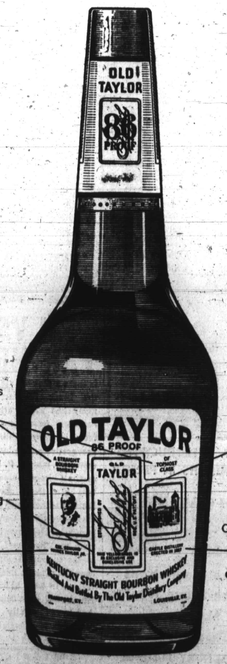
Before you buy another Bourbon, read the fine print.



Colonel Taylor put these words on the label in 1909. We still live up to them. We still use the same costly small grains, still tend our mash as lovingly.

The Colonel took another step to foil would-be imitators. He printed these words of warning and changed the color of the label to a distinctive yellow.

Old Taylor is the crowning achievement of Col. Edmund H. Taylor, Jr., easily the foremost Bourbon distiller of the late 1800's.

People galore tried to copy Old Taylor. So Col. Taylor made every bottle a signed original. And that took care of that!

Old Taylor is the only Bourbon rich enough to be born in a castle. (Col. Taylor built the castle in 1887, near the delicious limestone spring he discovered.)

Old Taylor. What the label can't tell you, the flavor can.

BEST BUYS:

Eggs in many ways make tasty dishes

By VIRGINIA McLUCKIE, Food Economist

The month of May will be observed as Egg Month in Maryland. Wise homemakers with an eye to thrift and nutrition will take this cue and build tasty meals around eggs.

Eggs may be served many ways. They are an ingredient in so many types of recipes that eggs are likely to appear in some form at any meal. In addition to versatility as a food, eggs make a worthwhile contribution to the nutrient content of diets.

Because of the amount and quality of their proteins, eggs make a good alternate for meat. Eggs are a highly valued source of iron, vitamin A and riboflavin, and are one of the few foods that contain vitamin D. If you are counting calories, you can figure that a large egg has eighty calories, sixty of which come from the yolk.

* * *

To be sure of getting quality eggs, buy graded eggs at a market that keeps them in refrigerated cases. When you shop for eggs you may find several grades and two or more sizes within one grade.

Grade AA and Grade A eggs are top quality. When broken open they have a small air cell and a round, upstanding well-cultured yolk, surrounded by a large proportion of thick white. All eggs of A quality of better must have shells that are clean, free from stains and cracks. The exterior quality is also determined by uniformity of size and shape as well as shell condition.

All eggs sold to retailers or to consumers must be candled for quality. The candling is a process of examining the unbroken egg before a strong light. After candling and weighing for size the cartoned eggs must be marked with the grade and size classification on the top of the container as specified in the Maryland Egg Grading, Sizing and Marking law.

* * *

Two processed vegetables, sweet corn and tomatoes continue to be in good supply. Take advantage of using canned whole kernel or cream style corn for variety and tasty dishes. Plan to serve a corn pudding using lots of eggs in the custard. Tomatoes are economically priced.

Select regular packs for stews, casseroles and dishes where the tomatoes are cooked up in the dish. Whole peeled tomatoes and quarters or tomatoes are usable for salads.

At the produce counter look for the best buys in cabbage, celery, new onions, asparagus and cooking greens. Greens include local collards, kale, mustard, rape and turnip tops. Prices for western iceberg lettuce are weaker.

Fruit suggestions include grapefruit, bananas, pineapple and strawberries. Extend the fresh fruit by combining it with canned fruits or fruit cups, salads and fruit compotes.

Recipe for this week is for Corn Pudding.

Corn Pudding is made with two tablespoons chopped onion, two tablespoons butter or margarine, two pimientos, diced, one can (17 oz.) cream style corn, three eggs, beaten, two cups hot milk, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, onehalf teaspoon monododium glutamate and one tablespoon parsley flakes.

Cook onion in butter until tender. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into casserole and set in a shallow pan of warm water. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees (F) about 1½ hours, until an inserted knife blade comes out clean. (6 servings)
