BEST BUYS:

Selected purchases ease budget strain

By VIRGINIA McLUCKIE, food economist

Most shoppers do a commendable job of food shopping so the dollar spent stretches as far as possible.

Watch for specials on meats and take your time in selecting cuts that mean economy to your particular family. Use foods in plentiful supply to round out your menus.

This is the season for heavy supplies of pork. When stores offer specials on pork take advantage of the lower price. The cuts from the loin, particularly center chops, will carry a higher price tag because of the demand and because the loin represents less than ten percent of the pork carcass.

End loin roasts and end chops or shoulder chops will be less expensive and offer the same food value as the center loin cuts. Another attractive cut is a fresh Boston butt. This may be purchased with a blade bone in or boneless. Boneless Boston butts may be sliced into steaks, cutlets or roasted whole. Fresh shoulder or a half of a fresh ham are ideal cuts to consider using for a larger family or a company meal.

Pork offers fresh sausage in many forms and a variety of cured and cured smoked sausage items. Fresh ground pork may be used in casserole dishes as you do ground beef. The bland pork flavor is compatable with many vegetables, or spice and herb seasonings.

Fresh pork should be stored uncovered or loosely covered in the coldest part of the refrigerator or in the refrigerator compartment designed for meat storage. The temperature should be as low as possible without actually freezing the meat. Pork, pre-packaged for self-service, should have the wrapper loosened before placing in the refrigerator unless the meat is to be used the same day as purchased.

There is an ample supply of beef coming to market with very little change on the various cuts. Look for specials on chuck roasts, boneless chuck or shoulder roasts. When there is a special on round steak or round roasts and you have a freezer consider buying extra meat for storage.

Winter vegetables in good supply are white and sweet potatoes, dry onions, winter cabbage and carrots. Tender salad vegetables from Florida and Western growing areas are in the moderate to high cost range. Endive, escarole, Romaine and big Boston lettuce from Florida are alternatives for ice-berg lettuce. Green peppers, cucumbers, tomatoes and radishes are seasonally high in price. This may be the time to turn to canned and frozen vegetables for variety in menus. The cost of partially prepared and seasoned frozen vegetables in higher than the plain vegetables are in ample supply and convenient to use. Once they are heated and seasoned canned vegetables are ready to serve.

The best fruit buys are juice oranges, grapefruit, apples and bananas. Citrus fruit is in heavy supply and the best source of vitamin C on the market. There are better bargains in three or four pound film bags of apples than apples by the pound from bins. Frozen orange juice is also in heavy supply as well as canned single strength orange and grapefruit juice. Use these economy winter fruits with meals and for snacks.

Recipe for this week is for Pork Balls with Fruited Noodles.

You will need one pound ground pork, one-half cup soft bread crumbs, one-fourth cup minced onions, one egg, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, flour.

Also two tablespoons melted fat, four tablespoons flour, three cups bouillon or water, one teaspoon onion salt, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth cup raisins, rinsed; and four ounces noodles, cooked.

Combine pork, crumbs, onions, slightly beaten egg, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Shape into 16 balls; roll in flour and brown in fat. Remove balls from skillet, add flour and blend well. Stir in bouillon, onion salt, Worcestershire sauce and a dash of pepper. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened.

Add balls, cover, and simmer 30 minutes. Mix raisins with noodles and serve topped with pork balls and gravy.

Four servings.

Higher Long Distance Rates Due

WASHINGTON — The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. filed a schedule for higher long distance telephone rates, effective immediately with most of the increase applied to calls requiring an operator's help.

The company's application to the Federal Communication Commission said the new rates, together "with anticipated cost savings from changes in customer calling patterns," would produce an estimated $250 million a year in before-tax earnings.

That was the amount the FCC said last week it would approve on an interim basis when it set hearings on AT and T original request for increases which the company estimated would bring in $350 million more a year.

The new AT and T proposal, like the original one, concentrated the higher rates on person-to-person, credit card and collect calls. The company said these operator-assisted calls were more costly to provide.

Smaller increases would apply to station-to-station calls dialed by customers during the busy weekday daytime hours. But AT and T said customers could "avoid any increase at all by dialing their own calls in low-rate hours, in the evenings or on weekends."
