Narcotics agent for 12 yrs., Robinson rose to captain

Working on the Baltimore police force for 20 years has paid off for Captain Bishop Robinson, who was appointed captain of the Eastern District Police Station in Sept. 10.

He is one of two black captains on the Baltimore City Police Department.

Captain Dennis Mello is head of Western District.

To reach the position as captain on the force, Captain Robinson served as a foot patrolman for a year, as a narcotics agent for 12 years and a lieutenant in the educational training division.

CAPT. BISHOP ROBINSON

Captain Robinson says his primary function is law enforcement in the lower to middle class economic area and the protection of its 77,000 people.

His duties include management of the 217 persons, civilian and sworn and the material and equipment used to run a well-organized and efficient department.

Captain Robinsin is quite proud of his department. He stated "We are the number-one police station," as he pointed to a trophy that his department won for excellence in report-writing.

Captain Robinson has a B.S. in Law Enforcement from the University of Baltimore in 1970.

He has received training at the Southern Police Institute in Louisville, Ky. in 1969.

He attended the Northwestern Traffic Institute at Northwestern University in 1968 and the Marine Officers Educational Center in 1957 to prepare for his new position.

At Coppin State College, as a part-time instructor, he teaches a course in "Sociology of Crime and Delinquency." He says, "I have a big class of about 50 students. It must be a drawing card."

Captain Robinson has also lectured on Law Enforcement in the Baltimore-Washington including tre University of Maryland and American University.

The Robinsons live on Croydon Rd. His wife, Mrs. Trelma Robinson, teaches school in Prince Georges County. His son, Bishop Robinson, 21, is a junior at Morgan State College.

When asked about his future in the police department, Captain Robinson states, "I plan to retire in the next few years, while I am still young, and perhaps teach or continue to lecture at various colleges.

Wheelchair 5 bows in debut

The Baltimore, Maryland's only organized wheelchair basketball team, suffered its second straight loss at the hands of the Central Penn Wheelers, 51-27, in the season's home opener at Baltimore's Bill Hanna Center for Crippled Children and Adults on Greenspring Lane Saturday night.

High scorer for the game was Ray Rowe, Jr. His relatively low 18 points, but a lack of bench strength continued to plague the team's efforts to keep pace with their stronger opponent from Northstown, Pa. Ken Melly led the Wheelers with 18 points.

"Our starters have developed into a cohesive unit now," said Raven coach Moe Naugle, "but we still need help from additional players to give us the depth these other teams have.

"I do hope that any handicapped persons interested in playing will call us at 323-0500."

"Our next game is against the New Jersey Wheelers on October 30 in Hackensack, N.J., and this gives us some time to work in new players and strengthen our team," he concluded.

Rep. Mitchell disapproves of mortgage rule

Last week, Congressman Parren J. Mitchell wrote Housing and Urban Development Secretary George W. Romney in opposition to the new guidelines for mortgage lenders promulgated by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

These guidelines, said the Congressman, "would discriminate directly against participation in the housing market by black citizens and other ethnic minorities, women, the elderly, blue-collar laborers, and the low-income families generally, including the working and the no-working poor."

Specifically, Rep. Mitchell objected to provisions that would exclude overtime pay, bonuses, or part-time job income in figuring mortgages; computing the income of wives at 50 percent of their actual values; and disqualifying for a loan anyone with a past credit problem.

Rep. Mitchell also disliked the prohibiting of 30-year mortgages to those over 50 or 20-year mortgages to those over 60, regardless of equities down, credit or other factors.

The measure also includes the provision that would prohibit loans for homes with less than 1,000 square feet of floor space, effectively ruling out inner-city citizen housing, duplexes, condominiums, and planned unit developments.

Rep. Mitchell discredits the provision that would restrict loans to "well-maintained neighborhoods" with "pride of ownership," for this would prevent mortgage loan help needed to halt "blockbusting" and speculation.

Mrs. Moss was appointed to the Board in 1960, by the then Mayor J. Harold Grady. She was reappointed to a second six-year term by Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin.

On several occasions recently, she has indicated she will not seek reappointment when her term expires next year.

She told the AFRO: 'Under the board as constituted last year and under the present board, there is every reason to believe we will be able to continue the progressive policies we initiated two years ago.

'There has been much progress improved policies on student and teacher rights, reaffirmation of our open door policy, new policy on student suspensions, and general improvements designed to modernize our schools and involve the community.

I am glad to have had an opportunity to share in these meaningful changes but after the 12 years I intend to step down.'

Mrs. Moss is vice president-treasurer of the AFRO-AMERICAN Co.

She was the first mother with children in public schools named to the board. Two have completed school and the third is still enrolled.

The Rochester assembly at the Immaculate Conception Church comes as a followup of the denial of the Pope the first week in October to hear the above complaints of the U.S. black Catholics who went to Rome for that purpose.

When the six-member group returned from the Vatican "Utterly ignored" by the Holy Father, Miss Estelle Collins, the Baltimore representative, told the Afro, "We were hurt and embarrassed. We went to the very top because the problems of black Catholics remained unsolved and unheard by the American hierarchy, the U.S. bishops.

"We went to see the Pope because we have no means of redress in the United States. We went with the realization there was no longer any need to try to deal with the American heirarchy.

"Now that we have been ignored by the Pope, where else is there to go? What else is there to do except to take further steps, perhaps something drastic?"

Miss Collins inserted, "There are some 300 native bishops in Africa and some cardinals but not one in the United States."

Miss Collins, a lifelong Catholic and prominent national U.S. Catholic affairs, notes also that because the American Catholic Church does not relate to black persons nor black communities, membership is dropping and the church as to black members, it is suffering in many ways.

She states, "We have decided to meet to deal with the problems on our own since the negative response from thhe Vatican tells us so.

"We must gain a new sense of direction in dealing with racism in the so-called Christian church."

She said the meeting is being called by the Executive Board of the National Black Lay Caucus and representatives of the national 1 million Catholics are expected from all corners of America.

Referring to the concern the Vatican is showing in the matter of celibacy; marriage and the priesthood, Miss Collins said, "We can't get hung-up in that bag. We're interested in justice as far as black Catholics are concerned in the United States."

While in Rome trying to wend their way through numerous secretaries and agents of the Pope, the delegation of 7 U.S. black Catholics was interviewed by reporters from Ireland Australia, England, Hungary and many other European countries.

(The news of their unsuccessful trip received worldwide attention.

Miss Collins states that the group presented "a stack of documents and papers" to be considered by the Vatican.

Briefly, the three major needs expressed were

(1) the appointment of a black Ordinary in Washington since the District of Columbia is 75 per cent black and a black Ordinary would be acceptable.

The black Ordinary named would succeed Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle who resigned from the Washington diocese at the age of 75.

Miss Collins points out that black Catholics realize a black Ordinary can not be appointed in the South, the West nor the North because of racial segration, and Washington therefore is the most "logical" place.

(2) A feasability study commissioned shows the need of a Black Rite to be established, just as Lithuanian, Polish and other ethnic groups have their own rite.

(3) The establishment of a U.S. Black Training Center for the clergy just as other ethnic groups have."

The closest the black Catholics get to the Pope was a 90-minute audience with is assistant secretary of state, Archbishop Giovanni Benelli, Friday Oct. 8, after a 6-day journey around Rome talking with bishops.

Miss Collins said every morning they got up up early and went as late as 11 p.m., trying to get nearer the Holy Father.

In the end Benelli told them, she said, "to be patient" and careful" lest they become "racists."

by the Brotherhood of Railroad and Steamship Clerks, workers, once laid off, can "Bump" other employees with less senority. This continues until those with the least seniority are jobless.

Hackett claims that, because blacks are generally new to the B and O, they generally have insufficient senirity to weather the current rash of "bumpings."

Public Reations director for the B and O, Miss Virginia Tanner, said the her office has yet to receive any figures on the extent of the layoffs.

Householder said the whole process of "bumping" may take another weeks before the bottom of the line is reached.

Each department head, said Miss Tanner, was to "make as many cuts as it could."

Asked what would happen if the coal strie ended today, Householder responded, "It would take the company several weeks to reactivate its equipment."

If and when B and O's business revives Hackett feels that blacks who lost their jobs will return to lesser paying jobs.

When the company creates new jobs, workers are "absolutely called back by seniority," Householdr stated.

Hackett remarked, when the B and O reopens high paying jobs, in particular, white workers who survived the layoffs and the still grab those jobs for themselves.

failure to treat every citizen with the same dignity portunities.

"Just as improtant, " Adair said, "is the problem of getting people to do a little more to inspire members of their own families, people in their blocks and neighborhood to do a little more to help each other and this city, to be what they ought to be."

In the past, the 37-year-leader and educator, declared "we have had so-called watchdogs who supposely checke on the spending of our tax monies.

"It's time we got someone at City Hall to stick his neck out and tell it like it is when people are being cheated of their rights and manhood.

"Unless you get a watchdog in there to get rid of some of the bad attitudes and inspire the kind of dome more attitude I'm talking about, this city is on its way to becoming the welfare and crime capital of Maryland on a permanent basis."

Del. Kenneth Webster, D-8th, was among those to join the ranks of Adair backers over the weekend at a meeting called by the Rev. Marion Bascom, pastor of Douglas Memorial Community Church and chaired by the Rev. Vernon Dobson, president of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Baltimore.

The anti Caplan forces in the Fifth District who feel the conservative councilman is reing to be out of step with fre new more moderate City Council, are lining up behind Adair.

Adair supporters are saying all he needs for a victory is a big election day turnout.

Strikers' welfare issue

By VAL HYMES

Del. Walter R. Dean, Jr., (5th Balto.) charged that the strikers' welfare issue has been "blown out of proportion" and was not a legislative responsibility.

Dean made his remarks after his legislator council committee on Fiscal Program Analysis reversed itself on the issue and threw the ball back to Mrs. Rita Davidson, secretary of the Department of Employment and Social Services.

The committee had voted two wekes ago to make striking workers eligible for welfare by recommending a bill to eliminate regulation prohibiting them and others ineligible for unemployment compensation from receiving aid.

But Wednesday, the committee toyed with rewriting the regulations and finally decided 9-6 to leave the matter up to Mrs. Davidson, either to rewrite the rule or seek legislation.

The issue started when Mrs. Davidson announced she was considering such a plan.

"This has been an administrative decision all along," said Del. Dean. "This one is back on her now to decide this issue arbitrarily and she can't win either way."

Del Dean said the matter would involve few people because most strikers are men who would not qualify because of their property assets.

"But aid is needed for those low income workers whose union can not support them," Dean said.
