Henry Parker.

While they sat about in the clubroom, sipping cocktails from the ever-flowing bar which Mr. Parker manned, they made plans for an evening at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington. This will be a January project Mr. Parker was quite an eyeful, too, in gold trousers and matching shirt. In fact, the men stole the show from the girls along the fashion line. For example, Aaron Taylor's blue and white knit suit, colorful tie and boots made a striking ensemble. And Frank Phipps' black knit jumpsuit, summoned second looks.

Several members were absent, but with good reasons. Deelear and Jack Royster were welcoming their first grandchild, Kimberly Karen, the brand new daughter of the Ragin (Charlotte) Browns of Hampton, Va. Baby arrived at Sinai Hospital here. Peggy and Ed Cunningham had World Series guest, Frenzela Credle was ailing. But about for some fabulous soul food dining and dancing to soul music were Naomi Phipps, Laura Taylor, Milton Credle and Beulah and Linbergh Parker.

The Pierians and their guests were introduced to a new word at their October meeting, held in the Murphy Fine Arts Center, Morgan State College. The speaker was Tom Freudenheim, the new director of the Baltimore Museum of Art. "Museuming" was the word—not yet found in the dictionary but very much a part of Mr. Freudenheim's thinking about museums in our times.

To him a museum should be mode than a depository of treasures, pas t and present, and more than a palace where it is fashionable to be seen gading at labels.

There should be activity there, activity that engages the attention of all kinds of people seeking visual experiences." These experiences need not be limited to visits to museums," Mr. Ferudenheim said. "They may be derived from seingart exhibition in banks, radio stations, on the streets and from the many things that make up our environment."

Describing himself as a "visual" man, he spoke of the effect upon all people of the sights and sounds around them. Seeing and responding to, as described by Mr. Freudenheim, seem to be the essence of experience.

Mrs. Jerome Todd, the new president, presided. Mrs. G. James Fleming was chairman; Mrs. G. Luther Washington and Mrs. Todd were the hostesses.

It was a gala occasion indeed when officers and members of Senior Choir Number One of Christian Memorial Church entertained their husbands, wive and friends at their first tea.

The event was held in the Christian Memorial Church Community Center, which is one year old, today (Monday), which is also the birthday of the pastor, the Rev. Frank Brown.

The choir's color scheme of gold and black was quite apparent through the decorations. Gold chrysanthiums centerpiece high-gold and black streamers stretched from one end of the room to the other.

Each choir member was also a part of the color scheme. The ladies were attiled in shimmering gold metallic blouses and dark skirts. The men wore dark suits with ties and hanve-chiefs made of the same material as the ladies blouses.

After table blessings by the Rev. Mr. Brown, platters of salads and hors d'oeuvres were served along with laughter and conversation. Mrs. Kathryn Brown, president of the choir, cut the five-tier cake, each layer being a different color. Mrs. Celia Carr, Mrs. Barbara Murdock, and Mrs. Barbara Gainey served as hostesses for the
