Commission holds power over Assembly pensions

A special commission appointed by Gov. Marvin Mandel to study compensation for members of Maryland's General Assembly has full jurisdiction over setting pensions along with salaries and expenses.

This was the opinion this week of Francis B. Burch, attorney general, but it stands only in an advisory capacity.

Some disgruntled lawmakers, hoping to be able to vote themselves a juicy pension plan, could take the issue to the courts for judicial clarification.

Should this occur and the Burch opinion be overruled, the lawmakers could then get a pension plan of their choice.

Mr. Burch had been asked for the opinion by William Gragg, chairman of the General Assembly Compensation Commission.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Moss, AFRO vice president, is a member of this commission, and its lone black member.

The commission was created during the November election, when voters ratified a constitutional amendment asking its establishment.

Mr. Burch is expected to issue a written opinion on the pension issue within a week.

Commission recommendations are to be submitted to the General Assembly by Jan. 28.

Gov. Mandel met with commission members Monday on the pension issue, and said afterwards he did not make any specific recommendations nor were salaries discussed.

The Assembly convenes Wednesday, and the commission recommendations are expected to come within the Jan. 28 deadline.

3.9 billion housing subsidy

A congressional study has charged that the government may end up paying $3.9 billion to subsidize low-income housing so shoddy that it creates "instant slums" in some cities.

Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., of the House Banking Committee said the staff study showed the federal mortgage interest subsidy program is providing bonanzas" to "fast buck" real estate speculators rather than decent homes for the poor.

The 180-page report, based on investigations in 10 cities, is highly critical of the Federal Housing Administration for its administration of the so-called FHA 235 home ownership program authorized by Congress in 1968.

"FHA has allowed real estate speculation at the worst type to go on in the 235 program and has virtually turned its back to these practices," the report said.

George Romney, in testimony presented to the committee during a closed session, conceded there had been "abuses" of the program. But he said committee members should not be carried away by "sweeping generalizations" made by the staff investigators.

Romney said he had visited seven homes, the "worst" examples cited by the report in Washington, and had "found out that what you have been told isn't necessarily so."

Under the 1968 law, the FHA subsidizes the interest on mortgages for low-income families, reducing the cost to as little as 1 per cent for some home buyers.

But the committee staff report said its investigation showed that homes sold under the program — one cited in a "good condition" by FHA appraisers — were often so shoddy that they would not last the life of the mortgages.

Many disgruntled buyers, it said, would probably "walk away" from the property and have the FHA saddled with "thousands of substandard homes bearing inflated mortgages."

The report said the FHA had reserved funds to subsidize mortgages on nearly 171,000 homes and had estimated the subsidies to total $1.5 billion. But the committee staff, the report said, had estimated the interest cost might reach $3.9 billion.

youths entered the store just before closing time and ordered Mr. Sachs and the two clerks to stand against the wall.

Police report further that Patrolman Schriber then stepped out and identified himself, and ordered the youths to halt.

They said young Chandler started walking toward the store personnel and continued when the policeman fired a warning shot in the ceiling.

Police said the officer fired a second shot when the youth's companion refused to drop a pistol he was carrying. It was this shot that struck young Chandler.

equipment.

Both can be expected to generate controversy on the Council floor.

There are other appropriation bills for the Department of Housing and Community Development, to facilitate advancing several of this agency's projects.

A big batch of other measures are still to be acted upon, some of major proportions and many not so important.

This is the last year for this present City Council, and measures not acted on by this body will die.

Much of the work facing this Council though will be shadowed by the new General Assembly convening later this month. — MAX

Gala tribute

with countless other people, shall not forget Dr. King. Let all of us—students, community—meet to pay tribute to him on this day."

The service, Mr. Hamm asserted, will be a profound expression from the hearts of the students at the Community College. "We feel that, as a community college, we have both a duty and the obligation to involve the community in this type of function," he said, extending an invitation to community leaders to attend the event.

The first memorial services were held at CCB after Dr. King was assassinated, and the second was conducted last year.

The services this year will feature outstanding speakers as well as a well-known local gospel choir. Dr. Logan Kearse, pastor of the Cornerstone Baptist Church, will begin the event. He will be king at CCB followed by Prof. Barbara Bourne, member of the CCB Economics faculty, who will discuss contributions made by Dr. King to the American nation.

Then a student, Leslie Howard, a sophomore and representative of the Black Cultural Congress, will discuss other aspects of Dr. King's life and philosophy.

* * *

It is of particular interest to note that Miss Diana Wharton, a CCB student, will sing her own musical composition, "Understanding," which is quite appropriate for the occasion.

The Campus Theatre will ring out with the 40-voices of the CCB gospel Choir, under the direction of Mr. Hamm. Alvin Stansbury will serve as the pianist for the choir.

In addition to Mr. Hamm, Miss Valerie Reddick, secretary of the Student Government Association, and Mr. Paul Barksdale, vice president of SGA, will work on the King program.

They were assisted by Mr. S. Joseph Salvaggio, and Mr. John A. Faulkner, of the Student Activities Department.
