Mesdames Sarah Thompson, Gwendolyn Patillo and Christine Ward, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Ward chose variations of the current red, white and blue trend and Mrs. Patillo selected a cape, dress and bubble haat ensemble in sea mist brocade.

An original song "The Flair Story," was then sung by its composer, Miss Carolyn Spears, who accompanied herself on the guitar. Interpreting the song in dance were Miss Donna Clark and Miss Toni Johnson who arranged original choreography. The remainder of the young students formed a chorus.

The fifteen students, who ranged in age from seven to plus forty wore an elegant variety of white dresses to receive their certificates. Each carried a single white carnation garnished with purple streamers, white and purple symbolizing the colors of Flair Studio.

Students who were presented included Misses and Mesdames Francine Allen, Yvonne Virginia Greene, Velda Denise Buie, Sirirley Hicks, Naomi Carter, Cheryl Lynne Johnson, Corelia Brenda Clark, Toni Helene Johnson, Tucked in Mercy Hospital, as of Monday, has been Olia Robertson. Currently he is more worried about missing the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity's area convention than the medical men finding out where the pain comes from. He's the husband of Janice Robertson.

Charming new addition to the town's young marrieds is the new Mrs. John Rich, 3rd. She was Mrs. Lois T. Williams, and formerly married to Billy Williams (The Charioteers). AKA, community schools sponsoring city seminar

Two tragic problems of the city will be artalyzed at a four-part public seminar, beginning at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Garrison Community School on Garrison Boulevard and Barrington Road.

The undertaking is through the combined efforts of the Epsilon Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority and the two community schools, Garrison and Lombard.

"I hope everybody comes, and they bring friends," said a spokesman for the sorority. The four-part series — free to anyone interested in coming — will boast the expert help of Dr. Addison Pope and the Rev. Harry E. Shelley, among other physicians and civic eaders.

Dr. Pope represents the State Department of Mental Hygiene and the Rev. Shelley heads the Alcoholism Programs of the Baltimore City Health Department.

All four of the afternoon panel discussions will feature films, which help to dramatize the growing problems of addiction in the city.

The next three installments are planned for Sunday afternoons during April and May as follows:

April 27: "Drug Addiction," 3 to 5 p. m. at Lombard Community School, Lombard and Caroline Streets.

May 4: "Alcoholism," 3 to 5 p.m. at Lombard Community School, Lombard and Caroline Streets.

May 25: "Drug Addiction," 3 to 5 p.m. at the Garrison Community School.

College - Bound High School Students Now Study First In Strong Liberal Arts Programs At Community College

Transfer Credits Accepted at 100 College Universities

By Dr. Sidney Kobre
News Bureau
Community College of Baltimore

Community College of Baltimore is the place to go!

That's where the educational action is this year.

This is what several thousand high school seniors are saying now.

They are enrolling at CCB where they can get quality education, at reasonable fees, without leaving the city. Many expect to spend two years at the local Liberty Heights campus and then transfer to a four-year college or university for their third and fourth years. CCB is fully-accredited, with its credits being accepted in any four-year college.

Other high school seniors who are making application now for the Fall semester intend to prepare for worthwhile, well-paying careers in business, industry or one of the professions.

"Why, you know the bit," some students told me the other day. "We can live at home and save expenses of dormitory living. We save our parents' money in the bargain.'

Students at the college declare that they enjoy the challenges of the classes at CCB. Also, they like the personal interest instructors take in them. Students can get adjusted to the college life without making the "big plunge."

PRESIDENT HARRY BARD

... well-liked by students

In a special interview for this publication last week, President Harry Bard sat in his office and talked informally about CCB. Well-liked by students, he has regular conferences with them and talks man-to-man with freshmen and sophomores.

He pointed out that the Community College has built up a high-quality faculty, dedicated to teach. The professors are concerned with the student, helping him to understand college and master the knowledge and skills.

Dr. Bard stressed the varied and flexible programs at the Liberty Heights campus. CCB offers 170 courses and 40 different curriculums. Nearly every high school senior or adult can find what he wants in the Day or Evening Divisions and in the two Summer Sessions," he pointed out.

Some students desire to pursue the two-year programs, leading to the Associate in Arts (AA) degree. Others prefer the one-year certificate programs. CCB is flexible and students find it easy to shift from one curriculum to another as their interests change.

Next we interviewed Dean Leona S. Morris, who is head of the Student Personnel Services, in her bright, cheery office. With the college since its establishment in 1947, she pointed out that high school students are not just admitted and forgotten. "We have on our staff professional guidance counsellors who discuss with each student his educational and vocational aims, and then work out programs to suit the student's needs."

Does the student desire to transfer to another college later? Counsellors tell the student the requirements of particular colleges and what courses should be studied at CCB to prepare for the transfer and get the proper transfer credits. Are they interested in career placement immediately after securing the A.A. degree? The Placement Counsellor is ready to assist in employment opportunities.

The next official we talked to was Mr. Joseph Stein, Director of Admissions. An easy-to-talk-to-man, with a pleasant personality Mr. Stein said that CCB admissions policy was on the liberal side. The college sought to give everyone with potential the opportunity to enroll and get the benefit of CCB's varied programs. The student applying for admissioneds needs a high school diploma, or the equivalent. He must get successful scores on standard tests given at the high school usually. For those who are weak in certain subjects, remedial courses are available in English, math, reading and similar subjects. They may be taken in the summer or winter sessions. A new development program has recently been established to aid students, strengthen their backgrounds and reduce the number of dropouts.

Mr. Stein urged all interested students to apply now in person at the college or send in the Application-and-Information Coupon found in the supplement.

Liberal Arts, Science Courses Prepare Students for College

Community College of Baltimore provides a strong Liberal Arts program for students who expect to continue their education for the bachelor's degree from a four-year college or university later.

Many students enroll at CCB in the Arts and Science program. They obtain their Associate in Arts degree at the end of two years. As the comparison table on this page shows in a box, the students and their families save considerably by attending CCB.

The basic courses at the Community College parallel those taken at most colleges and universities in the freshman and sophomore years. That is why at the end of two years, the student can transfer his credits to any institution of higher learning, which accepts transfer students. The student then can take his third and fourth years at these institutions, acquiring his Bachelor of Arts, or his Bachelor of Science degree. Increasingly, the senior colleges are recruiting the A.A. degree graduates to enter the third year of their institutions.

Provides Stepping Stone For Many Professional Studies

The Arts and Sciences curriculum provides the stepping stone to the professional studies in medicine, dentistry, and law. The emphasis in these premedical and pre-dental studies is in the science in which CCB has excellent faculty and new, top-notch laboratory facilities. Students interested in pre-law concentrate on political science, history, sociology and psychology for strong background.

Pre-Pharmacy is a special curriculum from which the graduate goes directly to the University of Maryland School of Pharmacy or other pharmacy schools. Here, too, the emphasis is on science and mathematics.

Opportunities for the first two years of study in business administration and in engineering are provided at CCB. Transfer with the A.A. degree is made with ease to the neighboring senior colleges whether they be Johns Hopkins University or University of Maryland or Morgan College or out-of-state institutions.

Medical Technology has been a long-established curriculum at CCB. With the heavy science concentration studied in the well equipped laboratories in small classes, the student completes a third year of study usually at Mt. St. Agnes College (for men as well as women) and then has the final year in a hospital for experience before receiving the bachelor's degree.
