"Hey, Baby, let it all hang out!"

"Tell it like it is."

"Don't blow your cool."

"Heavy, Baby."

"Do your own thing, Dude."

"Crazy, Dadi"

Two black cats rapping? Wrong. That conversation is from the Sunday comics. I reprint it here to prove a point: There is no Black language. There are the African languages, of course. But I'm referring to the communication tool of the Black people born in the United States.

This is 1971. And never before has it been so important for Black youth to master the English language. Our young people don't have to sound like Rhodes scholars, but they must be able to communicate with citizens of the Black or white community. That is the only way they can reach their fullest potential as wage-earners or producers.

There are better job opportunities available for minority group citizens today. And those jobs are not going to the guys who apply for employment by saying: "Dig, man, I need a gig."

More important, when we don't learn English, we give credence to the stereotype that Blacks are mentally inferior to whites. White immigrants come to this country and master English—but we Black people, who are born here, act like we don't have the ability to do so.

If we do nothing to destroy this false image of inferiority, then we too are telling ourselves and our Black brothers and sisters that "you are less than, you are not equal to other American citizens."

Tuskegee launches fund drive here

The Maryland phase of a nationwide drive to raise $1 million for Tuskegee Institute will be launched here today (Friday) by friends and graduates of the famed Alabama institution.

The Mil-Dol-Fun (Million Dollar Fund) campaign will run locally until October 31, according to Lt. Col. (ret.) George L. Fountain, president of the Baltimore Tuskegee Club and deputy director of Equal Employment Opportunity at Fort George Meade.

He said three headquarters will be open to kick-off the drive—two in Baltimore at 4011 N. Rogers Ave. (phone 664-4032) and 4001 Chatam Rd. (phone 542-7210) and one in Columbia City at 5049 Beatrice Way (phone 730-9068).

Fountain said Tuskegee, like private colleges throughout the country, is confronted with mounting financial difficulties because of inflation, rising operating costs, and dwindling federal, state and philanthropic support.

He said Mil-Dol-Fun efforts here will be aimed at alumni and Friends of Tuskegee, the business and religious communities, social and civic groups, and the community at large.

An Alumni Family Roundup—Rally held as a preliminary to today's kickoff drew graduates from throughout Maryland, Fountain said. "Because of pledges made on the spot by phone, I am confident of a successful drive locally," he said.

He added that alumni pledges would be announced as soon as they are compiled. Presently 70 Tuskegee graduates compose the Baltimore club, Fountain said.

"We could not possibly reach our share of the $1 million national goal without the help of friends who have known the contributions of Tuskegee and Tuskegeeans over the years and persons generally interested in helping to maintain quality education in this country."

Busing ordered for resort city

RICHMOND, Va. — A federal district judge has ordered the city of Petersburg to implement a desegregation plan which would require the busing of 2,000 children this fall.

U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. threw out a plan drawn by the Petersburg School Board and substituted another fashioned by plaintiffs.

The new plan uses pairing and clustering in the city's nine elementary schools to achieve more integration.

Ali says Joe didn't know any better

CHARLESTON, S.C. — "He just doesn't know any better, I guess."

Muhammad Ali was referring to heavyweight champion Joe Frazier. In itself, Ali's disparaging remark about Frazier is nothing new, but the subject was new.

The former champion was here this week to engage in six charity rounds aimed at promoting amateur boxing in the state, was reminded of Frazier's recent appearance here before a joint session of the South Carolina General Assembly.

Joe told the legislators that blacks and whites must learn to live together.

Ali said persons who make such comments are "trying to force something that can't happen, no matter how hard you try.

"Those white guys don't pay any attention to that kind of talk," he added. "Just going around saying we should all be together doesn't mean anything."

Ali, discussing the recent fight with Frazier, said he plans to fight him differently the next time they meet.

"There will be more dancing and a lot of footwork and I think I will train hard.

Do something for somebody less fortunate than you. Look around you. Be kind to someone today.
