also, Dr. Benjamin Quarles, the Hon. George L. Russell, Jr., Herman Sydnor, Dr. Furman L. Templeton, Dolphin Thompson, the Hon. Robert B. Watts, Archie Williams, Charles H. Williams, and Charles Williams.

LAST PHOTO of AFRO UN Correspondent and world famous civil rights warrior, Charles P. Howard, was this one made Dec. 17, 1968. It shows Mr. Howard congratulating his son, the Hon. Joseph P. Howard, who won election to Baltimore's Supreme Bench.

UNITED NATIONS REPORT

Colonialists, allies shaken by strong African solidarity

By CHARLES P. HOWARD
UN Correspondent

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is last column Mr. Howard wrote before his death on Saturday).

UNITED NATIONS — Hallelujah! What United Nations resolutions could never do for African freedom, in the face of opposition by the United States and Great Britain, is now being undertaken by the Africans with the support of allies around the world.

For more than a decade now the Africans and Asians fought militantly here for effective measures to be taken by the U.N. against South Africa, Portugal, and now the racist regime of Ian Smith in Southern Rhodesia.

Resolutions were approved which condemned and deplored these white minority outlaws; but while only words were being handed the Africans in their struggle, the whites were rule in Southern Africa were being given financial investments, planes, management know-how and everything else that really mattered to strengthen them against the oppressed blacks.

• • •

All that is behind us now. We are informed by the New York Times, of Jan. 23, that a conference of black people from 50 nations, augmented by delegates from North Vietnam and the Soviet Union, was recently concluded in Khartoum, Sudan. The delegates met for three days with representatives of six guerilla groups whose aim is the toppling of the white regimes in so-called "Portuguese Africa," Southern Rhodesia and South Africa.

Present at the conference was Wilfred T. Ussery, the national chairman of CORE. Ussery said he planned to sponsor visits to U.S. black communities by African guerilla leaders to appeal for arms, medical supplies, financial support and volunteers.

It should not surprise anyone that the U.S. State Department reacted immediately by calling attention to laws making it a criminal offense to recruit volunteers for revolutionary movements abroad.

This is the same United States Government which opposes with all its might the imposition of criminal sanctions against South Africa and Portugal for their crimes against humanity — black humanity. It is the same United States Government which permits its white nationals to furnish capital to Portugal for exploiting African oil resources.

Gulf Oil, for example, has millions invested in the oil fields of Portuguese-ruled Cabinda.

Cabinda is a sliver of land on the West Coast of Africa that juts into the Interior, separating the Congo Republic (Brazzaville) and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (Kinshasa).

American still maintain a military pact with Portugal, a part of the "free world," although that dictatorship has hundreds of thousands of white troops in its African "possessions" — Mozambique, Angola and so-called "Portuguese Guinea" to prevent black Africans from exercising their rights as free human beings.

Most Americans do not know of a British-based company called Lonrho, Limited. This company which has extensive holdings in Rhodesia, South Africa and the Congo, is headed by the Duke of Kent and has been a spokesman in the financial world for the white supremacist regime in Rhodesia.

Lonrho's exploitation of Africa has been most rewarding to its white investors. Its stock, according to Newsweek of Jan. 20, "have soared in recent months from $1.20 to $6.11 per share. And it is expected to reap $24 million in profits this year. In 1961 its profits were only $434,000.

The increase in profits and the rise in the price of its stock can be attributed to Lonrho's stealthy crawl northward in Africa from Rhodesia and South Africa.

Lonrho has just paid $36 million for the Ashanti gold fields in Ghana. It has acquired vast holdings in plantations, transport power, automobiles and insurance in Congo (Kinshasa).

It is said that 90,000 whites in England and elsewhere own Lonrho and through their money they are cooperating in fastening the new colonialism on black independent Africa. They are also cooperating to keep colonialism and racism in those territories that have not become independent.

• • •

The news that black people around the world are waking up to cooperate actively in the fight to make all of Africa free is something to rejoice about.

The black guerillas in Portuguese - administered Monzambique on Africa's East coast already control two northern provinces, Niassa and Cabo Delgado, bordering on Malawi. They are also disputing with arms Portuguese control of the North western province of Tete, through which the Zambesi flows on its way to the Indian Ocean.

Tete Province is the site of a proposed hydro-electric dam which the guerillas say they will make a pretty expensive affair. The dam is to be built by American contractors in cooperation with those of Japan and some other countries.

It will supply electric power to Rhodesia and South Africa and create conditions for settling vast numbers of whites. At present there are only 100,000 Portuguese in a sea of eight million Africans.

Portuguese Foreign Minister Franco Nogueira, stung by black African resistance has called on the United States for more cooperation than Portugal is now getting. "We have . . . the right to demand that others cooperate with us in achieving this policy (of maintaining African colonies), once they have recognized the interest and value for the West in general."

These are words of a frightened colonialist. They are the surest indication that the pressure of the 15,000 armed guerillas in Mozambique are worth more than millions of words.

Now if the guerillas get International backing, especially those promised by Ussery of CORE, Portugal will be brought to her knees in Africa.

And if Portugal goes, Smith of Southern Rhodesia and Vorster of South Africa cannot for long prevail as rich white islands in angry black seas.

Need a job! Here is help in your area

If you live in the inner city, have a problem getting transportation to find a job, this article is for you.

The Maryland State Employment Service at 1100 N. Eutaw St. has job bank services available at a number of outreach offices throughout the city.

"We initiated outreach facilities in the inner-city," said J. Donn Aiken, director of Maryland's Public Employment Agency, "to bring employment services to the door-step.

"The Job Bankbook, with its daily, current listing of job openings is made available to each of our outreach offices at the start of every working day.

• • •

"Some of these offices are within walking distance of many inner-city job seekers."

They are located at: —

STERLING KEYES' IDEA:

Children's Aides complete training

"The main thing the program does is reduce the adult to pupil relationship. If this aide doesn't do anything else but listen to a child read, it lets the teacher do something else.

"It also provides the teacher with extra adult help in the classrooms where you have 35 children and one teacher."

This is how Sterling Keyes, Administrative Educational Assistant to the Baltimore Superintendent of Public Schools, described to the AFRO the significance of the Children's Aide Program.

Mr. Keyes presented certificates to 620 newly employed aides who have successfully completed a 16-week-training program.

The ceremony took place this morning, (Friday), in the Lemmel Junior High School Auditorium.

• • •

Children's Aides was Mr. Keyes' first project with the Baltimore school system.

He says he got the idea from his work in Hempstead, N.Y. where there were children's aides but they were limited to non-classroom work.

Mr. Keyes worked in Hempstead with Dr. Thomas D. Sheldon, now Baltimore superintendent.

At this morning's ceremonies, Dr. Sheldon told the Aides that their positions are important and unique and their duties will be a valuable contribution to the education of nearly 45,000 elementary school children in 63 schools.

• • •

The Children's Aides are different from Educational Aides in that Children's Aides will serve in the classroom working directly with the instruction of children under the teacher's supervision.

Education Aides have been employed for several years, performing duties outside the classroom, enabling the teacher to devote more time to the students.

The Children's Aide Program, in addition to giving teachers more help, involves the community in the life of the school. All applicants for the program had to live in the community of the school where they planned to work and should bring to the school the concerns of the community.

• • •

Mr. Keyes told the AFRO that there were 1500 applicants for the program.

Of those who were accepted and completed the training, "I was surprised to find nine or ten with four years of college, and we have some 30 with less than a 10th grade education."

The desired number is 650 and Mr. Keyes says he hopes to increase the number of men. Right now there are only 13.

The aides were trained by teachers and will be paid $2.10 an hour. The training period pay was $1.60.

"Most of the men were driven off by the idea of working with a woman in the classroom and by the fact that the pay is not enough for a man to support a family," said Keyes.

Most of the Aides are married and have elementary school-age children.

'TAKE ME HOME' is what four-year-old Lloyd seems to be saying to AFRO readers who may be interested in adopting him as their very own. Learn more about Lloyd by writing or calling, Family and Children's Society, 1301 Park Ave., Baltimore, Md., 21217, phone 669-9000.

Mandel backs low income housing bill

AFRO BUREAU

ANNAPOLIS — Gov. Marvin Mandel has endorsed the SB 254, introduced in the General Assembly Monday, which would establish a low income housing authority to help subdivisions and private industry construct low and moderate cost housing.

The bill was drafted by a legislative subcommittee on which the governor served when he was speaker of the House of Delegates.

Solid backing by Gov. Mandel is seen as virtually assurring passage of the bill.

It was sponsored by Senators William S. James (D. Harford), president, Harry R. Hughes (D. upper Eastern Shore), majority floor leader and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Roy N. Staten (D., Baltimore), all influential lawmakers.

The bill would create a Maryland Housing and Community Development Authority, with a seven-member board.

It would be empowered to acquire land, establish priorities for housing needs, make mortgage loans and issue its own bonds.

Top priority for housing would be given those persons who are displaced by highway construction or other public projects.

The bill also provides that the development of low and moderate income housing be facilitated by reducing costs through grants and loans and the stimulation of a larger flow of private investment funds from lending institutions.

Included is an authorization for $200,000 in state funds as initial operating costs.

Overall purpose of the proposal is to alleviate the dreath of low and moderate income housing throughout the state, with specific attention to areas where needed most.

About 20,000 home loans are guaranteed by the Veterans Administration each month.

Neighborhood Olympics workshop will be held

Baltimore City is making a bid to host the Olympic Games in 1969.

A steering committee, headed by the Baltimore Inner City Community Mental Health Program, has been working on a city-wide Neighborhood Olympics program.

The program will be designed to provide varied athletic and other competitive events to run throughout the year in every city neighborhood and to lead up to an annual Baltimore City Olympic Games featuring contestants from all over the city.

The Games are meant to provide participation on the widest possible level, so the form, and content of the program will be determined by the residents of the neighborhoods which will be competing.

All interested individuals, agencies, formal and informal groups are asked to attend a workshop so that they can take part in the development of the program from its earliest stages.

The workshop will be held at Harlem Park School, Harlem Ave. at Gilmor St., from 6to 10 p.m. on the evenings of Monday, Feb. 3, and Tuesday, Feb. 4.

"The purpose of the Neighborhood Olympic Games is to involve all the neighborhoods of Baltimore," said convenor Ross Ford. "For this reason we have scheduled the workshop so that working people and young people have an opportunity to take part and to express their views. They will determine what events will make up the Neighborhood Olympics as well as when, where and how to stage them."

Dr. Daniel Cappon, who first proposed the idea, added, "The only guidelines are participation, cooperation and healthy competition. We want not only the participation of the younger competitors, we want everybody involved, be it in planning, organizing or carrying out the program. We want to involve everyone in Baltimore with the Baltimore Neighborhood Olympic Games."

MISSING — Roland Weaver, 13, has been missing from his home at 919 N. Woodington Rd. since Nov. 4. On that day, his mother, Mrs. Martha Weaver, said the youth left for school and never returned. Mrs. Weaver reported teachers at his school said the boy was doing well until his disappearance. The distraught mother pleaded for information on the youth is and said a reward is offered. Anyone with information on the youth is asked to notify the Missing Persons Bureau of the Police Department.

New teams threaten CIAA tourney powers

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Although a lot of basketball remains to be played in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association's regular season, fans are already trying to establish their "favorites" for the forthcoming CIAA Tournament.

The three-day tournament is scheduled to be held in the spacious Greensboro Coliseum February 27-March 1 and another sellout crowd is already anticipated by sponsors of the tourney.

• • •

At least one thing is certain and that is that the tournament lineup won't be the same. There will probably be three or more "new" teams competing for the tourney championship.

St. Paul's, currently 9-1 in league play, Morgan State, 7-3, and Maryland State, 5-3, are all making a strong bid to earn one of the coveted eight tournament berths.

Johnson C. Smith and Howard University, two of the strong teams in last year's playoffs, are in danger of not earning a berth in this year's tourney.

• • •

Setting a torrid pace in regular season play are Elizabeth City with an impressive 10-0 record and young A and T with a 7-0 skein. Not to be counted out of either the visitation race or the tournament title chase is high-scoring Norfolk State with a 9-2 conference record.

The Spartans, coached by Ernie Fears, won both titles last season.

• • •

Other teams still within striking distance of earning a tournament berth are Virginia Union, paced by sharpshooter Mike Davis, Winston-Salem State, Shaw, Hampton Institute, and Fayetteville State.

Meanwhile, hotel and motel owners in the city reported again that accommodations for the tournament weekend are fast becoming scarce. "We have a few rooms left," said one owner, "but we don't expect to have them long."

Tickets for the tournament are on sale at the Coliseum and in the business office of the CIAA colleges.

NAACP backs Ulster Catholics

NEW YORK — The NAACP Board of Directors has endorsed the efforts of Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland to gain civil rights, Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood, chairman of the NAACP Board, made public the following resolution passed by the Board on January 13 at its quarterly meeting here:

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization.

Miler Sam Bair entered in All-Eastern

Sam Bair, once again the hottest miler in the country, will be the man to beat when the boys toe the mark in the Sunpapers' All-Easterns at the Civic Center ter February 8.

Off his 4:02.8 clocking in the Los Angeles Invitational and his 4:03.6 effort in the Philadelphia Track Classic, it is obvious the slight Kent State ace is already in peak form.

These times, incidentally, are the best in the country so far this season.

In LA, Sam beat Bob Day and Tom Von Ruden while in Philadelphia he had to overcome a 50-yard deficit in the last quarter mile to nip West German Jurgen May at the wire.

In the Boston K of C, Bair bested Marty Liquori and Brian Kivland in 4:07.8.

Last year, Sam had run off four victories in a row before finishing third to Jim Ryun and Dave Patrick in a memorable race in the Federation Meet, the last track activity in the old Madison Square Garden.

On that occasion, Ryun ran a 3:57.5, Patrick a 4:01 flat and Bair a 4:02. His best time indoors is 68 was 4:01.9 at the Boston AA meet.

Bair has been under four minutes outdoors, finishing sixth in the race which saw Ryun set the world record of 3:51.1 at Bakersfield, Calif., two years ago.

In '67, Sam was the AAU indoor champion and, as a member of the US Pan-American Games team, ran second to Von Ruden in the 1,500-meters in Winnipeg.

Sam is a senior at Kent State.

Mandel to hear steelworkers

AFRO BUREAU

ANNAPOLIS — Gov. Marvin Mandel meets at 2 p.m. today (Friday) with representatives of the Steelworkers and Shipyard Workers for Equality on their complaints of racial discriminatory practices at the Bethlehem Steel Co. plant at Sparrows Point.

Gov. Mandel, who earlier expressed an interest in "clearing up matters there," said he arranged the meeting after a scheduled one several days before had to be cancelled. The governor said he would be receptive to the complaints.

Curley gridder example of humility, versatility

TIMOTHY DOYLE

Timothy Doyle is a good old Irish name and it belongs to a youngster attending Archbishop Curley High School, which is a good old Catholic institution named after a good, old Irish churchman.

Because of this combination of circumstances, Timmy Doyle could be as anonymous at Curley as a sheepeg in a cornfield. Except for one thing.

Young Doyle is one of those rare individuals who can't be accepted as one of the crowd, no matter how much he would wish to be. He stands out on the athletic field and he stands out in the classroom.

That is why Archbishop Curley High will be well represented in the Scholar-Athlete Award dinner at the Eastwind on February 8. The Curley entry is Timmy.

Young Doyle played three years of varsity football and four seasons of lacrosse. He was named All-MSA in both sports.

He also competed in wrestling but his membership on that team was limited to two years. The reason is that Doyle took off one season to enter the Westinghouse Science Fair for high school contestants. He won his division.

In football, he averaged 4.89 yards on 335 carries and total gains of 1,639 yards.

As pointed out earlier, Timmy is as strong academically as he is athletically.

A member of the National Honor Society, he ranks 23rd in his class of 273, with college board scores of over 1300.

He has been on the Curley honor roll for three years and has been a member of the Student Council.

Timmy plans to enter Clemson University upon completion of his high school work at Archbishop Curley. . . SAM LACY.

Kenya tightens currency export

To avoid the flight of capital from East Africa, the governments of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania last week put a new exchange control law into operation.

Now Asians with British passports leaving East Africa permanently are allowed to take with them only $6,000 per family. The old law allowed $13,000. Travel allowance was also slashed down from $600 to $500 per family.

The new regulations are a big blow to rich Asian businessmen who have accumulated a lot of money in various business ventures in East Africa during the colonial era.
