Teens tutor preschoolers in 'Sesame Street' skills

A unique tutoring project, using the popular television series "Sesame Street" to involve teenagers in Baltimore in the early education of preschool children, will be launched throughout the city June 23 by the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

The eight-week program, involving 40 high school students, expects to reach more than 800 preschool children from poor and minority families in inner-city neighborhoods. The students will be paid an average of $1.60 per hr. by the Youth Corps.

The summer program here is part of a national project undertaken by the U.S. Department of Labor's Manpower Administration to provide summer jobs for high school students enrolled in the Neighborhood Youth Corps System in 14 metropolitan areas across the country.

The Department of Labor had budgeted $600,000 to run the project in those areas.

Joseph Valley, director of NYC here, said the program "will allow youths community involvement in leadership role while at the same time offering some measure of financial reward for their labors."

The teenagers will act as "Sesame Street" teachers in day care centers established viewing centers in store fronts, libraries, private homes and public housing projects throughout the city.

The curriculum will consist of play-type activities geared to preparing preschoolers for elementary school. After watching Sesame Street each day the youngsters will be encouraged to participate in games using letters, numbers and geometric forms or other lessons contained in the day's TV show.

Joyce T. Eaton, Children's Television Workshop coordinator in Baltimore said the pilot project "is a good way to prepare youngsters for the skills of the Youth Corps summer workers but also to raise their sights. Their participation in a teaching situation should help them gain fresh viewpoint regarding education."

NYC is part of the national Neighborhood Youth Corps System run by the Labor Department's Manpower Administration. The national corps, established in 1964 under the Economic Opportunity Act, is a federally funded program designed to provide work experience and income to unemployed youth, both in and out of school.

Working under supervision, teenagers enrolled in the Youth Corps serve as aides in schools and libraries, as teacher aides and "aides" in cafeterias and museums as well as in offices and factories, gaining exposure to and experience in possible careers.

Huber Church honored by Christian Social Action

"One of the most difficult and perplexing problems local congregations and local pastors have had to face is how to deal with the changing residential patterns in the vicinity of the local church building.

"Some have decided to meet the problem by selling the church building and constructing a building in the area to which the members have moved.

"Some have chosen to stay in the inner city and serve the dwindling membership which chooses to remain. A rare few have decided to remain and serve not only the greatly reduced membership but also those among the inner city residents who elect to become members of the congregation."

These were among the words of Mr. Applewhite, Director of Social Action of the United Church of Christ from Washington, D.C., in the June 12 ceremony honoring the Rev. R. C. Meissner, pastor of Huber Memorial United Church of Christ.

The Rev. Meissner is one who made the last of three cross country teams, Stevens toured Greece, Turkey, Iran and India as an athletic goodwill ambassador.

Rev. R. C. Meissner, pastor of the Huber Memorial United Church of Christ.

choices Applewhite described: he stayed in a changing neighborhood to serve those who stayed and to welcome into the congregation newcomers to the community.

Huber has been, under the Rev. Meissner's pastorate, a stabilizing influence in the community, the area around the Alameda and 29th St.

"This church we honor today," Applewhite went on, "chose to remain in a neighborhood which, in the decade its present pastor has been its spiritual leader, has changed from 90 per cent white to 95 per cent black.

"In addition to its decision to remain, it has opened its membership to all—old and new—who find its ministry helpful and relevant.

"Finally," he concluded, "it has decided that the scope of its ministry is not only to its members but to the entire community where it is located."

Lionel Stevens to personnel director's post

Lionel M. Stevens has been named director of personnel and administration for the Children's Television Workshop, producer of "Sesame Street." A personnel specialist, Stevens has previous experience with Standard Oil Company and Equitable Life.

Stevens will coordinate all of the Workshop,s personnel functions including employment, compensation and employee benefits and will have responsibility in administration and office management, said Thomas P. Kennedy, vice president and treasurer, who announced the appointment.

He is a member of the board of directors of the Council of Concerned Black Executives and treasurer of the Chemical Personnel Association. He has also served on the New York City Task Force on Youth Motivation, which involved visits to predominantly black colleges to interest students in business, and was a visiting professor under the National Urban League's black executive exchange program at the Atlanta University Graduate School of Business.

Stevens, 32, served in the U.S. Army as an information specialist, and holds a degree from St. John's University. At graduation, he was awarded the Rikard F. McSwiney Medal as the student who best typified the St. John's man and was selected to appear in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. As captain of the varsity track team, he was a member of the Army's Pentathlon team.

My husband just bought me a piece of the Rock.

Our neighbor is a Prudential agent, that's how we found out how little protection we really had.
Now that we have Prudential life insurance, I know the kids and I are protected. We could continue to stay in our own home, and the kids would have enough money for college. Things wouldn't be the same without my husband but . . . we'd make it. Owning a piece of the Rock is having Peace of Mind, With Prudential . . . we've got it
