Birds promise band concert but Red Sox may play tune

The Orioles have scheduled an interesting program for Tuesday night prior to their game at Memorial Stadium with the Cleveland Indians.

Fans will be treated to a concert by the new and unique All-Baltimore Senior High School Band. This group under the direction of Leigh Martinet, supervisor of instrumental music for the Baltimore Public School system, comprises 75 musicians from 14 Baltimore City high schools.

But before that, the Birds must concern themselves with immediate problems.

Their play — except for the pitching — has left much to be desired in recent games. The hitting has been at a low ebb and the defense which kept the opposition in awe last season has not been as formidable.

But hitting slumps and occasion fielding errors are expected, and can be lived with — but mental lapses are something else.

The manner in which the Yankees ran on Pat Dobson (four stolen bases in five innings, each of which resulted in a run) could cause alarm in the breast of Oriole fandom.

And Boog Powell's miscalculation on the number of outs lost a double play in a game against Washington that was close at the time.

This is not championship baseball, and there is no room for any other kind at the stadium commencing tongith (Friday) when the come in for a 4-game weekcome in for a 4-game weekend series.

Of the Tuesday event, Goucher College music professor, Dr. Elliott W. Gelkin, says:

"This band cuts across all the socio-economic categories of the city. It really is the first educational program in schools which is black and white and based on excellence."

The program which will begin at 7:30 p.m. will include "Semper Fidelis" by John Philip Sousa, highlights from "Promises, Promises" by Bert Bacharach, "House of the Rising Sun," "Panarama for Bands — Portrait of Americana," and will conclude with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner." ... Some citizens have accused me of putting Black people down in BY THE WAY. Primarily, they criticize my stand on Blacks committing crimes against Blacks. They say there is more white crime being committed and that I should seek out the racist causes behind Black crime. If I were a sociologist or philosopher, I might agree. But I am a Black man speaking realistically about things Black people must do if we are to improve said control our communities.

Ask the Black businessman forced by Black hoodlums to close his shop if the burden of heavy debts is any easier because he knows that white people have deprived Blacks of equality and dignity for years.

And, what about the Black mother who dies a thousand deaths each day wondering if Black gangs are going to harm her children—children who want to learn and refuse to burn. Can you appease her anxiety by reminding her that we live in a racist society?

Are Black people arming themselves against the threats of the white community and excusing the intimidations of the Black lawless element?

The Good Book says: "And the truth shall set you free." If we Black people really want greater control of our own communities, then we must admit that Black-against-Black crimes are serious. And we must recognize that the high Black crime rate hurts us, because it prevents Black people from reaching their economic potential. Let's all respect Black pride through community responsibility, as well as in hair and clothing styles.

Moore Foundation fund drive begins

The William L. Moore Foundation and the Center for Afro-American Studies have announced the opening of its annual fund drive this week and the goal is $10,000.

Norman V. A. Reeves, chairman of the Foundation, said the campaign goal represents a doubling of last year's budget. Increased funds are needed to finance several new programs, he said.

The majority of the funds will go to the Center for Afro-American Studies, 473 E. 25th St., an East Baltimore Afro-American history and culture center sponsored b the Foundation.

The Foundation, an educational institution concerned with improving interracial understanding, commemorates the lives of men who have died for the cause of human freedom. It was founded in 1963 to commemorate the life of Bill Moore, a Baltimore postman killed while in Gadsden, Ala., on a freedom walk to Mississippi.

In a plea for community support, Reeves noted that the Foundation had been supported entirely by individual contributions from the community for the past seven years.

"We've proven that the community is willing to support programs that meet community needs," he said.

Warning out on keeping grass cut

The Bureau of Environmental Hygiene issued this week a warning to property owners that with the coming of warmer weather, extra care should be taken to keep grass cut and to remove noxious weeds.

Wild growths of weeds and grass are a nuisance and a source of illness. Weeds not only cause serious skin and respiratory reactions, but they also serve as hiding and breeding places for rodent and insect pests.

Property owners and residents have a legal obligation to prevent and control the growth of weeds. The city weed control ordinance makes it unlawful for any owner, occupant or person in control of any lot or lands within the city of Baltimore to allow on such lot or lands any growth of weeds or rank vegetation over one foot high.

pants and persons in control of lands in the city

In addition, owners, occu- must keep the lands free of ragweed, wild mustard, wild lettuce, wild parsley, common thistle, milkweed, poison ivy and all other noxious weeds.

Anyone wishing advice on getting rid of noxious weeds or wishing to report violations of the weed ordinance may call the City Health Department's Sanitary Enforcement Division at 752-2000, extension 793.
