forcement against all. I think this is a very important thing as far as absentee landlord is concerned many of them try to keep their property up to date.

Those that do not, we should do everything we possibly can and make sure they are brought up to date, working with some property owners, people who are in the business, in the industry. I think we have got to do two things, we have got to have strict code enforcement as far as the property is concerned, but we also have to have tenants who assume some responsibility.

I see neighborhoods, and I have been in neighborhoods where residents are very concerned about the attitude of tenants toward the rest of the people in the neighborhood.

For instance, they have got to keep garbage lids on garbage cans, so it is a two-way street coding enforcement against the landlord and also cooperation with the tenants.

4. I don't think we are spending too much money on expressways. Now let me explain that by saying we certainly need a banlance transportation system for the city of Baltimore.

Everyone who studied the problem over a period of years, and I have done this, I made a study of transportation needs.

We need to complete our road system and we need a mass transit system. In looking at the mass transit system it's about eight year off. What we should do is speed up and complete our road system in the city of Baltimore.

A road system is not for the purpose of bringing people in and out of the city. It is also to move local traffic and to bring supplies and to move our own people into the job areas.

For instance, in the southeastern section of the city, the traffic is so difficult we were told years ago that unless we were able to do something as far as the road system was concerned many of the industries in that area that employed many of our people in the city might be forced to move.

I did not take that as an idle threat, and I still don't take it as an idle threat. It is imperative that we make up our mind where we are going with the expressway system and complete it.

I think the condemnation lines that we have are adequate. I don't think it's necessary to have additional condemnation lines and make additional properties outside the condemnation lines to complete the system.

I think just to let the system sit there and take no action on it certainly has not helped Baltimore, and one of the things we should do is complete it as soon as possible.

In addition we should keep pressure on the state government and make sure that the rapid transit system is not a dream. Even though it is a very costly thing we have got to make sure we have this balance system and a mass transit and closed road system.

VALLE, Francis J. — is a practicing attorney, a former assistant city solicitor, graduate of George Washington University Law School, a native Baltimorean, Lt. colonel in the Army Reserve and lives at 2800 Echedle Ave.

I'm sorry, but I am going to have to decline your invitation for an in-depth interview about my candidacy for mayor of Baltimore City. The reasons for my decision, I feel, are specifically spelled out in the enclosed press release of July 17, 1971.

No major candidate has ever expressed publicly and in writing, the political philosophy he adheres to in seeking the nomination for mayor of Balmore City.

However, for the present it is important that I make clear my strategy in the pursuit of getting elected.

In the quest for votes, and in this election in particular, I have placed my major opponents in the proper perspective, two are black and one is white. It became obvious in the election for the state's attorney of Baltimore City that the -sip pur ə3e jo auoo black community has be-

Woman, 23, man, 27, get drug terms

By BERNADINE MYLES

A young man and young woman received what appeared to be "stiff" sentences Wednesday, according to some courtroom observers, after they were convicted of narcotic violations.

Miss Barbara A. Ben, 23, of the 2400 block of Dorton Ct., and Timothy Jackson, 27, of the 1100 block of S. Sharp St., both first offenders of the narcotic laws, received maximum sentences of four years each.

Criminal Court Judge Gilbert Prendergast told the courtroom it was evident the couple had used the home of Miss Ben for the consumption, sale and distribution of drugs.

Miss Ben and Mr. Jackson were charged with possession of heroin, maintenance of a nuisance house, and possession of codine cough syrup, with intent to distribute illegally.

Testimony entered in the case by arresting Officer Elmer Dennis, indicated that 39 bottles of the codine cough syrup and a box containing 45 capsules with heroine residue were found in Miss Ben's home.

Judge Prendergast did not find Mr. Jackson guilty of possession of heroin because of a lack of evidence to prove that Mr. Jackson resided at Miss Ben's home.

Mr. Jackson, however was found guilty of the other remaining charges and Miss Ben was found guilty on all three counts.

Judge Prendergast stated he didn't consider the sentences to be harsh and noted there was a distinction between those who sell drugs illegally and those who simply use the drugs.

He stated: "One must consider the public's interest. What was done was done for profit. The drug traffic is destroying a whole generation and the entire community. Persons in the drug trade are not to be permitted in the society."

criminating.

The ethnic groups recognized the fact that there was strength in number and by electing one of their own kind, they became a political force to be reckoned with.

Therefore, one cannot hold it against the black community for supporting only the black candidates as was very evident in the last two elections, when the black community elected a congressman, two judges, a state's attorney and a clerk of the court, elected positions all previously hell by white officials.

Recognizing this, as a political fact of life, it almost becomes futile for any major white candidate in a Democratic primary to seek the support or attempt to solicit the vote of the black community, so long as the black community has an alternative in a black candidate, whom they believe to be an individual of substance.

The effort and time sent in attempting to attract votes would be better spent in areas where a white candidate knows he is likely to get votes.

It is obvious that I must direct my campaign only in the white community, and I say this with regret.
