Dentists invited to join prepaid dental plans here

The Maryland Dental Service Corporation and Maryland Blue Shield today announced that all licensed dentists in the state have been invited to participate in their new prepaid program for dental care.

A spokesman for the two non-profit organizations said that 1,800 Maryland dentists have been sent information explaining the claims procedures and benefits under the new program.

Included with the material was an agreement of participation for each dentist's consideration.

The new program, called the "Maryland Dental Plan," was introduced last September. Aimed at providing comprehensive dental care coverage, the program's basic contract covers diagnostic, preventive, endodontic, restorative and oral surgical services.

Option building blocks or riders to this contract are available to cover prosthetic services (dentures and bridge work) and periodontic services (treatment of tissue supporting the teeth). An added benefit to cover orthodontic services currently is being developed.

According to the spokesman, emphasis of the program is on preventive dentistry with benefits designed to encourage early and regular visits to the dentist.

The reason being that the sooner a condition is treated, the less painful, the less complicated and the less expensive the treatment.

Members of the program are free to go to the dentist of their choice.

When their work is completed, dentists submit their claims to Blue Shield. Participating dentists, then, will be paid directly by the program.

Current Blue Shield subscribers are not automatically eligible for the dental program. In order to obtain a broad base of experience under controlled conditions, enrollment initially is restricted to groups of 100 persons or more. As experience in the program is gained, however, it is planned to offer dental benefits to other qualified groups. The groups need not have existing Blue Cross or Blue Shield coverage to be eligible for the dental coverage.

Nixon was raised a Quaker although he rarely attends Quaker services now.

the best interests of the school system to remain on the board, the Mayor will be behind him. If he sees otherwise, I am willing to accept his resignation."

The Mayor further commented that he "would not hesitate to remove the entire board or any individual member of the board" if it did not show progress in conducting its public meetings.

Many black leaders considered this "a public spanking of adults" by D'Alesandro.

Black leaders note for several weeks Dr. Sheldon denied that he intended to take the New York position but then he suddenly announced through the news media that he was "unhappy" in his job and would resign if the board would release him from his contract which still has two years to run.

Black school board members criticized his move as "a ruse to gain public sympathy" and pointed out that they knew nothing of his intentions until they "read about it in the newspapers."

Dr. Sheldon in turn accused the five-man so-called liberal majority of the board of making rules which infringed on his administrative authority, and described board meetings as having a "circus atmosphere."

Commissioner Larry S. Gibson strongly refuted the Sheldon contentions at the last board meeting two weeks ago.

The conflict then expanded to include all segments of political and financial interests in the city with splits often along racial and class lines.

Leaders in both the black and white communities hurriedly arranged meetings, each side determined to make its position as strong as possible in public.

Climatic proportions were reached when the Mayor recently submitted only one name for nomination to the board, that of his confidant and aide, Kalman R. Hettleman.

DR. HOMER E. FAVOR

He told the press that he would not submit the names of Samuel T. Daniels and Nicholas Mangione for nomination until he noticed "progress in the board's business." Their positions would be known, he said, as "holdover" appointments and could serve at his pleasure indefinitely.

This caused a further uproar in the black community.

The Rev. Dobson; the Rev. Marion Bascom, pastor, Douglass Memorial Church; and Dr. Homer E. Favor, head of the Baltimore Urban Coalition and dean of the Center for Urban Affairs at Morgan State College, requested a private meeting with the Mayor.

They told D'Alesandro that it was incumbent upon him to make it clear to the white press and the white community in general that he in no way means to infer that his remarks at the special board meeting were intended for the ears of black members alone.

They further said that the press had blown the issue into inexcusable proportions. Clarification, they felt, was urgently needed.

Late Wednesday evening the three black leaders and the Mayor met with Dr. Sheldon and Mr. Karwacki.

The AFRO learned that the Mayor made it clear in no uncertain terms to Dr. Sheldon and Karwacki that his remarks on board public conduct and each side "giving in" were applicable to them as well as to the other so-called conservative members of the board.

In a press conference yesterday (Thursday), the chief executive expressed particular concern over what he termed "intimations in the press" that he had "tongue-lashed and threatened" black members of the board last week.

The Mayor told the AFRO that he "at no time ever intended" his closed meeting with the board to have implied that "I had lost faith in any member of the board and I am aware that certain stories which ran in the newspapers about that meeting have been interpretated in the wrong way."

The Mayor declared his support for Sam Daniels and Nicholas Mangione and added, "what I want to have understood at this point is I want the critics to step back and give the board an opportunity to develop the harmony we'd all like to see."

He said that recent daily newspaper accounts of a meeting held Wednesday night between him and several members of the conservative elements of the City Council "were wrong in saying that there were any threats (or deals) made by anyone."

He told reporters that though he could not breach the confidence of the men present and reveal what had transpired, he could "tell you that the councilmen voiced their concern for the situation and informed me of their perogatives."

The Mayor concluded that Council was concerned about his future actions. However, he asked them to step back "and give the board a chance to work out the problems."

He explained his reasons for not submitting the other names to the Council.

"I just don't have the votes at this time," he admitted, "and I'm keeping them in what I call a hold pattern until that time when I feel that I can have them confirmed."

Responding to the Mayor's actions, the Alliance told the AFRO:

We re-affirm our commitment to an education system that is responsive to the needs of this community. To this end we will support and insist upon a responsive and responsible administration.

We extend the resouces of the Alliance, its 250 members and the responding churchmen therein to the Mayor, School Board and to this community to serve as a catalyst for social change without personal diversiveness and quality education without racist overtones.

AFRO sources expect Sheldon's resignation to be rejected today. Much of the speculation is due to the plea by D'Alesandro and his obvious desires in his remarks to have Sheldon remain in his post.

$212 millon budget before School Board

A public meeting concerning the tentative $212 million budget for the Baltimore City Public Schools will be held in conjunction with the regular meeting of the Board of School Commissioners on Thursday, January 21, 1971, 7:00 p.m., at the Poly-Western High School auditorium. The school is located at Falls Road and Cold Spring Lane.

Please note the change in time and place of this important meeting.

An explanation of the 1971-72 budget proposal will be given and citizens will have an opportunity to offer suggestions and comment on the suggested budget.

This meeting will afford individuals another chance to better understand the needs and goals of Baltimore's public schools.

It was necessary to postpone the budget meeting originally scheduled for last Thursday, January 14, 1971 due to firm predictions of adverse weather conditions for that evening and the closing of schools that day.

Bus change

The Metropolitan Transit Authority has announced that effective immediately and until further notice, the transit stop now made by westbound buses on the No. 7 and No. 10 lines on Pratt Street at Cheapside Street will be relocated eastward at the near side of South Street because of construction work.

The No. 7 line travels between Pikesville and Canton, and the No. 10 line serves the areas of Roland Park, Mt. Washington and Sparrows Point.

INSTALLATION DAY CELEBRATION — Mrs. Enolia P. McMillan, president of the Baltimore branch of the NAACP and Dr. King V. Cheek, president-elect of Morgan State College, greet President Emeritus, Dr. Lillie M. Jackson, as she prepares to address the 1971 Installation ceremony for Officers. Dr. Cheek was the main speaker.

Testimonial set for Schaefer

That testimonial reception for William Donald Schaefer, City Council president, will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Civic Center.

It is a $50 per person affair, arranged by a group of citizens to fund his expected campaign for mayor.

The testimonial comes on the heels of a gala one given for George L. Russell Jr., city solicitor, who is also being encouraged to bid for the mayoral post.

The Russell affair drew several thousand well-wishers of both races, and proved to be the most elaborate of its kind held here, over-shadowing an earlier one held for Gov. Marvin Mandel.
