PANTY HOSE BANK CASE

'Songbird' flies away; pals sent to prison

Today (Good Friday) is a good day for Charles Clifford Coefield, 26, 2600 block Aisquith St., the "songbird" who exposed bank robbers who accompanied him in on a series of holdups last summer.

The 11-member gang wore pantly hose masks.

As a reward for telling all he knows and helping the courts convict his pals, Coefield has escaped serving 150 years in prison for the robberies he confessed.

Instead, the state on Tuesday evening suspended 50 years prison sentences and placed him on probation for 50 years.

And, Judge Charles D. Harris who imposed the sentences wished him luck as he permitted the man, his wife and infant baby to leave the state.

Cofield has been supported in luxury by the state to the tune of nearly $10,000 for housing, food and spending money since last July 15.

Today, he leaves Maryland forever by plane and goes to another state to reside in a house and take a job, all secured by the state.

He leaves behind members of the Pants Hose Gang, some of whom have received as much as 60 years in the Penitentiary.

The suspended sentences were recommended by Fred K. Grant, the assistant state's attorney who prosecuted the bank robbery cases.

He also recommended that Cofield be given passage away from Maryland, money to establish his home somewhere else and a job in the new far-away location.

Mr. Grant told the AFRO, "He has helped us a lot. He had storehouse of criminal knowledge about everything. He has told us more than the facts about the bank robberies.

"He deserves to live. He couldn't live here. Somebody would kill him sure.

"We can't say where he is going but it's away from Maryland."

Mr. Grant also stated in court he hoped that other persons would note what has been done for Cofield and turn state witnesses in narcotics and other cases of serious crime.

He said, "We need people like Cofield to help us bring the offenders to justice and help halt crime here."

Benjamin Brown, Cofield's attorney asked the court for suspended sentences since the state had no other witnesses who could have convicted the bank robbers.

Judge Harris concluded the case by stating, "If you stay here you will not live long. Your life will be in constant danger. You are given authority to leave the state. I wish you luck."

For his courtroom appearance Cofield wore a smart sports jacket of yellow and gray plaid, brown trousers and matching socks and shoes, obviously new.

His bush-style hair was neatly trimmed and groomed and he smiled throughout the brief late-evening hearing.

Shaking hands with him were States Attorney Charles Mylan and his assistant Mr. Grant.

Among those sentenced at the result of Cofield's testimony were Williams Oliver Gardner, 60 years; Jordan Dennis Carter, 40 years; Thomas (Tall Tommy) Lucas, 40 years; Leroy Koonce, 10 years; Alfred Jerome (Chicago Al) Johnson, 8 years.

The total cash missing from the bank robberies was nearly $100,000 of which only $6,000 was recovered.

No cutback in CAA-TJD

Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro Jr. denied reports that Federal cutbacks as high as 20 percent in Baltimore's Community Action Agency would be considered because the anti-poverty program is "too rigidly" controlled.

"I don't think there is any threat of cutbacks," the mayor told newsmen Wednesday after meeting the mayor told newsmen Wednesday after reports circulated that a Federal anti-poverty field official said that CAA funds were threatened.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew denied the reports to reassure him that there will be no cutbacks, Mr. D'Alesandro said.

"The Vice President was disturbed by the article and said that there was nothing to fear. He is a strong advocate of government participation in these programs," the mayor said.

The mayor, who has been at odds with Mr. Agnew when he was governor, said that the reports "backfired because he (Agnew) said he will take it upon himself to look into the matter."

Wives of Majors in Vietnam take kids on tour of AFRO

How do military wives spend the long days while their husbands are in Vietnam?

One answer was given the AFRO this week when three of them visited the AFRO with their small children this week.

The lively children who ranged in age from 4 to 12, were full of questions about how the newspaper is put together. "How do you get the news?" "What is that paper for?" were typical queries.

The military wives who toured the AFRO plant with their youngsters are: Mrs. Doris Ligon, Mrs. LaVern Mills and Mrs. Camilla Hicks. All live at the Fort Holabird Army base.

They represent a group of about 20 ladies organized into the Fort Holabird Overseas Wives Group formed to occupy and entertain the wives while husbands are overseas.

Mrs. Ligon, from Baltimore, is the wife of Major Claude M. Ligon, an airborne ranger stationed with the 14th Engineers Corps at Phu Bai, Vietnam.

He has received an army commendation medal for service at Fort Holabird.

Their son, Claude M. Jr., 12, and daughter, Carole, 6, both attend the Dundalk Elementary School.

Mrs. Mills, from Richmond, Va., is the wife of Major Robert M. Mills stationed at the MACV Headquarters in Saigon.

He, also, has received a commendation medal for his services in the army ROTC at Florida A and M College.

Their son, Dwayne, 7, attends the Dundalk Elementary School. Daughter, Cheryl, 4, goes to the Fort Holabird Pre-School on the base.

• • •

Mrs. Hicks, from War, W.Va., is the wife of Major Howard G. Hicks stationed at Bien Hoa in the delta area of Vietnam serving as an advisor. He has also received an army commendation medal for service at Fort Holabird as an instructor.

Their son Tony, 6, attends the Fort Holabird Pre-School.

Both Major Mills and Major Hicks work with Army Intelligence which has its center at Fort Holabird.

When they are overseas, the wives take residence on the base. Mrs. Ligon, being from Baltimore, lives there as a matter of course.

While the children are on Easter vacation, the three mothers have planned activities for them.

In addition to the AFRO tour, a bowling party, an Easter egg hunt, a theatre party, and lunch and dinner around town are on the agenda.

All this is under the auspices of the Fort Holabird Overseas group. Mrs. Ligon is chairman of the Children's Activities Committee.

Of the organization, Mrs. Ligon said, "It doesn't take the place of our husbands, but it keeps from going around alone."

the Board voted to have the city Health Department, the Mayor's Task Force on Nutrition and school officials refine a new policy on free school lunches.

The new visitation policy is as follows:

1. It is the policy of the Board to encourage parents of children enrolled in the public schools of Baltimore City to utilize frequent visits to the schools which their children attend for the purpose of observing them in operation.

2. Any parent wishing to visit a school which his child attends may do so any time during school hours. Any parent who wishes to visit and observe classrooms in session may do so without advance notice or scheduling. Parents who visit classes in session may not interfere with the teacher's conduct of the class and may not participate in the class proceedings unless requested to do so by the teacher.

3. While some principals, for reason of security, may consider it desirable to be informed of the presence of visitors in the school building, a principal may maintain a sign-in book wherein visiting parents note their presence. Such a sign-in book, if maintained must be maintained in a manner such as not to discourage parents from making frequent and unannounced visits to the schools.

4. This policy in no way limits or restricts the authority and responsibility of principals to exclude from school buildings and grounds persons entering thereon for the purpose of disrupting the educational process, vandalism, larceny, or other illegal conduct.

5. In addition to frequent visits, for purposes of observing the schools in operation, parents shall be encouraged to be present at conferences with members of the faculty regarding their children. Parents are asked to plan their conferences at times which do not conflict with the instructional program.

6. The Superintendent of Public Instruction is directed to promulgate this statement throughout the school system, to advertise this policy to the parents of the children attending the schools and to the public at large, and to plan and initiate an aggressive program directed at increasing the frequency with which parents make observational visits to schools and classrooms and have conferences with members of the faculty. The Superintendent is directed to report periodically to the Board his progress in implementing this policy.

During the meeting, the board took action on tenure recommendations for teachers and counselors who have met requirements for their positions and have served the required probationary period.

Elected to tenure among elementary school teachers were Mrs. Winifred P. Berry, Mrs. Annette Cherry, Mrs. Nancy A. Cutros, Mrs. Roslyn E. Drisdale, John J. Douglass, Melvin Gant, Mrs. Geraldine Glossi, John H. Paul, and Mrs. Ethelind P. Sewell.

Among elementary school teachers in special curriculum were Mrs. Frances Bassett, and William M. Barnes.

In secondary schools tenure recommendations included counselors Mrs. Adele W. Fine and Edward A. Forrest, Mrs. Claire Wernig, a teacher, and Mrs. Chrysoula Katsiafaces.

was arrested after he told police that he was the last person to enter the house.

Mr. Ashford said that he arrived home about 11 p.m. Wednesday morning and went to sleep on the living room couch.

Mr. Ashford told police that the only thing he remembers other than entering the house around 11 a.m. Wednesday morning was being awakened by the police around 5 p.m. that evening.

There appears to be a mystery as to what happened between the time five members of the family went to bed Tuesday night and when Mr. Ashford arrived home Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Mary Ashford and her four children were all treated for gas poisoning at Lothern Hospital and released Thursday.

Mr. Ashford did not require treatment.
