Funeral services for Mrs. Ethel McMechen Jones will be held today (Friday) March 19 in Wheeling, West Va., the place of her birth.

Mrs. Jones, 87, died Tuesday morning at the Stearns Nursing Home, 1410 McCulloh St., Baltimore.

A life-time member of Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church (Wheeling, West Virginia), she was active in Methodist Circles throughout most of her adult life.

A graduate of Lincoln High School, for a time she attended the Elliott School of Business.

For a number of years, Mrs. Jones worked with the PTA of Lincoln High School, serving as its president for a period.

Her interest in YWCA affairs was reflected in her advisorship to the Girl Reserves, the youth division of the "Y."

As an interim secretary, she represented the "Y" (Blue Triangle Branch) at several regional and national meetings.

Mrs. Jones was the widow of the late Earl C. Jones and sister of the late George W. F. McMechen, long-time Baltimore attorney.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Virginia J. Richardson, associate director of library at Morgan State College; a son-in-law, Dr. John F. Richardson III, professor of Psychology, Morgan State College and two grandsons, Kevin and Michael Richardson.

Also surviving are 2 nieces, Mrs. Mildred Allen, Petersburg, Va.; Mrs. Edythe Blake, Mrs. Catherine Wilson and Mrs. Georgiana Chester, all of Baltimore, Mrs. June Haywood, White Plains, N.Y. and Mrs. Fouche Williams, Roosevelt, N.Y.

Federaton of priests condemn FBI's Hoover

SUZANNE C. GORDON (UPI) — The nation's largest group of Roman Catholic priests said Wednesday it believed the Rev. Philip Berrigan and five other persons were innocent of charges of plotting to kidnap a presidential advisor.

A resolution adopted by the 200-member House of Delegates of The National Federation of Priests Councils condemned FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover for discussing the alleged plot before the suspects were indicted.

The group, which represents about 34,000 priests in 130 local councils, later was to vote on a "statement of renewal" proposing to liberalize restrictions on the priesthood.

It included a clause seeking an end to celibacy for some priests.

The priests said Hoover made a serious mistake when he mentioned Berrigan and the alleged plot to kidnap a presidential adviser during testimony before a congressional committee.

"His allegations were premature and unfortunate," the resolution said.

It said it believed the six persons when they said they were innocent of the charges contained in an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in Harrisburg, Pa.

Berrigan, two other priests, a nun, a former priest and a foreign scholar were charged with conspiracy for allegedly planning to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and blow up heating plants for government buildings in Washington.

In other resolutions, the priests "unhesitatingly" condemned U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia and proposed a "compulsory national service corps" to replace the present military draft.

Representatives of the nation's largest organization of Catholic priests voted late Wednesday night to request the right to marry.

The vote came after a two-hour debate on the optional celibacy clause at the meeting of the 200-member House of Delegates of the National Federation of Priests Councils. The vote was 182 for, 23 against and 3 abstentions.

The celibacy clause is contained in a sweeping six-page "Statement of Renewal" directed to The International Synod of Bishops in Rome this September.

"Celibacy is a precious tradition of the Catholic church and it must be preserved," stated the final rewrite of the clause. "Freely chosen, it is an act of dedication . . . and is a sign of faith."

The statement admitted an end to mandatory celibacy would cause problems, and added "the need for this change far outweighs the problems it might create."

"We ask that the choice between celibacy and marriage for priests now active in the ministry be allowed and that the change begin immediately," the clause read.

It also requested permission for national hierarchies to be empowered to accept married men as candidates for the priesthood, and "finally, in a spirit of reconciliation, those priests who have already married should be invited to return to the active ministry."

The delegates began going over the "Statement of Renewal" at 7:30 p.m. EST. clause by clause. Debates continued until midnight.

Voluntary celibacy approved by priests

Saturday rites scheduled for Mrs. Richardson

Funeral services will be held for Mrs. Josephine V. Richardson, on Saturday noon at First Baptist Church, Fairfield, Md.

WREATH OF HONOR — President Nixon is aided by a military attache in placing the huge oval wreath on the grave of Whitney M. Young Jr. at the funeral services for the famed civil rights leader in Kentucky. Seated in background are members of Mr. Young's family.

WHITNEY YOUNG BURIED

On chilly hillside

MOSES J. NEWSON

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Grim-faced and without topcoat on a chilly, overcast Wednesday, President Nixon stood near the flower-bedecked casket of a black man he respected and climaxed an unprecedented six-day presidential display of concern over the death of a private citizen with a eulogy that left him more than ever committed to making the American dream a reality.

A mixed but predominantly black gathering in Greenwood Cemetery, seemed to grasp the significance of what was unfolding before them in this hilly little town in Blue Grass Country as Mr. Nixon began by intoning:

"Today a grateful nation will pay its respect to Whitney Young by continuning the work for which he dedicated his entire life."

Whitney Moore Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League since Oct. 1, 1961, was being buried at age 49 in a grave beside his mother.

Mr. Young died Thursday, March 12 in Lagos, Nigeria after suffering a subarachnoid hemorrhage.

His body had been brought home in an Air Force jet dispatched by President Nixon on Sunday evening. Funeral services were held in New York City on Tuesday with several cabinet members among the notables among little people attending.

A teary-eyed woman pressing against the protective ropes before the services began told the AFRO: "I'm just more surprised than anything else. Nobody here ever dreamed they would see a President in this place, more less the one here. Maybe something good will come out of it, maybe Whitney touched the man in a way he did not understand himself. I see something good coming."

Two young women who wanted to shake hands because the reporter wore a 'presidential guest' tag on his coat, put it another way: "That man may be trying to tell us something, being here and sounding so good. We started not to come because he was part of it but we're glad we did. This could be the start of something."

With but a few seconds to meet any of the people at the funeral, the AFRO was struck by the uniformity of their feelings.

Over and above the fact they were pleased that a President had come to Lexington to take part in the funeral services of a black man, they simply had not been able to put away their amazement that President Nixon had, been the one to do it.

But what they heard from President Nixon was more than just a eulogy of praise for the deceased civil rights leader he said "will be remembered as a doer, not a talker."

Speaking on the morality of duty and the morality of aspiration, President Nixon said:

"The morality of duty is one that requires every individual to do what the law calls upon him to do. The morality of aspiration does not require, but it inspires a man or a woman to go beyond that and do what the better angels of his nature would call upon him to do."

Mr. Nixon said Mr. Young's message is that "Every man and woman in this country is equal before God, and every man and woman in this country, now we trust, is equal before the law."

He went on: "But to have true equality, it is not just what the law requires, but what we individually can do, because that respect which can only come from the heart of one person to another, a respect for his dignity, for his individuality, for his immorality, that is something that must come from each of us."

In turning down his offer of a cabinet position before he left he could do more outside government, Whitney Young asked, the President said, "What can I do through helping others, through recognizing their equality, their dignity, their individuality, to realize the American dream?"

Paraphasing Young's dream, Nixon said it was for "one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice and opportunity for all.

"To fulfill his dream is the responsibility of each of us.

"It is a commitment that each of us makes in his heart on this day."

After the brief graveside services President Nixon and his wife spoke with Mrs. Young and other members of the Young family before returning to their plane for the flight back to Washington.

Gov. Louis Nunn of Kentucky, joining in Lexington, arrived at the cemetery with President Nixon whose contingent included a large number of key aides and government officials as well as Kentucky Senators John Sherman Cooper and Marlow W. Cook.

U.S. officials present included Robert J. Brown; special Nixon assistant; Samuel Jackson, HUD assistant secretary; Arthur Fletcher, assistant secretary of labor; Mrs. Elizabeth Koontz, women's bureau chief, labor department; William A. Brown, EEOC chairman.

Others in the party included Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall and Brig. Gen. Daniel (Chappie) James.

The President brought along James Farmer, former HEW assistant secretary who resigned his post several months ago. Mr. Farmer, former CORE director, is one of the big-four civil rights leaders who included Mr. Young, the NAACP's Roy Wilkins and the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

White House brass, John D. Ehrlichman, H. R. Haldeman and Donald Rumsfeld were in the President's party.

Young's body was brought to Lexington from Louisville where thousands Louisville where thousands had viewed it Tuesday evening and Tuesday night after funeral rites in New York.

The motorcade slowed at Simpsonville, site of Lincoln Institute, where Mr. Young went to school, and encircled Kentucky State Coilege in Frankfort where he earned his A.B. degree.

Dr. Peter H. Samson of the White Plains Community Church also participated, which Mr. Young was a member, officiated. The Rev. Homer Nutter, pastor of Lexington's First Baptist Church also participated.

Young, A Man Of Vision

by each one who is an American.

Dr. Lon Fuller, in his lecturing at Yale in 1963, spoke of two kinds of morality.

He spoke of the morality of duty and the morality of aspiration. The morality of duty is one that requires every individual to do what the law calls upon him to do.

The morality of aspiration does not require, but it inspires a man or a woman to go beyond that and do what the better angels of his nature would call upon him to do.

And it is in that spirit that I speak of Whitney Young today.

I remember the last meeting we had in the Cabinet Room three days before Christmas. You remember, all of you who knew him, he always had a little button, "Equal" on his lapel. He just didn't wear that on his lapel. He wore it in his heart.

What he says to us and what his message to us is, is this: every man and woman in this country is equal before God, and every man and woman in this country now-we-trust is equal before the law.

But to have true equality, it is not just what the law requires, but what we individually can do, because that respect which can only come from the heart of one person to another, a respect for his dignity, for his individuality, for his morality, that is something that must come from each of us.

And so today Whitney Young's message to America — the country that he loved with all of its faults, loved it because he realized that this was a country in which we had the power to change what was wrong and change it peacefully — Whitney Young's message was this:

"What can I do. What can I do to make this a better country?"

Naval Academy barber buried

The fifth son of Allen and Mariah Eason, Allen Eason, Jr., was born in Elizabeth City, N.C., February 25, 1925. He came to Baltimore, to live with his sister Pearl, in August 1930.

He died March 9, after a short illness. He attended the public schools of this city, and as a youngster, became a member of the Franklin Street Baptist Church.

Allen met, and married Edna Jackson Eason, and they were the parents of one son, Allen Eason III.

He honorably served his country for a period of two years during World War II.

He joined the fellowship of the Timothy Baptist Church, in April 1958, where he had remained a member in good standing. He was also an active member of the Male Chorus of Timothy.

He was employed at the U. S. Naval Academy, from February, 1952 until March 4, 1971, advancing to the position of foreman of barbers. He won many awards, and citations, during his tenure at the Academy.

He is survived by his wife and Allen, two brothers, Cecil Eason, Eugene Eason, five sisters, Mrs. Pearl Rainey, Mrs. Emma Lou Simpson, Miss Helen Eason, Mrs. Elaine Morrison, Miss Dorothy Freshwater, and numerous relatives and friends.
