Cowboy herd riders admit fear of Unitas

MIAMI — At least two of the cowboys from Texas openly admit that riding herd on the colts from Maryland is going to be a tough and dangerous job come Sunday in the Orange Bowl.

Herb Adderley and Mel Renfro, the key men in the defensive secondary of the Dallas Cowboys, are nonetheless confident that they will whip the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl No. 5, but their wariness of the opposition is clear and outspoken, mainly because of the presence of Johnny Unitas at quarterback for the AFC champions.

* * *

Adderley is five days away from taking part in his third Super Bowl and when he talks about Unitas he talks about him much differently than he does about any of pro football's other 1,200 players.

"Every time I hear his name, it frightens me," he says.

"Especially when I have to play against him, because this man has to be one of the greatest quarterbacks ever to play the game. And for 10 years I have watched him. I've played against him, I've admired him, and watching films of him it doesn't look to me as if he has slowed up any at all.

"I'm just afraid of the man. And I'm sure that John knows me as well as I know him. It's gonna be a terrific battle. He tries to manipulate a defense.

"By that I mean he tries to get it to where he can burn it. That's one of his stronger points, reading defenses. And that's why he has so many pass completions.

"Sometimes he can feel a defense, what they're going into before they do it. He's the master.

"Don't listen to that stuff about his slowing down any. As far as I'm concerned, his arm is as great as ever."

Tuesday, before practicing, Renfro, the Cowboys' right cornerback compared Unitas and John Brodie, the San Francisco quarterback the Cowboys contained to win the National Conference title.

"Unitas and Brodie are a lot alike—they both have experience and they're excellent at reading defenses."

But he went on about Unitas: "He can throw past linebackers and defenders to hit his receivers.

* * *

"You can have a guy perfectly covered and Unitas can zip the ball right in there. He'll throw right by you when you don't expect it."

Renfro was asked if he thought the 37-year-old Unitas was fading a bit and he said, "Man, from the films he hasn't lost a thing."

49ers' Bruce Taylor 7th straight rookie pick

When the San Francisco 49ers' Bruce Taylor was named "rookie of the year" in the National Football Conference Wednesday, it marked the seventh year in a row that the honor had gone to a colored player.

The string was begun in 1964 by another Taylor. The Washington Redskins' Charley Taylor was tapped as the top freshman after that season.

Since then the honor has gone to Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears, in 1965; Johnny Roland of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1966; Mel Farr of the Detroit Lions in 1967; Earl McCullouch, also of the Lions, in 1968; Calvin Hill of the Dallas Cowboys in 1969, and now Taylor.

* * *

Bruce beat out Dallas running back Duane Thomas for the honor in the balloting of 36 writers from the 13 league cities. Taylor received 14 votes and Thomas had nine. No other player was in serious contention.

Taylor, who only weighs 180 pounds, helped the Forty Niners win their first division crown in their history and a startling upset over Minnesota in the playoffs. San Francisco advanced to the NFL finals before losing to Dallas.

* * *

Taylor led the NFC in punt returns in his first season, returning 43 kicks for 516 yards for an average of 12 yards a return. His longest return was 76 yards.

He usually scored the fair catch except when he was surrounded. His attitude was "they could find anybody to fair catch. What they want is somebody to run the ball back."

* * *

Taylor was a first round draft choice by the Forty-Niners from Boston University after a brilliant career as a defensive back. He stepped right into a starting job with San Francisco, teaming with all-pro Jimmy Johnson, to give San Francisco an excellent pair of cornerbacks.

Taylor became the first player from San Francisco to win the UPI award since it was inaugurated in 1955.

Cheek to speak at NAACP fete

Dr. King V. Cheek, president-elect of Morgan State College, will speak Sunday as the Baltimore NAACP Branch installs its officers for 1971.

The ceremonies will be held at City Temple Baptist Church, Eutaw and Dolphin Sts., at 5 p.m. The organization's first executive board meeting will be held Wednesday at the Pennsylvania Avenue branch of Pratt Library.

The January membership meeting set for the 28th has been cancelled.

New rule gives Morgan, others shot in the arm

Morgan State College, along with a majority of predominately-colored schools, received a genuine shot in the National Collegiate Athletic Association lifted the ban on freshman athletes for post-season competition.

The NCAA in convention at Houston, voted approval of a motion to permit freshmen to play in football bowl and basketball tournament competition among the smaller schools.

These "smaller schools" are institutions that are bracketed in the NCAA's College Division. And these are the schools which participate in such NCAA events as the Boardwalk Bowl, Tangerine Bowl, Grantland Rice Bowl, etc.

* * *

Until now, Morgan and other colleges in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association have been at a disadvantage when they accepted post-season invitations.

Having played freshman athletes during the regular season, they were compelled to use makeshift lineups in bowl play.

The change becomes effective immediately.

In another significant step — this one on racial lines — the conference elevated two black delegates to responsible posts.

Samuel E. (Sam) Barnes of Howard University, and Howard C. Gentry of Tennessee State University, are the men.

Barnes became the first colored member in NCAA history to be elected to a national office. The Bison professor of physical education was named secretary-treasurer.

Gentry was placed on the governing council, along with Ernest C. Casale of Temple, John A. Fuzak of Michigan State, and George F. Ilg of Fresno State.

Colts AFRO pick in Super Bowl

By SAM LACY

By this time next week, Baltimore will be world champion in two big league sports.

The Colts will whip the Dallas Cowboys Sunday in the Super Bowl, to lift local football fans onto the title podium along with the baseball bugs who are still savoring the Orioles' victory in the American League and World Series.

Baltimore will win in a rout at Miami.

The writer fully comprehends the risk he takes in making such a prediction, but all men of my nature live by the credo that you live only once so you might as well live dangerously.

The Cowboys have a good team. That much was proved in their survival of the tough race that prevailed in the National Conference, and it became further obvious when they outplayed a rugged and improving San Francisco 49er aggregation in the clash for the conference crown.

But the Colts are a better club — how much better is hard to say. In fact, it is difficult to figure how much better are the Colts than they appear to be.

In no fewer than half of their games during the regular season, the Colts were disturbingly unimpressive. Yet, they always managed to get the job done.

This is not to brush aside the humiliating loss to Kansas City here in August. That was a game in which Baltimore never threatened.

The team was flat, the fans were disgruntled, and the town itself was in no mood for football in the heat of a torrid pennant race in baseball. It also was the peak point of the hassle over use of the stadium and only a short while after settlement of the player boycott.

While the AFRO is happy that it did not again become necessary to play the Chiefs, the feeling here is that the Colts, once they go to the polls in games got going, would have handled the then world champions, too, one way or another.

The Cowboys are entering the contest with a formidable ground game, due largely to the presence of such runners as rookie Duane Thomas, Walt Garrison and last year's top freshman, Calvin Hill.

But the Baltimore defense has met some talented runners before and controlled them. Notable among these are the Oakland, Cincinnati and Boston rushers, all of whom had to abandon their strength and against Baltimore.

Bob Hayes represents a major threat to the Colt secondary, but there is doubt that any wide receivers exist who are superior to the Raiders' Warren Wells and Fred Biletnikoff, or the Jets' George Sauer and Don Maynard. The Baltimore zone reduced their power to the extent that their damage was minimal.

'Rapping' hosts Bob Cole Sunday

Russ Johnson will interview Bob Cole, WFBR-Radio Urban Affairs director, on his 9 a.m. Sunday morning show, "Rapping."

They will discuss a variety of subjects including the black experience and urban affairs on the 30-minute program.

Jaycees to cite 4 in Baltimore

Jaycee Week, the annual anniversary observance of the U.S. Jaycees, starts next Sunday in Baltimore, Bruce B. Hopewell, local Jaycee president announced today.

A highlight of the week's events will be the presentation of the 1970 Outstanding Young Men of the Year Award to four outstanding young men from Baltimore at the annual OYM dinner on Jan. 19, at the Blue Crest North.

Things are looking up. Including us.

Let's face it. It hasn't been the best of years for the economy. And, frankly, it hasn't been the best of years for us.

But we have enormous confidence in the basic stability of American industry and our own ability to reach greater heights of technological advancement.

To make sure we're fulfilling our responsibility to the people of Maryland as the state's second largest industrial employer, we will continue to pursue aggressively new business in 1971.

New business that could mean more jobs for workers, better products for consumers and industry.

Meanwhile, we're continuing wholeheartedly our efforts in such community-betterment areas as Equal Opportunity Employment, Junior Achievement, Youth-in-Industry, the United Fund, a Good Citizenship Program for employees that involves political exposure and an increased awareness, and other programs in the schools, the church and the Scouts.

We're not burying our head in the sand, like the ostrich, waiting for things to go away. We know things will be looking up. For the nation, for you, for us.
