Mr. Berry's life was recipe for good Christian living

Funeral services were held Feb. 6 at Pennsylvania Ave. AME Zion Church for Jacob Berry, 63, 3722 Columbus Dr. who died Feb. 2. He is buried in Arbutus C[illegible]

Mr. Berry was a victim of an armed holdup and died of a gunshot wound at the place of his employment, a store on North Point Blvd.

He was a butcher there and was in the stock room when bandits entered and fired.

Mr. Berry was born Nov. 14, 1908 the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Berry of Ben Witty County, Va. He came to Baltimore 30 years ago. He and the former Miss Clarie Logan, his second wife, were married 13 years ago.

Mr. Berry had been a member of the Pennsylvania Ave. AME Zion Church 30 years and sang on the No. 1 Chorus.

He was a longtime member of the Columbus Drive Improvement Association and lauded by its officers and members as "a hard worker who gave untiringly of his time and talents to help in any way he could to improve his neighborhood and the community in which he lived."

The group's memorium to Mr. Berry included:

"As we think of our dear friend and neighbor it brings to mind this recipe.

"This is the way he lived his life:

A GOOD CHRISTIAN CAKE

1 cup of Good Thoughts;
1 cup of Kind Deeds;
1 cup of Consideration for others;
2 cups of Sacrifice for others;
3 cups of forgiveness;
2 cups of well-beaten Faults.

"He Mixed these tears of Joy and Sorrow

"He Mixed these thoroughly and he added tears of Joy and Sorrow and Sympathy for others.

"He always folded in 4 cups of prayers and faith to lighten other ingredients and raise the texture to great height of Christian living.

"After pouring all of this into his daily life, he baked them well with the heat of Human Kindness and served it with a smile."

The case of the 16-year-old white girl, equally as heart-breaking, involves her running away last Fall from a small town in Pennsylvania to escape a father she said was a "drunkard" and a mother, the court found to be a prostitute, being "alone and lost" in the world.

The young woman arrived in Baltimore, homeless and without funds and attached herself to a black ghetto family, poor but sympathetic to a human theworld.

The N. Carrollton Ave. family was unable to provide more than a roof and food.

In testimony before Master Hayes last week, it was revealed that the girl who wanted pretty clothes just before Thanksgiving, took from the mails a $174 check belonging to someone at the residence of her "adopted family."

That the corner grocer whom she asked to cash the check, knew the family and suspected something was wrong.

The teenaged girl nevertheless got the check cashed, bought some food and obtained the difference in money and went on.

At the hearing before Master Hayes she said she later purchased clothing hoping and intending some day to pay the money back.

After a finding of guilty, Montrose School for Girls.

Noteworthy in her frank testimony was the fact that she said she did not know exactly where her parents were. She emphasized, however, that they did not want her and she did not want them.

The neglected and abandoned girl also revealed that she had suffered beatings during her father's drinking spells and ill treatment from her mother as she and the father quarreled, fought, separated and went back together many times.

against minority groups in his cabinet appointments, and that the 22 per cent of Maryland's population which is black is not represented in the cabinet.

Sen. Mitchell's charges were countered by Sen. George E. Snyder (D, Allegany, Garrett-Washington), who said he would furnish Sen. Mitchell with a list of the Mandel black appointments, which, he said, far outshadowed those of any previous governor.
