her. Fire fighter Burke complained, made a derogatory remark, about her wearing a mini dress.

At the formal hearing before the Board of Commissioners three weeks ago, Fire Fighter Burke speaking directly to the members of the church and Mrs. Johnson said, "If anything was said or done by either of us at that time which offended anyone we are deeply sorry."

Disciplinary action taken against the fire fighters included the loss of 10 days vacation time and five day suspensions for each fire fighter.

In a letter dated March 17, John J. Lacy, president of the Board of Fire Commissioners offered the following apology to Ames pastor, the Rev. James Irving A. Moye and members:

"This Board takes a dim view of actions by Fire Department members which in the course of their duties fail to reflect the high standards insisted upon in our official policy.

"Please accept my apologies and advise those in fellowship with you that appropriate disciplinary actions have been taken and also steps have been taken to insure that this type of regrettable experience shall not be repeated."

Y holds swim classes for 'Tiny Tots'

The spring swimming program of the Western YMCA will feature an instruction class for boys and girls between six months and five years of age.

The "tiny tot" class is designed to orient young children to the water and develop a child's natural reflex to kick and hold breath while in the water.

Floating, drown-proofing and basic swimming techniques also are covered in the ten-week series of classes in which one parent participates with each child.

The class will be held in the Edmondson High School pool beginning April 17 at 11:30 a.m.

Recreation site hearing set

The City Council's Judiciary Committee will hold a public hearing at 1 p.m. Monday in Room 304 City Hall on an ordinance to turn a parcel of land over to the city in Northwest Baltimore for recreational purposes.

The land in question, contained in Ordinance 1646, lies in the vicinity of Stricker, Presstman, Calhoun and Lanvale Sts.

Highlights of CCB meeting on elderly

At the end of the Community Conference on Aging at CCB, Mrs. Barbara Faw, a co-ordinator of the conference, and administrative assistant to President Bard, gave a resume of the outstanding conclusions reached by the 14 workshops.

The complete list of recommendations will be compiled later by Mrs. Faw.

Here are the highlights:

1. The nation should provide a decent standard of living for every retiree and his family. The income should be adjusted to the lving costs.

2. The Federal Government should earmark sufficient money to take care of the health needs of eldrly persons. A national health insurance program, similar to social security, would be most valuable.

3. The value of housing for the senior citizen cannot be questioned, but funds for such projects are inadequate at the present time.

4. Sufficient money should be spent for the food needs of retirees and their families, and funds should be provided to inform the elderly about nutrition needs.

5. A Federal cabinet post and a national department should be established to deal with the problems of the aged. This agency could serve as an information relay from the state and cities to the capital in Washington.

6. Retirement age should not be lowered, but retirees should be able to enter contract negotiations with employers to supplement retirees' income to increase their incomes substantially.

7. Churches and other religious organizations should concentrate their attention also on programs for senior citizens just as they place their emphasis on youth today.

8. The elderly need a powerful voice, hence a Federal agency should be set up to hear complaints and listen to recommendations for the welfare of older persons.

9. A Federal agency should be provided with funds to study on a large-scale the process of aging.

10. Senior citizens should have the opportunity to continue their education, with adult centers being established near their homes.

coming address, pointed out that the conference was an integrated one, with blacks and whites and persons of all creeds being represented.

President Harry Bard said that the college was concerned with all segments of the community, relating that free courses were provided at CCB for all retirees who would not be able to obtain such education otherwise.

Following the general meeting in the Campus Theatre, the conference representatives broke into small groups of 15 to 25 persons who then attended 14 workshops devoted to every problem faced by older people.

These workshops discussed such issues as health, income and nutrition as well as employment and transportation.

One workshop dealt with the spiritual help which might be given senior citizens.

This correspondent could not attend all 14 workshops operating simultaneously, as he selected the income group, of which Mr. Manuel O. Goldstein, director of Institutional Research at CCB, was leader.

I observed that a fair cross-section of senior citizens, both black and white; workers in welfare agencies and community health organizations took an active part in the workshop, telling about their experiences with the elderly.

The speakers unfolded an overall desperate picture of the older persons and the retirees in the population. In the earlier years of their lives, most persons have positions which brought in sufficient income, or, if they were wives, they were married to husbands who were working.

The social workers in the workshop told of those older persons who had been on welfare.

At the time of retirement, the income of those who worked dropped off sharply. Income was then derived from social security and from pensions. But the rise of inflation caused the price of every necessity to jump; hence, the nombined income for millions of older persons was inadequate.

Yet they could not engage in productive jobs, except on a limited scale — according to the law.

The workshop representatives pointed out, however, that the older person was faced with many new and more severe health problems than in his earlier years.

Consequently, he had to pay costly bills for physicians and for druggists. Medicare, a part of the social security system for retirees over 65, provided only part of the cost; medicaid, for those on welfare, furnished some relief.

But the picture for many, many older persons was bleak, bleak, bleak.

At the end of the workshop session, the group agreed on several goals for the nation.

Retirement should be looked forward to as a happy time, instead of a depressing period. The nation should provide an adequate livable income — a decent standard of living for retirees and that this income should be pegged or linked to the living cost index of the time. If prices rose three per cent, so should the social security benefits.

This group also recommended that all older persons have free access to medicaid, and that a National Health Insurance program, similar to social security law, be enacted to cover old as well as young people.

Employes, employers and the government would contribute to the health fund.

After the session, we interviewed Mrs. Gloria Bagwell, of the Model Cities Multipurpose Center, at 606 N. Paca, who attended the workshop. She thought that the conference was very valuable and an eye-opener.

The meeting gave the older person the opportunity to tell of the hardships and difficulties they faced, she said. Fixed income and health were the two basic problems older people faced, she concluded.

Retirement banquet for Solomon Banks

HONORED RECENTLY was Solomon J. Blanks, a custodian at school No. 116, Baltimore, Md., for 28 years. Relatives from out of town included (l to r) Mrs. Edna Blanks, sister-in-law from Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Daniel Long, neice; Mrs. Anita Woodson, principal of school No. 116. Solomon J. Blanks, who retired from the public school system after 28 years of service, was honored at a testimonial dinner at the Fontaine Bleu, Friday evening.

The banquet was sponsored by the faculty and staff of School No. 116, where Mr. Blanks served as custodian engineer.

Master of ceremonies was Joseph Campbell. Original poem and an original ballard, composed by Mrs. Mrs. Arnita Woodlon and Mary Carter Smith and Mrs. Mae Medders, paid affectionate tribute to Mr. Blanks and told in word and song of the helpful aid he had given both teachers, staff and pupils over the years.

Tribute also came from Mrs. Irma Dancy, Dr. Rebecca Carroll, Calvin Carrington, Manley Brohawn and Reginald Watts; and a telegram from Charles Mason.

The Rev. Donald O. Wilson, rector of Saint James' Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Blanks is a member, gave the invocatian and the benediction. And representatives of the student body, including Miss LaRue and Martin Rankin, also were participants.

Others on the program included Mrs. Bessie Nichols and Mrs. Linda Jackson, soloist; Mrs. Sarah Blow, president of the Parent-Teacher Association; Mrs. Jessie Higgs of Mission Operation; and fraternal greetings from the Knights of Pythias, the Order of the Princess of Omar; John Murray, Mrs. Nellie Williams, Mrs. Mary Ransom, Clarence E. Rich of the Golden Link Lodge, Mrs. Sarah E. Curtis, Mrs. Maggie Brown.

Mr. Blanks was recipient of a gift certificate and watch and Mrs. Blanks received flowers.

he "did not touch her" and that the only person who did was "Sylvester Morris."

Morris is the State's chief witness against both Ayers and Young.

Testimony offered by Morris is admittedly part of a deal between him and the State for "a recommendation of 10 years" and a guilty plea for the 17-year-old witness.

However, at the outset of his testimony in the Ayers trial he stood on the 5th Amendment and refused to testify.

Judge Paul A. Dorf sensed "the fear of this young fellow" and took time out of the trial to declare that "if you are afraid of something tell me what it is and I'll do something about it."

The youth admitted that he feared going to the same prison as Ayers and Young. Judge Dorf assured him that he would see to it that it and when he were sentenced he would not be with his co-defendants.

He then told the jury that Van Louis Young and Ulysses Ayers had assaulted the victim.

He said he held her "legs while Young had sex with her" and that it was he who handed Ayers the pipe used in the assault.

Dr. Irving Sopher of the Medical Examiner's office told the jury that the pipe or "a cylindrical object" caused a wound which extended up to the lower intestines.

He explained there were some "50 wounds and indentations about the victim's head" meaning that she had been struck several times with the head with a heavy object.

Despite all that, however, he revealed that the "cause of death was strangulation." Dr. Sopher said he found "several bone fractures of the larnyx and hemorrhage in the throat area."

He explained the head wounds and the internal injuries were secondary and could have caused death in a day or two had she not been strangled." That killed her immediately," he added.

After several hours deliberation, the jury returned the verdict. a verdict of guilty or murder in the first degree and criminal assault against Ayers, however they stipulated that the death penalty not be imposed with means that Judge orf is required to sentence the youth to life imprisonment.
