MAYOR KENNETH GIBSON and Mrs. Gibson of Newark, N.J. were among guests at the Goines-Spruill wedding in Baltimore.

Miss Spruill wed to Thomas Goins

Miss Cassandra Melvina Spruill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie C. Spruill exchanged marriage vows with Thomas Kennard Goines in a double ring ceremony in Douglas Memorial Church, Saturday evening.

The six o'clock ritual was performed by the Rev. Maxie Gordon, minister at First Calvary Baptist Church, Columbia, S. C. Spencer Hamlin was at the organ and Roderick Russ was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional gown of ivory satin, fashioned with long sleeves and a panel of lace, re-embroidered with pearls down the front. The embroidered lace also decored the bottom of the scalloped skirt and the floor-length train. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a bandeau of pear embroidered lace and she carried a crescent of white pompons and orchids.

She was attended by Miss Patricia Payne as maid of honor, and Mrs. Lonnie Spruill Jr., matron of honor. Both wore pants dresses of chiffon and lace, which featured stand-up collars and long sleeves. The colors were peach and lime green respectively.

Bridesmaids were in a medley of colors, and included Miss Anita Boardley, who wore green; Mrs. Jacqueline Gordon of Darby, Pa., deep blue; Miss Theresa Kelly, maize; Miss Marsha Brown, hot pink; Mrs. Patricia Lawson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., pale blue; Miss Jeanette Goines, pale pink; Miss Maurine Sims, of Wilmington, Del., lavender; and Sharon Hillary, of New York, deep green.

The flower girl, Sonya Lawson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in peach. Cjett Chavis was ring bearer.

The ushers were Elton Maddox of the Eastern Shore, David Burton of Columbia, S. C., Ralph Horton of Nashville, Tenn., Allen Sampson of the Eastern Shore, Ronald Spruill, Lonnie Spruill Jr., Welling on Sawyer of New York City; and Delwin Chavis, junior usher.

A reception for 400 guests was held at Martin's West.

For the wedding and reception Mrs. Spruill wore a gold chiffon pants dress with matching coat and a turban of the same chiffon. The dress was trimmed with gold sequins at neckline and cuffs. Her corsage was a white orchid.

The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Stellie Goines of Columbia, S. C., wore pale blue crepe pants ensemble trimmed in silver. The top was split to the waist and her accessories were in blue. She, too, wore a white orchid.

At the reception when the receiving line broke, the bride and bridegroom led the dancing ... to the melody "Once in a Lifetime." They were joined by her parents, then by Mrs. Goines and the bridegroom's uncle, Freddie Goines of New York. Then the bride danced with her father and with Mr. Goings, while the bridegroom danced with both mothers, before they were joined by all members of the bridal party, and in turn by guests who wished to dance.

Mrs. Fran Sewell coordinated the reception and Mrs. Ruth Murray, the wedding. Hostesses were Mrs. Frances Peak and Mrs. Fredricka Williams.

The new Mrs. Goines is a graduate of Western High School and Morgan State College, and will receive a master of arts degree from Coppin Teachers College this month.

Mr. Goines, who is also the son of the late Mrs. Goines, graduated from the A. H. Johnson High School in Columbia, Morgan State College, and with a master of arts degree from the University of Michigan.

They will be at home on Eastbury Lane.

MR. AND MRS. NOW — Miss Cassandra Melvina Spruill and Thomas Kennard Goines were married in Douglas Memorial Church, Baltimore, Saturday.

Carver students study drug abuse

Eleventh-graders at Carver Vocational-Technical High School participated in drug abuse seminars this week under the auspices of the Baltimore City Health Department, the Department of Education, the Maryland Drug Abuse Administration and the school authorities.

If the seminars prove to be of value, they may be extended in the Baltimore City schools, said Dr. John B. Saratsiotis, Director of the Baltimore City Health Department's Bureau of School Hygiene.

The program at Carver featured 10 leaders skilled in dealing with youth. They were social workers, counselors, ex-addicts and psychiatrists and each worked with a group of 25 to 30 students, Carver's physican Dr. Simon Carter explained.

Discussion was informal. Tape recordings were made of the 75 to 90-minute sessions so they can be reviewed by the evaluators.

If the programs seem successful, the tapes also may be used in setting up models for use by other schools.

The seminars are under the guidance of Dr. Carter, Dr. Saratsiotis and Henry C. Johnson, Carver's principal. Some expenses of the seminar will be covered by $250 from the Maryland Drug Abuse Administration.

Turning the tide and coming on strong in cocktail dresses were Gerri McKee of New York, Blanche Hughes of New Jersey, Jessie Banks of Washington, Romaine Clay of Washington, and Blondine Jones of Cleveland in a beautiful red and gold print. She, incidentally, is national president of the organization. Inez Hill, pert young schoolmarm of Atlanta, Ga. turned all eyes in an outfit of black hot (and I do mean hot) pants ensemble ... then, at a later party dittoed in reverse colors, the pants white, the shirt black and the coat, white.

Gerri Lynch of Columbus wore a floral print dress; Ethel Maddox of Pittsburgh, a short black, silver trimmed cocktail dress.

Format for the induction at high noon Saturday was luncheon in the Roman Holiday Room, with Gerri DesBordes at the helm. Frances Henderson presided and introduced the national officers. Pivots were toasted in pink champagne by Janet Woolridge, who depicted them as "Women of such pride and skill that no one attempts to stem the tide of them stupendous will."

Joan Phillips, Baltimore chairman of the installation committee, was chic in a soft beige shirt waist knit with matching beige, blue and red hat.

While this was going on the Pivoteers (men in their lives) had been spirited off for some high doings by their Baltimore contemporaries.

The rains came Saturday night, but except for the change of plans to play and dine in the beautiful gardens of Helena Whittaker, they just played and dined in the confines of her magnificent house.

In fact, there was room-to-room dining ... beginning with the fruit boats in the living room, which was flower banked, candlelit and glowed from the fire place ... to the adjoining room where a cheese and wine spread had been arranged by the club's gourmet Minnie Smoot; to the open and flowing bar in the club room through whose paneled windows the rain seemed just silver drops on the lighted pool and patio. Then there was the course dinner in the dining room, after which the champagne fountain was lighted, the orchestra swung out again and guests wandered to the coffee and sweets rooms when they were not dancing.

Spectacular point in the evening was when the musicians struck up a march, and hostesses and guests filed upstairs where visiting Pivots each presented gifts to Mrs. Whittaker.

The weekend ended with the farewell brunch on Sunday, after which, the out-of-towners departed for their homes across country. Mrs. Gattis in an all-white pants suit with a purple shawl; Helen Birt in white linen pants suit, Catherine Blackwell of Detroit in a red, white and blue three-piece knit; Wilhelmina Banks of Washington, Sammye Houston of Cleveland, Ethel Maddix of Pittsburgh, Evelena Mitchell of Washington, Eva Saxton of Cleveland, all took and gave last view flashes of the high appeal of the hot pants thing ... the Pivot thing.

And back to the Pivoteer's party ... that was at the home of Dr. William Birt on Forest Park Ave., where the men saw films, played cards, and each received a souvenir gift.
