Two eight-round bouts planned for August 5

BALTIMORE — Billy Lloyd, ranked as the fourth leading junior middleweight in the world by the World Boxing Association, will seek his 18th professional ring start since turning pro in 1965 on Aug. 5.

The hard-punching southpaw bores former amateur champion Jodie Harris, of Chicopee, Mass., owner of a 9-1 record, in one of two eight round main event scraps at Steelworkers Hall.

Baltimore heavyweight Larry Middleton, who has been promised a "shot" with former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson in late September at the Civic Center, has signed to fight Mack Harrison (16-14) of Akron, Ohio, in the other eight round feature.

Lloyd has become a favorite with the fans here on the strength of his victories over Freddie Cobb, Alvin Phillips, Johnny Doyan and Luis Vinales.

He also fought a sensational draw with Ron Harris before local fans.

Lloyd has been challenging and campaigning for a bout with Ralph Palladin, who is now ranked third in the junior middleweight division.

Local promoters, Buddy Wagner and Izzy Caplan, have hopes of matching Palladin and Lloyd at a later date.

"Billy could have his hands full with Harris, who claims to have beaten Palladin and former middleweight contender Gypsy Joe Harris in the amateurs," says Wagner.

Bill would aid elderly in fares

Congressman Paul S. Sarbanes (D-4th) has joined in co-sponsoring legislation which would allow the elderly to ride on buses, trains and airplanes at reduced rates.

The bill, known as the "Senior Citizen Transportation Act of 1971" would permit elderly persons over the age of 65 to pay only half the normal fare to travel on buses, trains and planes in interstate commerce during non-peak hours.

Noting that many retired persons and other senior citizens must live on fixed incomes from social security and other pension benefits, Mr. Sarbanes said this legislation would provide some relief for the elderly who want to travel.

Ali, enraged over taxes, looks to Frazier rematch

HOUSTON — Following his 12-round victory over Jimmy Ellis, Muhammad Ali has not only been outspoken about his feelings towards his opponent and future fight plans, but he also has loudly and bitterly attacked the Internal Revenue Service.

Ali was enraged when he discovered that the IRS had seized $130,000 as a tax repayment from his $450,000 Ellis-fight guarantee.

His attorneys, Chauncey Eskridge and Mark T. McDonald, said that Ali had planned to set aside at least $100,000 for "such deductible investments as oil and gas explorations."

The lawyers told a United States District Court that Ali "owes no income tax and has no history of ever having owed taxes."

Ali's suit against the IRS was settled out of court last Tuesday, but the terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

The former champion charged the government with racial prejudice regarding what he termed "black man's money."

"They don't allow me to do like other people do," Ali complained. "They deliberately take all my money."

Ali will earn about $560,000 from his 45 per cent share of the "fighter's pot," estimated at $1.25-million.

Looking to his boxing future, Ali mentioned negotiations were under way for a rematch with Jerry Quarry in Houston Sept. 27.

He also noted a tour of European exhibitions, a possible London bout, and of course, a return match with Heavyweight Champion Joe Frazier.

As to when the Frazier fight is to be, Ali said: "Maybe next March . . . and I want it in the Astrodome so evebody can see it."

Ali has renamed Angelo Dundee, who deserted him in order to manage Ellis as one of his trainers for Jerry Quarry fight.

"We haven't talked," Ali said in reference to Dundee. "But he'll be back."

Ali said following his bout with Jimmy Ellis that he could have knocked Ellis out in the 12th round but he knew Ellis was in so much trouble he would not have to knock him out to win.

"I'm not out to kill anybody," Ali said. "I'm not out to hurt anybody. I don't care who it is.

"I can see when a man is in trouble. He was in critical trouble. I knew I had him."

It was obvious the last five rounds that Ali was in control. Ellis did not land a damaging punch while Ali became the aggressor with his left jabs.

"Mostly I had to wait until he burned out some of his energy." Ali said, explaining why he pranced around the ring, hands at his side, daring Ellis to connect in the early rounds.

Ali had said he was in the worst shape of his life for the fight, and Ellis had said he was in the best condition.

After the fight, Ali bragged again, in contradiction to his pre-fight talk, that he was "in the best shape ever."

"I had energy to burn with that extra weight," Ali said. "When I first made my comeback I worried about my legs. Everyone said that the legs are the first to go. So my plan in fighting Oscar Bonavena and Joe Frazier was not to jump around."

Ali said, "I kept asking myself 'Am I finished? Am I going? Are my legs gone?' In my youthful days I could concentrate on dancing around."

However, Ali noticed that, "My legs didn't tire at all against Ellis and I fought him mostly on my toes, not flat-footed."

Ellis said Ali hit him with the same right hand with which Ali knocked out Sonny Liston and that the final round right was good enough to knock out Heavyweight Champion Joe Frazier.

"The shot I was worried about was his right hand," Ellis said moments after he fell victim to a technical knockout in the 12th round. "He came over my left jab when I missed."

Ellis wanted this fight for years and is ready for another one.

"I'll fight him again," Ellis said. "I want to redeem myself. It was a great fight, but the man beat me."

Joe Frazier, after watching Ali's 12-round TKO victory over Ellis on closed circuit television, dismissed the victor as "a big clown" and the loser as "stupid."

"Muhammad Ali is a big clown who came into the ring with over-sized trunks to hide his fat," said the heavyweight champion.

"He always puts on a show. Maybe the public likes this but I don't go for that stuff," Frazier said.

Frazier, who watched the bout at a sports arena with his wife Florrence and some friends, said Ellis "fought a stupid fight. He didn't know what to do."

"I have them in the palm of my hand. They need me and I don't need them. I will fight either one in the early fall for $5 million and change, tax free," said the champ.

But Ali, who promised to stay in shape for his next meeting with Frazer, made some observations of his own.

"Ellis is a much better boxer than Frazier," Ali said. "Frazier can't be ranked with Ellis as a boxer. There's nothing pretty to watch about Frazier. He's a street fighter. He's flat-footed. He's nothing to see.

"He won't change. He'll be in such pitiful shape when I finish with him he'll retire. He talks like an amateur. Ellis even sings better than Frazier."

See the stars play. Before they become stars.

Lottery for draft set Thursday

Col. James L. Hays, III, Maryland State Director announces that the third annual draft lottery will be held on Thursday, Aug. 5, 1971, at 10 a.m. at the Commerce Department Auditorium, Fourteenth Street and Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C.

The lottery drawing will assign random sequence numbers to all young men born in 1952. Unless deferred or exempt, these young men will face their prime exposure to the draft for the twelve months beginning Jan. 1, 1972, and the lottery will determine their order of call.

The young men born in 1952, who face induction next year will know their relative chances of induction after the lottery has established their random sequence numbers.

Thus, they will be in a better position to plan ahead, particularly since draft calls are most likely to be reduced and cause less interference in their lives.

The lottery will be conducted in a manner similar to that used in 1970. Two drums will be used. In Drum A will be placed capsules for each birthdate from January 1 through Dec. 31.

Drum B will contain capsules for numbers from 1 through 36.

A capsule will be drawn simultaneously from each drum thus establishing the random sequence number for the birthdate drawn. This is a completely random and impartial method of selection.

LOOKING UP nine stories to the top of Criminal Court Annex near St. Paul and Lexington Sts., it can be seen just how far 26-year-old Bernard Richardson, 400 block Cummings Court, fell to his death last Monday after receiving a 15-year armed robbery sentence. Richardson crashed the courtroom window and plunged to instant death thus avoiding serving time and facing two pending indictments.

to halt poisoning FDA moves

A major step to protect children from accidental poisoning by requiring "childproof" containers for dangerous household substances was announced this week by the Food and Drug Administration.

Dr. Charles C. Edwards, commissioner of Food and Drugs, said new regulations are being offered for public comment. These will establish methods for evaluating the effectiveness, as well as feasibility, of safety packaging.

"The annual number of fatalities resulting from accidental ingestion of poisonous substances by children, under 5, has been reduced from 434 to 281 in recent years," Dr. Edwards said.

"Much of this substantial reduction is the direct work of the Poison Control Center and of activities under the Hazardous Substances Act. The new regulations being proposed today are the next logical step in further reducing the hazards to children from toxic household substances."

The procedure being proposed by FDA testing would test 200 children between the ages of 42 and 51 months inclusive, evenly distributed by age and sex, to determine the ability of a closure to resist opening by children.

The ability of adults to open the special packaging also would be tested. All data would then be evaluated by FDA.

The percentage of effectiveness, established by the tests, would determine if a package can be legally designated as a safety package. It is anticipated that the standard may vary from product to product depending on the danger to children.

Stone check

BUCKINGHAM, England — Town Councilman John Benham paid his local taxes this week with a check written on a concrete paving slab. It was Benham's way of protesting against poor pavements in town.

After consulting with his bank manager, he wrote out the check for 35.38 pounds ($84.62) on the 100-pound stone. Officials at the town hall drove it back to the bank where it was promptly cashed.

DIXON ASKS

Can 18-year-olds serve on juries?

Delegate Isaiah (Ike) Dixon Jr. (D. Baltimore City 4th) said Wednesday he has contacted Attorney General Francis Burch, seeking clarification of a contradiction in the Maryland law regarding the eligibility of 18 to 20-year-olds to serve on juries.

Mr. Dixon asserted that the ratification of the 26th amendment to the United States Constitution by 38 states, including Maryland, to give 18 year olds the voting franchise in state and local elections would seem to indicate that they are eligible for jury duty.

According to the Maryland Declaration of Policy on Juries, all citizens whose names are included on the state's list of registered voters are eligible for service on grand and petit juries of the state, he reminded.

"However," he explained, "a conflict occurs in the Maryland Annotated Code which declares the minimum age of eligibility for jury duty to be 21 years of age."

Mr. Dixon pointed out that this is "clearly contradictory, and some legislative step must be taken to correct this legal doublet'k."

He said that either the code must be amended to change the 21-year-age of eligibility to 18 years of age, or enabling legislation must be passed to implement the Maryland Declaration of Policy on Juries, or perhaps, both legislative steps must be initiated.

"I have asked the Attorney General to indicate the proper legislative direction which must be taken," Mr. Dixon stated.

Delegate Dixon has been the sponsor and mover of legislation in the Maryland General Assembly to allow 18 year-olds to serve on juries, regardless of whether or not they were given the right to vote in state and local elections.

"We live in turbulent and changing times and one of the signs of the time is the unmistakeable lack of respect and contempt the younger generation has for the system of justice, as administered by the court," he declared.

Mr. Dixon cited the exclusion of 18 year olds from jury duty and the consequent denial of their Democratic right to be tried by their peers as a basic cause of this feeling.

"I can think of no more effective way to reverse this unfortunate trend than by including 18 year olds in the process of justice through participation on the juries of this state," Mr. Dixon contended.

Nationals win All-Star game

The National Division of Forest Park Little League recently won the Junior Cub All-Star Game. The National consisted of players from the Mets, Yankees and Orioles.

Vaughn Greene pitched a six-hitter for the winning team, claimed a six-to-three victory.

The American Division scored three runs in the third inning and the Nationals tied them in the fourth.

The Nationals picked up two more runs in the fifth inning and their final run in the sixth.

Managers of the wining team were Samuel Billups, Joseph Press and Matthew Marcus. The American Division Club was maged by Warren Poluson and Myron Wickam.

IN TRAFFIC COURT

'You show wanton disregard for life'

"When you drink and drive, you show wanton disregard for life and property," Judge Mary Arabian told Miss Florence D. Johnson, 50, in Traffic Court Wednesday morning.

A public health nurse, Miss Johnson of the 1500 block Harlem Ave., was found innocent of driving while impaired.

She was given three months' probation, during which she may not drive and must attend driver education clinic. She was also fined $10 court costs.

Judge Arabian added, "There is no question of guilt; you were extremely intoxicated; a sight distance from death."

This came after testimony that a breathalizer test showed 35 per cent alcohol content.

Miss Johnson was charged with negligence following an accident when her car jumped a curb, injuring 4 pedestrians, then hit a building at Pennsylvania Ave. and Hoffman Sts. last May.

In her own defense, Miss Johnson told the court that she had drunk 1½ miniatures. She added that she was under doctor's care, and had had four consultations with a psychiatrist as a result of periods of depression.

She attributed this to an earlier accident which resulted in painful back and kidney injuries.

Her attorney showed the court a Provident Hospital pamphlet which featured a picture of Miss Johnson and listed her activities. She testified she was a member of the YWCA and many other community organizations.

Judge Arabian commented, "How dangerous it is! It could have been worse. I am impressed by the defendant. She should never be here for this kind of offense. I have great sympathy for her."

In another case heard Wednesday by Judge Arabian, 19-year-old John Gray who got his learner's permit on May 6, was convicted of six charges and ordered to pay fines totalling $300.

Fines included $50 and costs, reckless driving; 50 and costs, driving while condition impaired; $50 and costs, altering temporary tags; $25 and costs, driving without a license and without adult accompaniment; $25 and costs, driving without aggelitration; and $10 for failure to have his signature on his learner's permit.

He was also given a 30-day suspended sentence and one-year probation, during which he must make the payments through the Probation Department and attend the driver education clinic.

Mr. Gray, an employee of the Howard Uniform Company, told the court that he was returning from a party following his girl friend's graduation from Provident Hospital Nursing School.
