'Try hard' coed's plan for success

WILBERFORCE, Ohio — The formula for success in college studies is very simple, according to a 20-year-old coed who plans to graduate in three years with straight A's at Central State University. Her formula: "I try hard."

The hard-trying student is Marlene Hopson Cornelius, a junior majoring in Elementary Education. She has never received any grade but A at Central State. Married and working Friday and Saturday nights in a Xenia pizza parlor, she carries a 21-hour class load in a quarter system in which 12 hours constitute a full load. The average load is 15 credit hours.

"Why am I in a hurry?", she asked, repeating a question. "You see I want to graduate with my husband who will work on his master's degree in psychology next year at the University of Cincinnati."

Marlene said she ascribes her academic strength also to the fact that "I received a good high school background. I took rough courses in high school."

She attended Marion-Franklin High School at Columbus, graduating in 1968 as a member of the honor society. She plans to graduate from Central State next August.

"I must get out also because I don't have much money," she explained, apologetically. "My husband and I have little time together because of our jobs." The two were married last September 5.

Although she has little spare time, Marlene said her hobbies are sewing and reading. She said she saves money by making her own dresses. She is a member of the Honor Society of Associated Women Students. She plans to teach in Cincinnati next year.

Marlene is the daughter of Mrs. Earlene Hopson, 3033 Bakerhill Road, Columbus. The mother is a keypunch operator for the State Highway Department. Her father, a former postal clerk in Columbus, died about eight years ago.

Marlene's favorite study is mathematics. "It's like working puzzles," she said. "It is a challenge and I enjoy challenges."
