—Russell-Mitchell

the Mitchell panel shot to Russell was why his office okayed the councilmanic redistricting plan, which a Bar Association committee said diluted the black vote in the district.

Pointing out that a suit challenging the plan is now in Federal Court, Mr. Russell answered that he could not comment on a case in litigation.

Sen. Mitchell was asked by the Russell panel why he had given scholarships to three members of his own family, and to a white man.

The senator, remarking aside about "character assassination," said the white man was a credit to the 4th District and needed the scholarship.

Questioned about his financial backing, including funds purported to have come from George P. Mahoney and the support of Louis Grasmick, Mahoney campaign manager in the past gubernatorial campaign, Mr. Russell had a ready answer in a heated tone.

He said officals of the Maryland National Bank had been treasurers at his two receptions, and countered with:

"You know where my money is coming from. Where is Sen. Mitchell's coming from?"

Sen. Mitchell was asked why, since his family has waged a fight against liquor outlets for years, he took an interest in supporting at least one with an interest involved.

Mitchell, without directly replying to the interest involvement, said he had supported some licensees who had proven good for the community, and that he wanted more black control of such businesses.

Russell was asked if he would propose a change in Board member to elective, if he became mayor.

He answered he would not, because he would be able to name whom he wanted.

A Russell panel member, wanted to know of Sen. Mitchell why he had such a poor attendance record in the Senate at Annapolis, and what he had accomplished there worthwhile.

He answered that he was the sponsor of the state's first fair employment law, and had sponsored or co-sponsored 63 other pieces of legislation.

When he was not at the Legislature, he explained, he was out walking the streets.

A Mitchell panelist asked Mr. Russell where was he during the 1968 rioting.

"I was up at the Fifth Regiment Armory with the attorney general and the general giving legal advice," he replied.

There was much more of the same in the same tone of personality charges.

There was no mention of the property tax rate, and how it could be curtailed, attracting new industry to the city; voter registration, other basic problems affecting the city, and how the candidates would meet them.

Though entertaining, the confrontation served primarily to contrast the two candidates with no immediate noticeable loss of supporters on ether side.

One result was an announcement from Larryf Young, head of Baltimore City Youth Caucus, that his group would call a debate and registration drive 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday at the Rev. Sidney Daniels' Emmanuel Christian Community Church, Carrollton and Lanvale St. And would invite the three top mayoral candidates, Mr. Russell, Sen. Mitchell and the white community's William D. Schaefer.

300 trained, have returned to prison.

"An example of what this training does," explained Mr. Jeffries, "is the story of a young 24-year-old who had served nine years at Hagerstown. He was trained last year as a pipe fitter, upon his release he was hired by the Board of School Commissioners.

"He volunteered to take training as a stationary engineer, and upon satisfactory completion of this training, will receive a yearly raise of $1,000.

"Mind you, this, after spending most of his teen years in prison "You see, jobs are the key to a lot of problems."

Mr. Jeffries, although enthusiastic about the program, says, "This program only dents the surface with 4,000 offenders released each year.

Mr. Jeffries concludes, "We hope by 1973, this program will be a part of the correctional division budget.

"Commissioner of Correction, Joseph G. Cannon has been more than cooperative, getting us into all areas of the institution.

"If we had more like him to get more young people turned around, we'd have it made."

The ex-offender training program is funded through the Governor's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice, under the Omnibus Crime and Safe Streets Act.

on Thursday morning as to the exclusion by a black superintendent of a black newspaper from a press conference which dealt with issues directly affecting the future of the boys back children. Mr. Keyes said, "I had nothing to do with it."

However, at the urging of the AFRO, he revealed issues he discussed during the two-hour meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Department of Education.

Topics of importance aired were: financing urban education by the federal government; extending the city limits to provide for a metropolitan school system; the possibility of having a 95 per cent black system by 1975; the fiscal future of the Commission on the Revision of the Social Studies; and discipline in the schools.

On other matters, Mr. Keyes noted Friday, June 23 was the date parents who wanted their tenth graders to attend Northern High School — who were scheduled by a board ruling to attend Lake Clifton to submit forms to Twenty-fifth St.

Tabulations, the AFRO was told, would be ready by Monday.

Asked his views on Lake Clifton being named a community school last week by the Board over his objections, Mr. Keyes said, "This change means that a staff position must be added. And the Clifton Park program must be moved to Lake Clifton, when the principal of Lake Clifton and the community school council agree that Lake Clifton should be made a community school only when it is ready."

This was a subjection of contention at the School Board meeting last week between a citizens' group led by Councilman Robert Douglass (D-2nd) who asked that the school be made a community school immediately.

Mrs. Pearl C. Brackett, assistant superintendent for community schools, who was seated in the audience, was called up to the microphone and agreed with the citizens' group.

Jealous lover gets 25 years

By MARY BERNADINE MYLES

Stephen Neal King, 34, 2400 block Madison Ave., has been sentenced to spend 25 years in prison for manslaughter in the hammer slaying last month of his girlfriend, Mrs. Catherine Carey, 29.

Mrs. Carey died June 28 as the result of multiple head wounds from blows inflicted "because he loved her," the defendant's attorney told the court.

Also testifying that King fatally injured his sweetheart because of his affection for her were Officers Phillips and J. Ozezweski who revealed while on routine patrol June 28, King approached them voluntarily near the 1400 block Pennsylvania Ave., and stated:

"I killed my girlfriend this morning. I killed Catherine Carey. She was my girlfriend. I killed her because I loved her."

Judge Anselm Sodaro sitting in Criminal Court on Tuesday accepted King's plea of guilty to manslaughter and imposed 10 years for manslaughter and seven and eight prison sentences for assault.

All terms are to be served consecutively by King for the total sentencing of 25 years imorisonment.

Another charge of burglary against King was dismissed following negotiations between defense attorney Russell J. White and Assistant State's Attorneys Ellen Luff and Anton Keating.

King's sweetheart, Mrs. Carey, was found by police unconscious on a bed covered with blood in her second floor anartment in the 100 block W. Lanvale St. the morning of June 28.

Police reports placed before the court stated that she also sustained multiple wounds of the body. Her two daughters, ages 12 and 9 years, also sustained wounds from a blunt instrument over their bodies.

Police revealed that a hammer was found on the living room floor of the woman's apartment. The instrument was in front of a window in which the glass had been broken, the court was told.

King had originally pleaded not guilty of the brutal murder by reason of insanity at the time of his arraignment before the court on Monday.

However, the day of trial (Tuesday) King changed his plea to guilty of manslaughter.

Following a psychological investigation at Clifton T. Perkins State Hospital, King was judged under law to be legally sane at the time of the slaying and at present.

However, it was revealed that King is on the borderline by adult mentality standards.

It was also revealed that King had suffered previous mild brain damage following psychological investigation and suffered epilepsy seizure disorders.

It was reported that the daughters of the victim in testimony for the state, indicated the defendant had an argument with their mother before she was slain.

The youngsters, according to the state, saw Mr. King said the night of the slaying: "I'm going to kill you all."

The young girls also are reported as having disclosed King struck their mother and then proceeded to strike them also with a hammer, leaving the mother unconcious on her bed.

New Social Service Center opens in Johnston Square

Maurice A. Harmon, Director of the Baltimore City Department of Social Services (DSS), has announced that the Johnston Square Social Services Center of the Department is now open for service.

Located on the third floor of the Department's building at 1500 Greenmount Ave., the center is a localized Social Services Center established, as part of the Department's decentralization plan to bring services to the neighborhoods where clients live.

Eventually, 21 such centers will be located throughout Baltimore City.

The new center, with a staff of 35, is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The telephone number for general information is 234-2064. Clients seeking information regarding financial eligibility, Food Stamps and Medical Assistance may call the following numbers: 234-2075, 2073, 2715, 2585.

The service area of the Center has the following boundaries: North Ave. on the north; Caroline St. on the east; Eager on the south, and Jones Falls Expressway on the west.

District Manager for the Center is Alvin Pasco, who has been with the Department for ten years.

Mr. Pasco holds a BA in Sociology from the University of Maryland and an M.S.W. from Howard University.

The Johnston Square Social Services Center is the fourth such localized Center to be opened by the Department.

The first, the Park Circle Social Services Center at 3000 Druid Park Drve, was opened in February of 1970.

The second and third centers: Steuart Hill Center at 2133 West Pratt St. and the Franklintown Road Center at 220 North Franklintown Rd., were opened earlier this year.

Last rites held today for Asa Royston, retired teacher

Funeral services were held today (Friday) for Asa Royston, 71, who was killed Sunday night as he returned to his home in the 2400 block Woodbrook Ave. from buying dog food at a North Ave. Market.

His widow, Mrs. Catherine Royston, a teacher at the Booker T. Washington Jr. High School, told the AFRO, "He had gone to get dog food at the North Ave. Market and was returning home.

"He was shot at 2420 and made it to 2448.

"A neighbor came screaming across the street and told me my husband was lying in the street. I called a radio car."

Mr. Royston, the AFRO was told, was still alive when an ambulance took him to Provident Hospital. He died at 12:05 a.m. Monday.

Homicide officials said on Tuesday that no suspects had been apprehended and the investigation was continuing.

The assailant attempted to rob Mr. Royston who is thought to have resisted. There were no eye witnesses to the killing. The robber immediately fled the scene.

He taught school for a number of years in Richmond, Kentucky. He later taught in Norfolk. For 29 years until his retirement in 1953. He commuted from Baltimore to Norfolk.

In Virginia, he attended St. John's AME Church and sang in a Glee Club. The Roystons were married in 1932.
