Student, faculty voice aim of Community College unit

Dr. SIDNEY KOBRE
Community College of Baltimore

Students on college campuses in California and New York are seeking to obtain greater power and voice in the administration of the institutions they attend. Headlines in newspapers indicate that these protesters are having considerable trouble in gaining their objectives.

Students picket, carry banners and posters, and they have run-ins with the police.

A different picture is being enacted quietly in Baltimore. At the Community College of Baltimore, President Harry Bard is seeking earnestly to strengthen the voices of both students and members of the faculty.

• • •

Believing in change, he sees the role of the head of a college as changing. The president of such an institution can no longer be "monolithic," that is, dictatorial.

He must listen with an honest ear to the complaints and suggestions of those involved in college life and activities.

President Bard recently proposed an idea, or tentative plan, for the organization of an Academic Community Council.

The college council would consist of representatives of the administration, the faculty and the students.

Both the Day Division and the Evening Division would have representation, with the president serving as chairman.

• • •

Meeting at regular intervals, the council would consider and discuss overall policies of deep concern to the entire institution.

Dr. Bard has always wanted to review the college's annual budget with both instructors and students, but the time-element has prevented this step.

The budget however, has an effect on all persons at CCB, and at the Council meeting each item can be explained to the representatives. They, in turn, can make recommendations to the president and the business manager.

The parking problem is one faced by all growing institutions of higher learning.

What steps can be taken constructively to remedy the situation of an expanding student body and a limited number of parking spaces?

How can registration procedures be improved?

Let the student speak!

Let the faculty on duty at the registration desk speak! Here are some of the college-wide problems the Council could review and discuss calmly.

• • •

The recent proposal to increase the state's share of money Maryland contributes to the community colleges requires the support of administrative officers, faculty and students to be successful.

It can be seen that the Council would provide an effective channel to hear the complaints of students. The Council would furnish a ventilating system. Everyone knows that his gripes will have a proper hearing, whether or not the Council takes action.

The Council also provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and suggestions.

Certainly, many instructors and students have valuable viewpoints and suggestions which can make the college run more smoothly and efficiently.

CONTRACTOR E. L. BROOKS
He built new medical facility

CONTRACTOR FOR $650,000 BUILDING

'This is the first big job that I've done for my people'

The news about Melic Associates and Abel Laboratory overlooked an important fact: the general contractor for this first black-owned clinical laboratory in the state was a black man, E. L. Brooks.

E. L. Brooks, with an 8-member staff of black men, subcontracted the electrical work, plumbing, and painting, with the E. L. Brooks Contracting Co. in charge of all the construction work.

"This is the first big job that I've done for my people. . I feel great about the building. I feel proud to give my people something beautiful that they didn't have before," Mr. Brooks told the AFRO this week.

• • •

The $650,000 facility is located at 4000 Edmondson Ave. and is a two story brick, steel and concrete air-conditioned building.

"Sam Daniels helped me get the performance bond," Mr. Brooks recalled. And Dr. Percival Smith and Dr. Emerson Walden, who have offices in the new facility, helped him secure the job.

Mr. Daniels is director of the Council for Equal Business Opportunities (CEBO).

In the contracting business since 1945, Mr. Daniels revealed his company has done most of its work "out in the counties."

He added: "We've never been slack in our work."

Mr. Brooks, 56, was raised in Philadelphia. He took a correspondent engineering course in Scranton, Pa.

"During the depression, I came to Baltimore. When the war started, I worked for the government."

After World War II, he went into business for himself.

A member of Payne Memorial AME Church, Mr. Brooks is a Mason. His company is located at 3402 Woodbrook Ave. in Baltimore.

Mr. Brooks added that another black man, "William Powell, an engineer, worked very hard along side me to make the project successful."

'Cactus Flower' at Mechanic stars husband-wife team

The national company of America's comedy leader, "Cactus Flower," will come to Baltimore on Monday, for a three-week engagement at the Morris A. Mechanic Theatre.

Craig Stevens and Alexis Smith are the stars of Abe Burrows' success which was produced by David Merrick.

Stevens and Miss Smith have made something of a career of co-starring in comedies. They began the association in "Plain and Fancy," their first musical, and the success of that venture determined them to work together whenever possible.

They have since been reunited in "Critic's Choice," "Mary, Mary" and "Any Wednesday."

As man and wife in private life, Stevens and Miss Smith joined Alfred Lunt-Lynn Fontanne and Hume-Cronyn-Jessica Tandy as co-starring marrieds.

Abe Burrows adapted the story of "Cactus Flower" from a French hit, and transferred its didoes from Paris to New York.

There was no sea-change noticeable since the Americans in "Cactus Flower" remain very French with respect to getting into trouble trying to prove that love makes the world go around.

HU awards in 12 African languages

WASHINGTON

Fellowships for the study of 12 African languages are available at the Howard University African Studies and Research Program for the 1969-70 academic year.

Financed by the National Defense Foreign Language Fellowship program, the fellowships are available in Amharic, Arabic (standard or North African colloquial), Bassa, Berber-Fulani, Hausa, Ibo, LiNgala Kekongo, Malinke, Swahili, Twana, and Yoruba.

The fellowships cover the full cost of tuition and fees for an academic year's study at Howard. In addition, a basic annual stipend of $2,300 will be provided. Recipients will also receive an allowance of $600 for each dependent.

Candidates for the fellowships must hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent, be an American citizen or permanent resident with teaching or public service career goals, be admitted to study by the appropriate graduate department at Howard University, and undertake an approved program of language and related studies.

Requests for further information and applications should be addressed to Dr. Joseph Applegate, chairman, NDFL Committee, African Studies and Research Program, Howard University, Washington, D.C. 20001.

All applications must be submitted by March 15. Awards will be announced April 1.

New theatre project set for Friday debut

A new theatre named Theatre U is opening in Baltimore. Dedicated to stimulating a better understanding between people the program is being introduced with a benefit dance and jazz concert tomorrow (Friday).

Featured in the concert will be the Elizabeth Walton Dance Co., and a group of jazz musicians from the Black Musicians Guild.

The Walton company has been formed for about two and one-half years and has danced at several colleges and festivals in the Baltimore area. The founder of the group Elizabeth Walton, wife of Whitney LeBlanc, was a former soloist with the Paul Tayler Dance Co., of N.Y.

Since Valentine's Day is only one we[illegible] possible that you [illegible] would be interested in a notice in the Harlem ghetto area by members of a fledgling credit union.

The notice brings to readers' attention that something other than candy is appropriate as a Valentine gift on February 14.

Among the items listed were jewels representing doves of love and intertwined hearts and credit cards!

The Baltimore chapter of the Optimers Inc. beat the Philadelphia chapter last Sunday in a game which was given to benefit the Provident Hospital Fund.

During the halftime ceremony Charles Tildon chairman of the Provident Hospital Building Fund presented former AFRO Baltimore Editor, George Collins with a plaque which read:

"To George Collins for services rendered, from four friends."

Mr. Collins, now associate editor of WMAR-TV's Newswatch, addressed the more than 200 persons who came to watch the game.

He said, "Thanks. To receive a gift from a friend is one of the most warming and satisfying experiences one can have. I'll always treasure this."

You young ladies who would like to get in on the ground floor of the Pyramids, Inc. Miss Pyramids had better remember that Sunday the screening committee will be at the YMCA at 1619 Druid Hill Ave to interview entrants.

The Pyramids are honing to get as many as 150 girls to enter the contest the first prize will be an all-expense-paid trip to Nassau.

The trip will last four days and three nights. Accommodations are at the Nassau Beach Hotel.

Other first place prizes include: a bouquet of flowers, a crown and cape, an engraved trophy, dinner for two at the Playboy Club, membership in the NAACP and the Baltimore Urban League.

Also a record album a month for the entire year and Miss Pyramid and her choice of three persons will be guests of the Pyramids at each Pyramid affair during her reign.

There will also be a $200 second place prize and $100 third place prize.

The winner of the contest will be decided by the number of tickets she sells. Each ticket is worth one vote and will cost 25 cents.

We'd also like to extend belated congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Baker who were married last January 25.

The marriage consummated an exciting period in Mrs. Baker's life because for the past year or so Wallace was in the service stationed in the Far East.

All of Diane's friends got a glimpse of what the Orient was like in that Wallace sent many trinkets to his finance while he was away.

People, places and things

An editor's nightmare is to have a photo incorrectly identified or a person's name and address incorrect.

But that is what happened in our Tuesday edition.

A photo of a group of Model Urban Neighborhood Development group, (MUND), incorrectly identified the pretty lady in the center of the picture. How could we!

Something good always comes out of situations like this. Because of the error, we had a chance to meet Mrs. Clarice Harden.

She is a youthful-looking mother of five (see photo).

• • •

Mrs. Harden is the wife of Jerry Harden, a postal employee.

In her own right, she is a fifth grade teacher at School No. 74.

The family lives on Homewood Ave. and attends Faith Baptist Church.

The Harden children are: Gail, 19, an Eastern graduate now enrolled at Baltimore Community College; Jerry Jr., 16, City College 11th grader; Jane, 13, ninth grader at Booker Washington No. 130; Ronald, 12, seventh grade, Woodbourne Junior High; and Clarice, 7, second grade, School No. 74.

In the same vein mentioned above, (letting the dead rest in peace), we note here simply the death of Paul Berman, attorney, and onetime GOP delegate (1927-30), from the Fourth District.

Flash: In new home is Mrs. Adah K. Jenkins, AFRO's music critic.

Come Saturday, she will be in her own apartment at the home of her daughter (Rebekah Bain), 2907 Woodland, City 15. For the past 42 years, Mrs. Jenkins has lived in Westwood Ave.

Best wishes to Mrs. Loretta Valentine (she's the friendly florist and good neighbor).

Shopping note: if the shoe store or department store where you spend your green, tells you it will not accept your check in payment, even when you have proper identification, better go to higher ground.

At a Mondawmin shoe store last week, we made an inquiry when the manager refused our check. The store's rule applied only to Mondawmin customers who are you know what color.

But the head man said it was not a company rule and customers had a perfect right to pay by check if they had proper identication. It's one thing for stores which take dollars from black people to reserve the right to accept checks or not.

It is another thing for us black people to decide where we spend our dollars too. And they are green.

More about people, things

Thinking-out-loud-department—Let him who is without sin cast the first stone is the familiar bible saying.

The thought occurs because some anonymous AFRO readers have bugged us about our Friday edition story on Philip Taylor.

We recalled him as a good neighbor, a wealthy businessman (family produce business), who shared his goodies with the less fortunate.

But, said the callers, you didn't mention that he was once arrested for numbers.

Our immediate reaction was 'so what?' After all, we knew about the numbers incident and we remembered that both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were vindicated (not guilty) and that because of circumstances surrounding their 1958 arrests, our town's police department had a real shakeup.

But it's been this newspaper's policy not to dig up dead dogs — to let people die in peace. Rather, we like to recall the good — Phil Taylor was a good, good neighbor. He helped many of his fellow citizens.

Aside to anonymous callers: — What have YOU done to help somebody else this year, last year or anytime in our life? Huh?

She's retiring from the school system to take an IBM post.

Cuff note: Many know Mrs. Richardson as the dedicated and talented teacher who knows how to relate to young people. Her departure is a loss to the school system.
