LEADS TO ILL HEALTH

School smoking ruling 'a backward step'

"The State Board of Education has taken a backward step in the health program for Maryland students."

This was the reaction of Dr. Elliott Michelson, president of the American Cancer Society, Maryland Division, to the January 29 ruling by the State Board to give local school boards the authority to let students smoke on school grounds.

The difficulty in administering a restrictive measure regarding smoking on school property is no reason for changing an excellent attitude toward an excellent health habit, asserted Dr. Michelson.

"Cigarette smoking leads to ill health and all measures, restrictive as well as educative, should be used to help prevent its increase in our youth.

"To casually disregard the tremendous strides in education at this time is a retrogressive — step — and should not be acceptable to responsible citizens of this state."

Prior to the State Board of Education's ruling, letters were sent to Board President Jerome Frampton, Jr., and Dr. James A. Sensenbaugh, State Superintendent of Schools, by Dr. Michelson for the American Cancer Society's Maryland board of directors.

In part, the letter stated, "At the present time when the anti-smokisg educational efforts are realizing a definite decrease in cigarette smoking, I believe that any alteration in this bylaw would jeopardize educational efforts to prevent or abate the greatest preventable health hazard of this nation."

Dr. Michelson said that the best approach to the smoking problem is to help prevent the starting of smoking by children in the primary and secondary schools.

"It is the duty and privilege of teachers to counsel students. However, it is unfortunate that with permissive parents, the teacher's position and responsibility has increased to a degree beyond that of a teacher's role."

Cigarette smoking is unhealthy for children as well as adults, he said, and it accounts for a large portion of respiratory ills and absenteeism in students and adult workers.

"It is the duty of the State, the teacher, and the parent to make healthy citizens of our children, to rezone of our children, to recognize the presence of contaminants in the environment that lead to disease and to take positive measures to prevent or diminish their effects on the body."

According to Dr. Michelson, the American Cancer Society has given high priority to educational programs in the primary and secondary schools.

In Maryland, he said, health and biology classes study the effects of cigarette smoking on the body starting in the 6th grade.

"A curriculum guide is now available for all schools in the state which describes the body's natural defense against air pollution and the specific effects of cigarette smoking on the various parts of the body."

Morgan gives class in U.S. diplomacy

"American Diplomacy in the Twentieth Century" is the title of a graduate course to be given at Morgan State College in the new semester beginning February 10. Registration is February 5-6 from 6-8 p.m. in Murphy Fine Arts Center.

Examining American foreign policy from the viewpoint of dipolmatic action, the course will be conducted by Dr. G. James Fleming, professor of political science, and William D. Toomey, Diplomate-in-residence at Morgan for the year 1968-69.

The seminar is open both to regular students in the Morgan Graduate school as well as to special students who may be interested in just this subject. The seminar meets every Thursday, 6-8:30 p.m.

Mr. Toomey is a member of the U.S. Foreign Service. During the past 20 years, he has served in Ethiopia, South Africa, Ghana, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Frankfurt, Columbia and Saudi Arabia.

Dr. Fleming spent 1965-66 visiting Israel, 12 countries in Africa and part of Europe.

Wives file suit for divorce

Mrs. Mary L. Griffin, 5800 block Gwynn Oak Ave., a receptionist, has been granted a divorce from her husband Robert E. Griffin on grounds of adultery.

The decree was signed Jan. 28 by Judge William J. O'Donnell in Circuit Court.

According to testimony before the court, the Griffins were married in Baltimore June 9, 1967 and separated Sept. 9, 1968 while they were residing in Catonsville with the husband's parents.

The wife testified her husband said he had enough and was leaving to get an apartment of his own. She also told the court Mr. Griffin, who is unemployed, took the furniture they got when they were first married.

On Sept. 17, 1968, after she had a key made, the wife said she went to the apartment Mr. Griffin had moved to in the 1200 block St. Paul St., and let herself in.

According to her testimony, a girl named Sandy was asleep in the double bed she and her husband had bought.

Mrs. Griffin also testified she noticed her husband's and the girl friend's clothing strewn about on chairs and recognized his pajamas. She also stated that she recognized her furniture in the other rooms.

She testified, "I walked around the whole apartment, and she never woke up."

—City pledges

ticipation in 1968 was only a little more than in 1967, the mayor said:

"Actually 15,000 may not be enough. Providing jobs for the unemployed is a major task, and I'm confident that industry now realizes they have to play a larger role and are willing to do so."

The current program, the mayor said, is the largest job-placement in the city's history.

Mayor D'Alesandro's program has four major aims:

1. 8,000 Neighborhood Youth Corps job slots from the United States Labor Department for youths between the ages of 15 and 17.

2. 3,500 job opportunities through the Youth Opportunities Center for youths from 16-21.

3. 2,000 positions under the National Alliance of Businessmen's in-school program.

4. 1,500 job opportunities at Federal installations located in the Baltimore metropolitan area.

The mayor voiced confidence that if in any of the four areas the original quota could not be reached, additional opportunities will be offered by one of the other groups.

Dan Zacagnini, the mayor's staff assistant for employment, will work with the Federal-agencies in arranging job slots; Don Aiken of the State Employment Service will coordinate that agency's activities with the City.

Don Lee and his staff at the NAB office will liaison with the City Administration in locating jobs in industry.

Frank Ellis, director of the CAA, will work with all agencies in locating jobs for the young people in the ghetto areas.

The mayor is also stepping up efforts to bring some Federal job programs into Baltimore such as those offered through the Social Security Administration, Federal Office Building, Fort Meade, Fort Holabird and others.

In addition, five schools, which are yet to be named, will be located in areas around the city — Cherry Hill, East and West Baltimore — where young people can register for employment.

The program is set to begin at the start of the first week after the closing of school for summer vacation.

Like mom and dad, Darrell, 12, is a boy scout.

He was in the cub scouts since he was old enough to join and has been a boy scout for a year.

He is a member of Troop No. 521 which is under the leadership of his father.

His mother said, "Darrell loves scouting, and has worked hard to earn his merit badges."

The young scout has acquired a total of eight badges and is a Star Scout.

The Goughs are all members at Ames, where the Rev. Irvin Moyer is pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Gough stated, "Any parent who has a child or more in scouting should become active, for the pleasures received are gratifying.

According to the Boy Scouts of America, "Scouting is a community-oriented and community-based organization."

Harry H. Prentice, plant manager of the General Motors Corporation assembly division in Baltimore was elected president of the Baltimore Area Council at the annual meeting held at the Eastwind on Jan. 27.

Over 1,000 Scouters and their ladies were on hand to participate in the program, as they voted for the new president.

Mr. Prentice stated, "We look forward to a year-end registered membership of over 40,000 boys in nearly 1,500 units."

L. Robert Kilmer, scout executive announced the employment of William E. Roberts Jr., a new executive trainee on the professional staff of the Baltimore Area Council.

Mr. Roberts is a graduate of Lyndon State College in Vermont and will assist scouting as an assistant district executive in Parkway district after successful completion of the National Executive Institute.

The Baltimore Area Council will give the yearly report to Governor Marvin Mandel in his chambers on Feb. 11.

The local governments will receive reports during Scout Week in the Baltimore county executive's office on Feb. 11.

Joseph Alton, county executive for Ana Arundel County will receive the report in Annapolis.

professional community and the poor equally or it would withdraw its support and funds.

The decision to expand the board membership is the first step in complying with the national guidelines.

Reverend James L. Moore, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church said a list of the 14 new members might be published "as early as this weekend."

"The new membership," he said, "will assure that the board will represent a good cross-section of the community inside the OIC target area."

The Rev. Mr. Moore denied charges that OIC's board membership was purposefully weighted toward Baptist ministers.

He noted that if a preponderance of Baptist minister actually did exist at any time, it may be due to the fact that there are a large number of Baptist churches in the city.

"I've heard the board referred to as 'The Nine Baptist Ministers,' but it just isn't so," he added.

Addressing himself to much of the controversy which has surrounded OIC recently, the Rev. Mr. Moore said, "The Board of Directors has been the scapegoat for all the bad publicity, but the fact is, they are the most dedicated of all to the success of the OIC.

"Had it not been for them, there would not be an OIC."

"As an example, look how hard it's been to get people to serve on the board. — It's a non-paying job, and the members have expenses, which are considerable.

"Most of the noise that's been made recently has come from those who have their hands — and heads — in the trough," the minister concluded.

the teachers and let them decide."

About one-third of Baltimore's teachers are union members and union groups in the schools have said they would vote down the contract.

The main objections outlined by the Union were class size, the pace of the Model Schools program, and the pay scale.

The contract would reduce the maximum class size from 36 to 35 and includes a salary increase between $400 and $500 with more money coming to veteran teachers.

If the teachers turn down the contract, Mr. Crosby said he will be on a union negotiation team that will attempt new talks with the school board.

dence is greatest.

During this period, the syndrome of searching for somewhere to recommend the temporary euphoria produced by them is, hopefully, broken.

There are recreation facilities available to all patients. Volunteer patients man these facilities. Many of the facilities are given by anonymous donors.

Occassionally a patient will violate the rules of the program in some way. Violators must see the program coordinator, and he recommends the appropriate action for the violator.

The program coordinator can be contacted at any time he is needed by the patient at the Provident Hospita number $23-4005, ext. 38.

Mrs. Nellie Graves has loved 3 generations of children

Mrs. Nellie Graves, who has cared for three generations of children, is an active churchwoman and "undiscovered" writer living at 3615 Springdale Ave.

A member of Calvary Baptist Church on Garrison Blvd., Mrs. Graves has written plays that she says "my church was kind enough to let me give for them."

One of the plays was a religious one, "The Saviour Passing By." The moral was that "it doesn't matter who you are or what you have if you never welcome Him in," according to Mrs. Graves' daughter, Mrs. Beverly Banks.

Mrs. Banks said the second play was a comedy, "The Different Brides," depicting a happy bride, a sad bride and the perfect bride.

Mrs. Graves has written other plays and poetry that she says "I have never shown to anyone."

She is active in her church where she serves on the usher board, the missionary society, is a member of the Golden Age Club and serves in the church's Nurses Unit.

And she devotes much of her life to her great grandaughter, Tina, 8, who lives with her. Both of them live with Mrs. Graves' daughter, Mrs. Banks.

Born in Greensboro, N.C., she came to Baltimore 41 years ago. Before she retired, she was a saleswoman for the Supreme Life Insurance Company.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Graves has a son, Everett.

She has three grandchildren, Mrs. June Davis, Tina's mother; Calvin Graves, 21, who is serving in Vietnam; and Lee Graves, 26.

There are four great grandchildren including Tina.

Both her daughter, Mrs. Banks, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Davis, work for Social Security.

get the money from his parents, but that made me wonder. He didn't have a job and wasn't in school—it just made me wonder.

"It turned out he didn't have the money to pay for any such operation, just as I had suspected."

And that was that, or was it?

The following Monday morning, Dr. Desbordes and Mrs. Koonce came to the office only to find it was rather chilly inside.

The window in the back door had been broken, the door was unlocked from the inside, and the place was a mess.

Drawers had been opened and ransacked, bottles of chemicals were scattered all over the shelves and the floor, and the little cotton balls were thrown all over the office.

"Funny," Dr. Desbordes thought, "it didn't look like that when I left."

But when the young dentist and his assistant started cleaning up and taking account of what was missing something brought his attention suddenly back to the previous week.

The box of gold caps was gone— not a one left.

The next weekend, Dr. Desbordes' office was given the same once-over, only worse. Mustard and liquid detergent were spilled all over the floor, and a can of deodorant was stolen.

"Well," said the perturbed dentist to himself, "he ought to keep himself pretty clean with my deodorant."

Naturally, the police got a full report of both incidents, and promised Dr. Desbordes that they would keep an eye out for the young boy, who lived nearby.

A quick check of the boy's record revealed that he already had an arrest for possession of a stolen auto.

The police also promised him that they would increase the police protection along that block and the nearby streets, Dr. Desbordes told the AFRO.

"But I can't say I've noted any increase in protection," he added. "If anything, things have gotten worse around here—an officer told me there were six assault and robbery cases recently in this block alone.

"And just Saturday, the cleaner on the corner was robbed—and that's not the first time that's happened since I came here in September, either."

But don't get the wrong idea—looking into people's mouths all day hasn't turned this young New Orleanian sour on the world. Noting that the thief had taken a number of packages of chocolate and other candy during his third visit, he told us:

"If he gets a toothache from all that stuff, he's just going to have to find himself another dentist."

THIRD GENERATION—An AFRO photographer recently caught Mrs. Nellie Graves and her great-granddaughter shopping together at a downtown department store. Mrs. Graves, a widow, has devoted her life to her children, who are now grown, her grandchildren, and now to her great-grandchildren.
