OH HAPPY DAY! — Broad smiles were in order for the groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Dunbar Community School yesterday. Shown at left in the first photo is Mrs. Hattie Harrison, president of the Dunbar Community Council, as she turns the first shovel of dirt. In the background are School Commissioner, Mrs. Maree Farring, Mayor D'Alesandro and School Commissioner, Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss. Children at lower right are Karen Carter, 5, and Jasper Johnson, 4. In the second photo Dr. Roland N. Patterson, superintendent of schools, is helped by Norman Burell, Janet Lilly, and Andre Foole, as he breaks ground at the Furman L. Templeton Elementary School, Pennsylvania Ave. and Dolphin St. Looking on are Mayor D'Alesandro and Mrs. Furman L. Templeton. Earlier in the morning as shown in the third picture, City Solicitor George L. Russell Jr. is greeted at the door of the Sarah M. Roach Elementary School by Cornell Roseboro, left, 12-year-old sixth grader and an AFRO carrier who hopes to go to Gilman next year; and his classmate, George McGowan, 11. (AFRO STAFF PHOTOS BY I. Revival of East Baltimore expected with new Dunbar

Long considered the stepchild of the community, East Baltimore will come into its own with completion of the new $11 million Dunbar Community High School within the next 28 months.

The new facility, to be located south of the existing building, in the 500 block N. Caroline St., will house 1,600 students in what has been described as the most "radical of plans" conceived for a high school and community facility in the state or country.

The building and completion of the new community school could be termed the beginning of a "Black Renaissance" for East Baltimore.

Dunbar has long been the focal point of the lives of students and residents and the cultural and recreational as well as educational gathering place of hundreds of thousands of youths and their parents.

State Senator Clarence Blount (D,5th) has been moved by the Board of School Commissioners from his position as principal of Dunbar to that of co-ordinator of the New Dunbar Planning Council. He will plan the development of the school.

Mr. Blount states, "Dunbar has been the guiding spirit of East Baltimore. If we build this institution up to its pre-eminence of the 1930's East Baltimore will revitalize itself."

Senator Blount explained some of the history of the ideas which led to the building of the new institution.

He related that a "nucleus of people in the community looked at the downgraded Dunbar and decided to do something about it." He explained: "At one time it was one of the most overcrowded schools in the country. In the same space where we now have 1,400 students we had 4,000. We had to teach in the halls and in the auditorium."

Continuing, he noted, "As the new schools were built on the periphery (outskirts) of the city, students started going there and the enrollment dropped."

Mr. Blount felt that the attraction of Dunbar and other inner-city students to outer high schools was more psychological in that too many felt "newness and being white meant excellence."

"When that started to happen at Dunbar such people as Mrs. Hattie Harrison — who was then president of the PTA — now president of the Community, Mrs. Lucille Gorham and Councilman Robert Douglass (D,2nd) became instrumental in asking major renovations be made in the structure," he said.

Looking back, he recreated how those three people were only a few who brought pressure to bear on the Department of Education and the Board of School Commissioners.

Said Mr. Blount, "Some things were done. Most were not. You either froze or you baked. There was talk then of the new Lake Clifton. At one time the community felt that this could be the new Dunbar. However, the community decided to go for the new site adjacent to the present building.

Areas which brought the community so widely involved in the planning and final fruition of the new Dunbar included a concern for: Retention of students in the school until graduation, the lack of relevance in the curriculum, a low sense of achievement by the students, inadequate facilities, and outmoded methodology of instruction.

Inserted Mr. Blount, "The community decided they would get these changes made only if they got a completely new school."

He explained the role of School Commissioner James Griffin and Dennis Crosby, president of the Baltimore Teachers' Union who picketed the old Dunbar and "Twenty-fifth St."

The fight for a new Dunbar stretched through the tenures of three school superintendents: Dr. George B. Brain, Dr. Lawrence Pacquin and Dr. Thomas D. Sheldon.

To his credit Mayor D'Alesandro has been a friend of Dunbar. He has been most receptive over the years. Much of the credit for the ground-breaking goes to him and Sterling S. Keyes who then was still Associate Superintendent for Administration, Finance and Planning. Most important was the role of leadership by the black School Board members: Mrs. (Elizabeth Murphy) Moss and Mr. (Larry) Gibson," he continued.

After the demonstrations in front of "25th St." students began to take over. Active community involvement grew and grew.

A little over two years ago for more than two weeks the "Dunbar Charette" met night and day with a $30,000 grant from the Office of Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The charette said Blount, "Ran the gauntlet of all strata of society: youths, parents, militants, conservatives...there may have been one or two bigots. There were some stormy sessions considering the diversity of peoples we had there."

The new co-ordinator said the community was finally sure the school would be built when the Board of Estimates approved tremaously passed the order.

School Board unanimouslypassed the order.

The state supplied $10.1 million for the project under a retroactive order when all school construction came under its jurisdiction. The city, in effect, will pay $1.8 million.

Mrs. Janet L. Hoffman, Baltimore City Council Fiscal Advisor said in late September, "The city is disappointed that Dunbar has not received full funding from the state."

Under a plan enacted by the 1971 General Assembly the state put up $150 million for statewide school construction for the first 17 months, but local government submitted requests which far exceeded that amount.

In his new position, Mr. Blount will occupy an office in the old Dunbar in the Jefferson St. wing, along with a secretary.

Named to his position as principal was Raymond Carpenter, originally principal-designate of the Greenspring Junior High School.

Mr. Blount expects there to be no time limit in his job. "But at least until the end of this school year," he says. He will receive no increase in salary.

His job will be to solely plan the new building in terms of curriculum, staff development and management, from various city agencies who will work in the old building on the new school. The group will be broken down into three areas: Curriculum and Writing, Staff Development, and Management Systems. One general meeting of all 175 persons will take place in November. After that subcommittees will carry on work individually.

"What happens to the old building? Was the question asked Mr. Blount. He said, "Well, the old structure which was originally an elementary school No. 101, built around...somewhere around...well it is one of the oldest Negro schools in the city will be torn down. The other part, built in 1925 with additions in the 1930's will be made into a middle or junior high school and hopefully renovated."

Going on to speak of the new building he said, "It will be a classless school...one of the most radical in the state. It will be geared on the fact that children learn as individuals. It will be geared toward giving them personal attention — with the teacher as a help meet, counselor and guide.

Centering the structure in order of importance will be the Learning Resource Center. This center, similar to a library will have teachers and aides familiar with every subject taught in the school. There will be ample staff. Students will be on a "contract" basis, meaning they will have a responsibility to themselves to a complete their own work.

Mini-courses will be taught. These courses would be able to deal with any subject, the AFRO was told, as: the subject of long hair, personality development, personal hygiene and any other subject students wish to be taught on a short-term basis — usually two weeks.

Students will have optional time in which they will be able to pursue any direction they wish. However, there will remain the minimum courses required by the State Department of Education and the City School Board for graduation.

Students will be housed in four "stations" or feeding centers. There will be socialization centers, and specialization center for in-depth pursuit of laboratory sciences and large group instruction. Teachers will work with a battery of the latest teaching aids.

One of the main purposes of the entire school will be to "have each child want to remain in school.

Each student in the school will be exposed outside to work. Seniors will be able to pursue college-level work while completing their education. With 1,600 students, there will be about 60 to 70 teachers and administrators.

Other astounding features of the new complex will be the devoting of the entire ground level of the school to community services. Examples are: Social Strvices Agencies, Parole and Probation Services, Community-Police Relations Units, little City Halls, Day-Care Centers and Department of Health offices — all run by trained personnel from city government.

The new Dunbar will be open for the people of East Baltimore and the community in general from 8:30 in the morning until 10:30 in the evening.

The present Dunbar is a Model Cities Pilot School and is already deeply involved in community affairs.

Miss Patricia Lorraine Hayes, daughter of Juvenile Court Masted1, Theodore and Mrs. Hayes, is to be crowned queen of Coppin State College at formal ceremonies preceding a coronation ball in the gymnasium on Nov. 5 at 8 p.m.

An honor senior elementary education major, Miss Hayes is member of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, the student executive board and formerly "Miss Junior," the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity ("Sweetheart" and Sigma "Sweetie."

Fondly known as "Pat" by the many students who elected her, Miss Hayes, 36-24-36, rates education as No. 1 in life and after June, 1972 graduation, expects to become an elementary teacher.

Engraved invitations for the coronation ball indicate "cifer 5 attire" for an affair complete with flowers in the blue and gold school colors.

The enthusiasm yesterday of the crowd, numbering more than 1,000, at the ground-breaking ceremonies on the site south of the present building is indicative of the kind of spirit which conceived the new Dunbar and the kind of spirt which will guide to constructon.

The on-looker cried, "East Baltimore is really going to be something now."

Participating in the ground-breaking were a number of community leaders, educators and politicians.

Assisting Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III in "turning the dirt" were: State Senator Clarence Blount (D,5th), State Senator Robert Dalton (D,2nd), Del John Douglass (D,2nd), Councilman Robert Douglass (D,2nd), William D. Schaefer, president of the City Council, Raymond Carpenter, principal of Dunbar, Mrs. Hattie Harrison, president of the Dunbar Community Council and Dr. Roland N. Patterson, superintendent of Public Instruction.

Youngsters from School No. 102 assisting were Karen Carter, 5, and Jasper Johnson, 4, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Johnson both teach in the school system. Mrs. John-

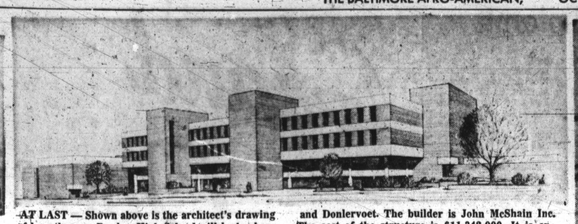
NEW DUNBAR HEAD — Raymond Carpenter, formerly principal of Greenspring Junior High School, has been named by the Board of School Commissioners to the principalship of Dunbar High School. Mr. Carpenter was assistant principal at Dunbar before being named to the school's top position.



AT LAST — Shown above is the architect's drawing of how the new Dunbar High School will look when completed. Ground-breaking took place yesterday (Thursday). The architect is Cochran, Stephenson and Donlervoet. The builder is John McShain Inc. The cost of the structure is $11,342,000. It is expected to house 1600 students and service at least 30,000 residents in the East Baltimore area.

NEW POSITION—Clarence L. Blount, principal of Dunbar High School was named last week by the Board of School Commissioners as the Coordinator of the new Dunbar Community School which had ground - breaking ceremonies yesterday (Thursday).

Public TV fans up by 6 million

MIAMI BEACH — Six million additional Americans became regular weekly viewers of public television in the past year, according to a national survey whose results were released last weekend.

The survey, conducted by Louis Harris and Associates, indicated that viewership increased from 33 million weekly viewers in October 1970 to 39 million this month.

The survey entailed interviews with a national sampling of more than 2,-

How a city church fulfills its mission

By this weekend, an old, 3-story, wooden frame house on the corner of Dewmore and Spaulding Aves. will be completely demolished as contracted by the Arlington Presbyterian Church at 3515 W. Belvedere Ave.

"The house," explained the Rev. Edgar Reddick, "has been an eyesore to the community. It has been used for dope and for gambling."

The Rev. Mr. Reddick said the church decided to buy the property, which is adjacent to its community center, and construct a play yard in the place of the house.

The Rev. Alan Whitelock, also a minister at Arlington Presbyterian, told the AFRO the property costs $5,000, the demolition and clearing of the 75' by 150' lot cost $4,500, and blacktopping the lot will cost $2,000.

Principal Charles E. Brown of Pimlico Junior High informed the Rev. Mr. Reddick that he will suggest to the School Board that the School Board provide 6 basketball backboards.

The finished playground is projected to have one standard size and two half basketball courts, a tennis court, a hopscotch pattern and a horseshoe court.

The church is asking the city to provide some shrubbery to "distill an atmosphere of not really being in the city," the Rev. Mr. Reddick comments.

The church's community center contains a full gym, a full size pool and a game-room and is open free to the community.

The playground, said the Rev. Mr. Reddick, will complement the center's indoor facilities by offering facilities for outdoor activities.

The Arlington Presbyterian Church is an interracial church that was established in 1905 and presently has a congregation numbering 650.

The church has been at the 3215 W. Belvedere Ave. sanctuary since the church's inception.

son teaches at School No. 102.

The Dunbar Band was out in good style although the weather was foggy.

The new school received $1 million under the Neighborhood Facilities Grant Program for the neighborhood day care and social service center section of the school.

Also participating in ground-breaking functions was Dunbar 10th grader Miss Clarice Scott, 15, 1500 block Ashland Ave.

Other dedications and ground-breakings, Tuesday morning included the $302,000 "mini-school" No. 73 at 3434 Old Frederick Rd., named for its late principal, Mrs. Sarah M. Roach.

Present for the ceremony were more than 20 relatives of Mrs. Roach, including her husband, Calvin Roach, retired longtime teacher and and their son, Calvin Jr., an account executive.

Calvin Quille, president of the PTA, which suggested the memorial to Mrs. Roach recalled she was a "gorgeous, beautiful woman. There are few, if any, like her in the school system today. You can count them on your finger."

He urged students, "treat this building as you treat your home."

Students participating were Kelvin Battle and Ronald Caldwell, who accepted the school on behalf of the students. Mrs. Helen C. Thomas, acting principal, presided.

At the dedication of Southwestern Junior-Senior High School, which cost $1,719,000, principal John Feathers presided.

The inter-racial student body applauded the Mayor when he told them he hoped their school would soon join other high schools in the city in their school in basketball etc.

Accepting the school for the parents to know we have such excellent facilities and teachers and resources."

Miss Susan Bradley, 10th grader, accepting for the students beamed a "thank you" and said "I know that all students will benefit." Representing the faculty, Mrs. Yvonne Curbeam said, "The school will provide a wide range of educational opportunities. Students will be afforded a wide range of activity.

Next at the ground-breaking for the Furman L. Templeton Elementary School, named for the late head of the Baltimore Urban League, Mr. D'Alesandro noted, "If Dr. Templeton were here today he would be in his glory."

The school to built will cost $3,143,000. Its location will be Pennsylvania Ave. and dolphin St. The school will be designed for 750 students and will utilize 31 classrooms.

Mrs. Templeton said, "I am very, very happy for this occasion." Present were Councilman Robert Marshall (D,4th), Del Loval Mandolph (D,4th) and Mrs. Lena Boone.

Mrs. Dorothy F. Bennett, principal of nearby school No. 118 presided. Many o the students now attending No. 118 will attend the new Templeton School.

Participating students were Janet Lilly and Norman Burrell. Janet said, "Each shovel of dirt will bring us nearer to the new school which we have all so earerly looked forward to."

Last on the tour was the dedication of the Commodore John Rogers Elementary School, No. 27, at Favette and Chester Sts.

It accomodates 880 students in 30 classrooms. One of the striking features of the building is a bridge between two parts and the park-like atmosphere of the structure. Total cost for the structure wad $3,430,000.

Principal is Harold L. Katz. Accepting the school for the parents was Mrs. Palestine Miller, president of the pta.

Also present were: Dr. Rebecca Carroll, acting assistant superintendent ofr Elementary Education. Mrs. Lillian Dantley, area director for the school, and Mrs. Vondalee Clark, supervisor for the school. Mrs. Idell Pugh is specialist in Education.

School Board members on the tour were Mrs. Marie Farring and Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, P.E.
