—King honored

he told people in Memphis, "It really doesn't matter with me now, I've been to the mountain top." Wendy Sutton, 1, remembered.

Andrea Reids, 11, continued the story, "A man who didn't like Martin Luther King's dream shot him on April 4, 1968."

"He died at 7:02 on the evening of a bright, spring day," Yvette Cozark, 6th-grader, told how the black leader's life ended.

Sheila Croswell, 11, asked, "Did he want to sill the dream or the dreamer?"

Vanessa Shields, 11, agreed, "He was assassinated because people didn't like what he was doing."

Glenn Crews, 11, thought Dr. King should be honored with a poem. It began, "Martin Luther King, who made church bells ring,

He won the Nobel Peace Prize. When you speak of him you hear cries."

The kindergarners at School 160 were signed as well-informed as the older students.

When Mrs. Ruth J. Pratt, School 160 principal, asked Miss Cynthia Parrier's kindergarten class whose birthday would be celebrated Jan. 15, and why he was being honored, they answered, "Martin Luther King because he helped us ride in the front of busses" and "Because he helped us eat in the stores" and "Because he is our friend."

The sixth-grade students found history books couldn't agree when Dr. King was born. Although most said Atlanta, many claimed Montgomery was his birthplace.

All the students agreed that Dr. King was great because he fought for what he believed right — "all men are born equal and must have freedom and equal rights."

And that is basically why the students at School 160 are honoring Dr. Martin Luther King, on what would have been his 42nd birthday, with an assembly program, bulletin boards and afternoon intercom programs where they play recordings of his speeches.

The following students also told the AFRO why they felt Dr. King's birthday should be celebrated: In Mrs. Verna Rice's sixth grade class: Douglas McDonald, 12, Darren Downs, 11, Alfred Green, 12, Ray Moore, 12, Ricky Nelson, 12, Truss Nelson, 13, Esau Peterson, 12, Gloria Corbett, 11, Linda Davis, 12, Gilda Dixon, 11.

Darlene Dorsey, 11, Barbara Johnson, 11, Angela Kelly, 11, Alice Mason, 12, Brenda Phillips, 11, Carolyn Purvis, 11, Paulette Walker, 11, Bernadine Williams, 12, Cassandra White, 11, and Michael Houston, 13. Mrs. Elizabeth Richardson is the class' children's aide.

In Mrs. Evelyn White's sixth-grade class, they were: Nathaniel Eaton, 12, Charles Gambrill, 12, Gregory Grainger, 11, David Harris, 13, Charles Land, 12, Calvin McKesson, 11, Odie Simmons, 12, Sharon Turnage, 11, Shari Boone, 11, Lillie Cozart, 12, Joanne Douglas, 11.

Valerie Gaither, 11, Sherlyn Hardin, 12, Lisa Jackson, 12, Jacquetta Johnson, 13, Yvietta Leak, 12, Cheryl Mundell, 11, Kay Tellington, 12, Dinda Thomas, 11, Tien Weaver, 11, and Robin Mitchener, 10.

Education board sets three public hearings

Three public hearings will be conducted by the Maryland State Board of Education on Jan. 27 at 4 p.m. at the State Office Building, Baltimore.

The first, dealing with corporal punishment, will consider whether to delete an existing state bylaw that permits as a last resort corporal punishment of students by school principals.

Under discussion will be a replacement bylaw which would permit county boards of education to authorize such punishment "under extraordinary circumstances by the principal or vice principal."

A second hearing will deal with a proposal to increase the salaries and expenses of home and hospital teachers.

The third hearing will concern the appointment of a hearing examiner and procedural rules relating to departmental hearings.

People who desire to make their views known on any of the three subjects may write the State Board of Education, State Office Building, Baltimore, 21201. Those who wish to testify personally should inform the State Board of their intention by Jan. 20.

Governor, DOT head to cut ribbon on 185 new buses

Maryland Governor Marvin Mandel, U.S. Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe, and Urban Mass Mass Transportation Administrator Caglos C. Vilarreal will participate in ribbon cutting ceremonies, Monday, January 18, at 12:00 noon at Charles Center Plaza. The occasion will be the celebration of the arrival of the first group of 185 new buses purchased by the Metropolitan Transit Authority, the largest single purchase of transit equipment ever made in the Baltimore area.

The new buses, unlike the two-tone green ones currently in use, will feature an entirely new color scheme and new look. These newest members of the fleet will be unveiled for the first time at the 12:00 o'clock ceremonies on Monday.

The public is invited to join in the activities which will also be attended by business and community leaders as well as officials of Baltimore City and County and Anne Arundel County. Harry R. Hughes, newly appointed Secretary of the Maryland Department of Transportation, has also been invited.

Immediately following the ribbon cutting, a parade of the new-look buses will proceed through downtown Baltimore.

According to Joseph V. Garvey, resident manager of the Metropolitan Transit Authority, "the significance of this occasion is indeed highlighted by the participation of the governor and by leading officials in state and federal transportation. The acquisition of these vehicles represents an essential step in plans designed by the MTA to improve and increase bus transportation to the citizens of the Metropolitan community."

Contracted at a cost of $6.1 million from the Truck and Coach Division of the General Motors Corporation, the buses were purchased as a first step in the MTA's five-year improvement program.

The 51 passenger vehicles, which will run on diesel fuel, will be equipped with nylon seats which are a new development in transportation seating and are being installed for the first time anywhere on the MTA buses.

The new seating material, made of tough cast nylon, is static free and resilant to cracking, chipping and scratching.

The purchase marks the beginning of a total program to replace all MTA buses now in use which are 15 years old. Of a total fleet of 792 buses, 408 or 51.5 percent are over 15 years old, and as of December 1969, the average age of the fleet was 15 years.

As part of its plan the MTA has already advertised for bids for a second group of 185 buses. In addition the program calls for buying 50 buses each year in 1972, 1973, 1974. This will mean that by 1974 all buses 15 years old will have been replaced.

Peabody postpones concert

The Peabody Conservatory of Music has announced that a concert scheduled for January 14 by the Peabody Chorus under Gregg Smith has been postponed.

In its place the conservatory will offer a program at 3 p.m. Saturday, January 16, featuring the chorus, singing works of Schubert, Gesualdo di Venosa, Distler and Mozart.

The program will be held in the Concert Hall and is open free to the public.

Melva Rae Treffinger, a master of music degree candidate in choral conducting, will direct the chorus.

Students of Maria Morales will give a dance workshop at 4 p.m. Saturday, January 23, in the Concert Hall of the Peabody Conservatory of Music.

The public is invited to attend this demonstration of Spanish dance techniques. Admission is free.

Workshops are held monthly so that all students who study dance have the opportunity to explore together problems in choreography, technique, and preparation of performance.

Mrs. Morales is an internationally acclaimed dancer and a member of the Peabody Preparatory Department dance faculty.

The department will offer classes for all ages in Spanish dance, modern dance, Karnatic or East Indian dance, and ballet during the new semester starting February 5. For information call 837-0600, Ext. 26-30.

HEW urged to continue Service Hospital funds

Congressman-Elect Parren J. Mitchell has urged the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to continue funding of the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Baltimore.

In a letter to Elliot L. Richardson, HEW secretary, Mr. Mitchell requested a meeting Monday to discuss the matter further. He noted that the hospital is in the forefront of medical research, health care delivery systems and community involvement programs.

"In addition," he said, "community outreach is a central component of the hospital overall program as exhibited in the Homestead-Montebello plan . . . I find the proposed closure blatently inconsistent with the Administration's support of the Act."

Mr. Mitchell said that HEW should explore expanded community service programs if the hospital is undersued by government personnel.

The congressman's letter cited figures showing that 41 percent of the hospitals personnel and 35 percent of its patients are black. The community profits both through health care and training programs, it said.

Mr. Mitchell also noted that the administration recently expressed a greater sensitivity to the problems of black Americans and awareness of their concerns.

"In this light," he said, "I find the proposed closure particularly distressing."
