Homemaker can pick exact carpet color

The mix-and-match compromise of "almost right" colors is over.

New carpeting choices span the rainbow from creamy apricot to space blue and beach plum. One new collection of shag-plush carpets from Sears, Roebuck and Co. even has a palette of 50 basic color choices. Plus, if 50 options aren't enough, Sears will custom dye the polyester carpet to any color specified at no extra cost.

For the homemaker the new "pick your own color" opportunities spell the end of worry about whether favorite colors are currently readily available.

The collector of art, for example, might want to pick up an unusual blue tone from a seascape as the carpeting in a boy's room. With "match-mates" Sears can come up with an exact repeat.

The innovator with a passion for purple can find release for his color mania in carpeting dyed to match any shade of purple that suits his fancy. He might want to coordinate his carpeting to the hues from a popular art nouveau poster.

Or, he might just as easily decide to carpet an entire room — walls and all — in varying tones of his favorite color. In either case, today's carpet spectrum meets the challenge.

• • •

The wide color range also makes it possible for homemakers to come up with [illegible] carpeting color in homes where new carpeting must coordinate with existing floor-coverings, upholstery and draperies. Families that move to new homes, for example, can repeat the carpeting color that was the decorating catalyst in the home they just left.

Today, the homemaker has truly been liberated to "do her own thing" in selecting carpet colors.

Southeast group protests removal of elderly patients

The Health Task Force of SECO (Southeast Community Organization) held a special crisis meeting recently concerning the removal of the elderly and chronically ill from Baltimore City Hospitals' "D" Building.

According to SECO, the transaction which took place between City Hospitals and the Maryland State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene was done without an consultation with the community, physicians, nurses, and volunteer workers in the building.

SECO has called for the state to "immediately cease the ousting of the elderly and chronically ill from the Baltimore City Hospitals, and to hold a hearing at which the community and volunteer workers can be heard."

• • •

The project for the "D" building was conceived by the late Dr. Mason F. Lord. Dr. Lord felt that the elderly should be helped to care for themselves where it was possible and be able to leave productive lives in the community.

The building was also set up to house the senior citizens who could not take care of themselves.

SECO described the transaction between the city and state as "hasty and rather secret."

A spokesman for the hospital, Walter Williams, associate director, told the AFRO that the hospital has always had procedure where the "patients who become better" were to be placed in community nursing homes that were appropriate for them.

"The city has been running the building half empty," he stated.

As a result, Mr. Williams stated that the low population has brought about economic problems for the hospital.

• • •

"The state got in some problems with their hospitals with overcrowding and they were interested in alleviating this problem.

"In June the state said they were willing to take over the entire building," he said.

"It came so quickly that all the plans were not made" Mr. Williams added.

The associate director sees part of the apprehension of the patients as a result of the plans not being fully made. At that time, "the state wasn't in the position to say what they were going to do with the whole building," Mr. Williams stated.

• • •

But, he could reassure everyone that the state will maintain highly skilled nursing in the building and for those patients whom appropriate housing cannot be acquired, they will remain in the building.

He claims that "one reason the state is interested in the building is because it is in the city, whereas most of their facilities are not, and many of their patients are."

For those elderly and chronically ill presently coming in, he felt that the state could answer best what they were planning to do.

Mr. Williams is confident that the "state is sensitive and will try to serve" the community as City Hospitals did previously.

"The state is trying to develop programs that are best for the local community, the city and the state.

"A number of good things will be coming to the city with the state taking it over, beyond taking care of the elderly," Williams said.

Two programs that the state is planning for the new building is a drug abuse center and a psychiatric evaluation center where patients do not have to be removed from their immediate community for treatment.

"The state will do a number of things people in the city want done," he added.
