

1 department head sets up administratively certain administra-
2 tive units within the department. There is nothing that 3 would prevent the Governor or the department head from 4 changing those administrative units, consolidating them or 5 reorganizing them without submitting any executive order to 6 the General Assembly because these administrative units were 7 set up purely administratively to suit the convenience of 8 the head of the department and they were not set up by the 9 General Assembly but if you had an organization of a 10 principal department, if the General Assembly described how 11 the principal department was to be set up and was to have a 12 division of this and a division of that and a division of 13 something else, when a change in that is thought desirable
14 by the Governor, why, he is, in effect, changing the law, 15 and that would require an executive order submitted to the 16 General Assembly because that change would have the force of 17 law.

18 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Case, paraphrasing part
19 of that, I think what Delegate Morgan has said a change
20 which is either authorized by law or a change which is not 21 in conflict with law would be made by the government without
