ICBO has nine new fall courses

NEW YORK — Nine business management training courses will be offered by the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity of New York this fall.

These courses in business "basics" will begin October 4th. Registration and an orientation program will be held on September 28 and 29, 7:00 p.m. at the New York State Urban Center in Manhattan, 2090 Seventh Avenue, Auditorium, 11th floor.

The ICBO Program is offered free to minority group members who either own their own businesses, or would like to own a business, and to those employed as managers and supervisors in major corporations.

Volunteer instructors from the business community will lead the courses and seminars on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

These courses, which last from four to eight weeks, use a "core curriculum" approach. This enables the instructor to tailor his presentation to the individuals' needs which vary according to their experience in business.

Subjects for the courses are: Fundamentals of Business Management, Owners and Managers Seminar, Bookkeeping, Profit Planning, Advertising and Merchandising, Selling, Business Development, Principles of Corporate Management and Fashion Retailing.

The ICBO Business Management Training Program has several hundred men and women of varied business backgrounds. For additional information call the ICBO New York Office.

Sunday march will demonstrate against East-West X-pressway

To show Baltimoreans how the proposed East-West Expressway will destroy the city's last remaining natural preserve, the Volunteers Opposing Leakin Park Express, Inc. (VOLPE) and the Sierra Club will sponsor free public hikes through Leakin Park on Sunday, Sept. 12, and Saturday, Sept. 18.

Both hikes will start at 1 p.m. from the parking area adjacent to the Leakin Park tennis courts off Windsor Mill Rd. Mr. William Robinson, Sierra Club outings chairman, will head the Sept. 12 hike; Miss Mary Eberhart of the club's executive committee will lead the hike on Sept. 18.

The hikes will last approximately two and a half hours and will follow the park's existing nature trails, which are somewhat overgrown due to municipal neglect, but still passable. The path will cross the proposed highway route at a number of points, and will end back at the parking area.

The tennis courts, and parking lot are just off the park road leading back from the main entrance — two large stone pillars — on Windsor Mill Rd. opposite the Wakefield Apartments and just east of the intersection of Windsor Mill and Forest Park Ave.

Public transportation is available via the No. 15 bus marked "Lorraine," which makes a stop on Windsor Mill Rd. near the park entrance.

Old Taylor Presents: Ingenious Americans

Thanks to this Black man's invention, trains stopped traveling blind.

Granville T. Woods (1856-1910)

It's hard to believe that a man who was forced to leave school at the age of ten could have patented over thirty-five electrical and mechanical inventions. Yet Granville T. Woods did just that. The hard way.

Born in Columbus, Ohio, in 1856, Woods literally learned his skills on the job. He learned them in a machine shop. On the railroad. In a rolling mill. He took a mechanical engineering course at an Eastern college, worked as an engineer aboard a British steamer—even handled a steam locomotive on the D & S railroad. Even with this background and all-his engineering skill he was unable to get anywhere in these jobs.

But Granville T. Woods, a Black man, was a great electrician and an inventive genius. His talents could not go unnoticed.

In his early thirties, he became interested in thermal power and steam-driven engines. And, in 1889, he filed his first patent for an improved steam-boiler furnace.

This was just the beginning. Woods invented fifteen appliances for electric railways. The greatest of these was a device called the "Induction Telegraph" that enabled men to communicate by voice over telegraph wires. Woods' invention made it possible for trains to communicate with the station and with other trains so they knew exactly where they were at all times. This invention prevented countless accidents and collisions.

Woods, along with his brother Lyates, went on to organize the Woods Electrical Company in Cincinnati, Ohio. And in later years, he succeeded in selling many of his inventions to some of the country's largest corporations. American Bell Telephone Company bought many of his ideas, as did General Electric and the Westinghouse Air Brake Company.

Granville T. Woods attained great fame. He was a great electrician. A great inventor. A great man. He will be remembered as an ingenious American and a prolific inventor.

Someone wanted to know recently what was the longest running television program. The first snap answer was Ed Sullivan's show, which ended a 23-year run on CBS this past spring after a 1948 debut. Wrong. Research disclosed that the honor belongs to NBC's "Meet the Press," still alive, which started in 1947.

Walbrook's newness doesn't 'phase' first day students

By PAUL EVANS

Students entering the new Walbrook Senior High on the first day of school Tuesday morning tended to be unenthusiastic and unaffected by the newness of the building and the elaborateness of the facilities. The generations have changed.

The AFRO visited the school early to talk with the first student to enter the multi-million dollar facility. However, no one student was allowed the privilege of entering the doors firet.

Most of the studenis were directed to the Clifton Ave. entrance.

One student said, "It doesn't matter whether the building is new or not, teachers who understand and are relevant is the important thing.

But, Dorothy Shackleford, 15, 4000 block Queen Dr. said, "I feel good in coming here. I think I can get a good education here." Miss Shackleford intends to become a nurse and will concentrate in the sciences at Walbrook.

Ruth Ann Harvin, 15, 4000 block Pimlico Rd., when asked why she attended Walbrook simply said, "It's new and I like it."

The AFRO questioned six girls in one group. Four said they wanted to come to a new school. One said she didn't want to attend the same school her sister attended and another noted she expected "to meet different types of friends than I had known before."

Miss Patricia Quick, 17, 5000 block Denmore Ave., noted she felt she would enjoy Walbrook, because it was new and would not be overcrowded.

However, an assistant principal, Mrs. Ann Emergy, told the AFRO she expected the school to be overcrowded. "We are operating on overcrowded basis today," she said.

The principal of the school, Dr. Joel Carrington, felt that some students had not received assignment to their classes so the school could have been "somewhat off schedule this morning."

Students arriving at the facility between the hours of 8:45 and 9:00 in cars, buses, bicycles, and yes, even skates were dressed in a multi-farious assortment of styles from blue jeans to hot pants with tunic skirts.

It was a nappy day for most, but apparently the newness of the building and the luxuriousness of the facilities obviously hadn't "hit" the students yet. Or it could be that in this generatio it simply doesn't matter.

ON THE WAY to Edgewood Elementary School for the frist day are Mrs. Vivian Dotson and daughter Mong.

Baltimore school children enjoy Ft. Meade 6th Calvary tour

FORT MEADE — Sitting in the cockpit of a helicopter, checking out a Sheridan assault vehicle, or watching a mechanized bridge unfold in a matter of seconds can be an exciting experience for anyone.

School-age children are especially amazed when observing these things for the first time.

Last week, a group of about 35 school-age Baltimore children (ages 8-13) visited Fort Meade and were taken on a tour of the 1st Squadron, 6th Armored Cavalry area.

The project officer for the tour, First Lieutenant Chris Wiltmayer of the 6th Cavalry, accompanied the group as they toured the 6th Cav Museum and observed the display of various vehicles and aircraft at the 6th Cav Motor Pool and Tipton Army Airfield.

The trip to Fort Meade was sponsored by Baltimore's Community Action Agency.

Mrs. Peggy Peacock, an employee of the agency, and Myles Grosskopf, a VISTA volunteer, were in charge of the trip.

Mrs. Peacock stated that trips of this sort are part of the Community Action Agency's program to provide recreation and learning experience for school-age children during the summer months.

The children, who were also provided a noon meal at a 6th Cav mess hall during the visit, seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves.

The most exciting part of the trip for the children seemed to be wandering around and getting a close look at Army vehicles.

A seat in the cockpit of a helicopter seemed to be the most sought for position.

SAM HUDSON of Baltimore is the lucky kid shown sitting in the cockpit of a 6th Calvary Huey at Ft. Meade.

MISS JACKIE HOLLAND a summer aide, worked with the Aberdeen Proving Ground Office of Information and now plans to study home ecnomics at the University of Maryland. A resident of Havre de Grace, she likes quilting, a near-lost American tradition but will do experimental cooking for a food purveyor after college.

False alarm

(CHICAGO (UPI) — Thirty-nine firemen rused to the John Hancock Center, Chicago's tallest skyscraper and one of its most prestigious apartment buildings, last week after residents reported smoke billowing out of a 61st floor apartment.

Second Battalion Capt. Kenneth Cahill said when the men arrived they found a burning roast in a electric oven. No one was home. The fireman turned the oven off.

Federal welfare takeover eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Gov. Robert E. McNair of South Carolina said Friday the federal government should shoulder all welfare cost and state assume the bill for education so local governments can put their limited resources into other critical areas.

Only that way, McNair said, can the nation "stem the tide" of rural migration to the cities and attack the cause of the urban crisis.
