—Why Flower Mart

black young people were not entirely responsible but society in general was.

Rev. Cotton.

This was school to a degree by the Rev. Walker Hildebrand, pastor of Bethel AME Church, Druid Hill Ave. and Lanvale St., which was established in 1787.

The Rev. Mr. Hildebrand said he feels youthful black persons could be harboring a feeling of "outside looking in," and should be made a part of life and living in Baltimore.

He said they may be embittered and lashing out against an institution which in the past has not included black citizens.

Noting that for the first time the Flower Mart included black organizations this year, he said young people may still feel that, heretofore, it was exclusive and not held for them and they were never included.

"Although the protest therefore, is a legitimate one, the method cannot entirely be approved of," the Rev. Mr. Hildebrand stated.

"They should be made to feel they are a part of it and everything here."

Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau, however, would only comment with praise for his men. He said:

"All members of the force, those on the street, as well as those in service and support will be made available for a well coordinated team in a most professional and effective manner.

"I feel certain the citizens of Baltimore are as proud of these fine men and women as I am."

State's Attorney Milton B. Allen took a philosophical view, when asked why he thought the civil disorders erupted at the Flower Mart.

"It's a question I can't answer by myself," he said, "I am available to participate with any interested city or state officials to give my counsel to any discussion at the centers."

"I don't feel any purpose is to be served by taking any public stand. Everybody is against disorders. Everybody is against crime.

"It's a sensitive matter which I feel can best be helped by quiet, serious deliberation among persons who have the power to do something about the problem.

"Public outcry by officials may serve the political style of some, but I feel that seldom does this method accomplish anything of a concrete nature."

Mayor D'Alessandro, speaking Thursday from a prepared statement at the opening of the Greater Baltimore Arts Festival, issued this warning to those who would participate in civil disorders here:

"I am not going to allow the perpetrators of violence, disruption and harassment, however, to divert us from our course of rebuilding and revitalizing this city.

"I come here this morning to cut the ribbon officially opening the Greater Baltimore Arts Festival, which I hope will develop as an outstanding public event, and which continues the activities of Preakness Festival Week in Baltimore.

"I met earlier today with officials of the Baltimore City Fair and assured them of my continued support for their work, and asked them to proceed with full speed ahead for a greater and more colorful City Fair this year.

"I have also talked with Commissioner Pomerleau and have his assurance that sufficient numbers of police will be made available for these major public events. We cannot permit these young thugs to break up our fine civic traditions.

Councilman Robert C. Marshall (4th) put the blame on parents. He said:

"I think it's time for the parents to step in and find out why their children were not in school.

"If the parents cannot control their kids, maybe we have to leave it up to the law enforcement officers to control them, and put them away in some detention centers."

"I for one feel as long as I am a public officeholder, this city of Baltimore is going to survive with people who want to enjoy the fruits of it instead of deteriating it and trying to tear it down."

When asked for his comments on the disorders, and why he thought they occurred, Councilman Emerson R. Julian (4th) was brief and frankly puzzled.

"I don't have the slightest idea," he said, "But I think it was one of the most tragic things that could have happened in our community."

Further official comment came Thursday afternoon from State Senator Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd, shortly after he had announced his entry into the race for mayor in the fall elections.

"I don't know what caused it," Sen. Mitchell said. "But if the people are going to be able to help make the city reach its full cultural potential, then we must work with our young people to assure that incidents such as that which occurred at the Flower Mart do not occur again.

"We must eradicate the root causes of such violence. But we cannot tolerate it while we work for solutions. Hoodlum activity hurts both the black and the white community."

City Solicitor George L. Russell Jr., who was the first major candidate to announce his bid for mayor, took a far more harsh stand against the persons creating the disorders than any questioned.

Mr. Russell, former Supreme Bench judge, issued a lengthy blast against them, and said corrective measures should be instituted now to guard against further eruptions.

Here is what he had to say:

"I fully deplore the result of the 50th Annual Flower Mart held in this city. We, as citizens, can no longer allow the elements of violence, disruption and civil disobedience to go unchecked.

"When it becomes necessary to assemble a force of 500 policemen to contain what was expected to be an enjoyable, pleasant event, then it is time to focus our attention directly on this element of our society.

"It is time to act to correct this situation now.

"It was asserted that most of the bands of teenagers were those who were skipping school. This is exactly the kind of disregard for authority and responsibility that we must bring to a close.

"These unsupervised teenagers on the street present the most difficult problems to the citizens of Baltimore, and we can no longer allow them to continue.

"What is most disturbing about the whole affair is the fact that the average age of those arrested ranged from 15-17 years of age, the youngest being 12 years-old and the oldest being 46 years old. These are the statistics that this city should be concerned about.

"This kind of conduct by some elements of this city cannot be tolerated and should never be allowed to cause the cancellation of future events to be presented in Baltimore. This city must never be surrendered to this violent element."

Robert C. Hilson, state director of Juvenile Services and veteran of 20 years in the field, states, "In no way can the actions of the young people be condoned. There is no rational excuse for it.

"The school system should take some responsibility. The children should have been in school. The school should have taught the children a sense of civic responsibility to enjoy and not destroy our city.

"But, it is a manifestation of general rebellion in youngsters in general against what has been considered the "older generation's" way of doing things. They are not satisfied with the world the adults have wrought. They see war, racism, children going to bed hungry at night."

Juvenile Court Master U. Theodore Hayes speaking as a citizen and patient says, "There was no sense, rhyme nor reason to what was done. It was just plain hoodlumism.

"I see no reason why so many children do what they do today. Yesterday's children were not so bad. Children today have it much more, so many more places to go, money to spend and things to do.

"What motivates them? They're just rowdies, some of them. There were boys showing off for girls and girls egging them on, all running wild for no reason.

"We need more juvenile facilities. We seed to tighten up on law enforcement.

"I am reluctant to say it, but it was a mistake to take away corporal punishment in the schools. Some need it to curb their disrespect for authority.

"They do not get it at home. The teacher should be able to administer it. Certainly all adults are somewhat disenchanted as I am with some of the children and young people on up to college. Some respect has to be established somewhere for law and authority. A job needs to be done somewhere in between, from the home and the school."

Six others left to be tried include Arthur Turco, Jr., 28-year-old New York attorney who is charged with conspiring to murder, soliciting to murder and kidnap and assault with intent to murder; Donald E. Cox, San Francisco, Calif., Clarence M. Johnson, 19, 1000 block N. Washington St. and Henry Mitchell, indicted but never apprehended.

Marshall Edward Conway, also indicted for murder, has been sentenced to life for the murder of a Baltimore policeman and has 20 additional years for assault with intent to kill another policeman.

Sentenced to life for murder in the Bag of Bones Case is Irving Yount, 31, Morgan State College senior. Charges of kidnap and accessory after the fact were dropped Wednesday.

Found not guilty by a jury in April was Charles Wyche, 36, 1800 block N. Castle St., who was said by the state to have been the man who shot Anderson. Attorney Larry Gibson represented Wyche, father of nine children, and brought the Panther case to a turning point.

The "Bag of Bones Case" first attracted public attention when in April, 1970 after a policeman had been killed on raids to arrest the 15 Panther Party members alarmed the city.

The "Bag of Bones Case" first attracted public attention when in April, 1970 after a policeman had been killed on Myrtle Ave. raids to arrest the 15 Panther Party members alarmed the city.

Mrs. Elsbeth Levy Bothe, a defense attorney, challenged the state to say that no positive identification of a skeleton could be made.

Continuing attention has come due to numerous efforts of Attorney Turco to get released on bail.

During the police trial of Eddie Conway, he absented himself from any portion of the lengthy hearing contending he wanted Turco as defense lawyer. Turco, who is still lodged at Baltimore City Jail, was not allowed to appear as the defense attorney.

James McAllister was appointed by the state.

Underlying the strange case, in which police records say the Panthers skinned Anderson alive and tortured him for 24 hours before dragging him to Leakin Park to be shot, is the alleged testimony of several ex-Panthers.

The state has failed to reply when asked by the AFRO if the three ex-Panther Party members are after a year or more, still lodged in unknown locations under state protection.
